Citizens' Group to Plan New Hicksville Park

As was highly predictable, public opinion ran in favor of the establishment of Hicksville's first community park on Lee Avenue between Ninth Street and North Drive at a public hearing on the proposal at Town Hall on Tuesday.

Present to speak in favor were Kenneth S. Barnes, of the Hicksville Public Library, and president of the Hicksville Chamber of Commerce, who said the Chamber's formal approval would be forthcoming in short order. Also speaking in favor was William Thomas, who deplored the lack of park facilities in Hicksville, with the comment that the Hicksville Olympics had no place this year to hold its games.

Emil Immesberger, a nearby resident and a familiar face at Town Hall as president of SPOT (Society to Preserve Our Town), offered to serve in the development of the park facility. Mr. Immesberger and his group have been active in opposing apartment facilities on the 6.92 acre parcel, now the site of Giese Florists.

In response to queries as to the design of the park, Supervisor John Burke and Councilman Warrent Doolittle, of Hicksville, said that a task force of local citizens would be appointed to decide just what the park would contain.

After the meeting, Richard Darmody, of Hicksville, who missed the brief public hearing, stepped forward to offer his services on the task force.

Bond Issue

At the meeting of August 14th, the Town Board approved a resolution to amend the town's capital budget to include the park project and set last Tuesday as the hearing date on the issuance of $660,000, in bonds.

One letter was received in opposition to the park from Fred J. Grause. Verbal approval of the establishment of the community park for the 53,000 residents of Hicksville was received from Sheila Noeth, publisher of the Mis-Island Herald, transmitted by Councilman Doolittle.

Other Business

In other business, the Town Board approved the petition of Bruce & Keith Mellish for a large beverage establishment on Washington Avenue in Plainview. The decision on the Mellish petition had been tabled on August 14th. The public hearing on it was held on March 13, 1973.

Campaign Issues, Candidates Fill Supervisors' Meeting

By JANET GOSNELL

The campaign issues and the candidates continued to gather momentum at the Nassau County Board of Supervisors' meeting, with two candidates for major offices stepping forward to speak. The question of Roosevelt and its hassles with the Nassau County Economic Opportunity Commission also continued as Mrs. Vivian Sturdivant, a Roosevelt resident who has appeared frequently at the Supervisors' meeting, criticized Roosevelt poverty staffers Cecil Johnson, Emily Moore and Fred Heath, countering the comments made at the last Supervisors' meeting on August 14th.

Candidates who spoke were Norman Blankman, of Sands Point, an independent candidate for County Executive, and Hannah Komanoff, a sixteen-year veteran of the Long Beach School Board, running against Julian Jawitz for Mayor of Long Beach. Also present in the room were two other candidates for County Executive, William Deeley, Democrat, and Patrick L. McClusky, Conservative. Neither spoke to Caso because he left the room at 11:57 A.M., a time pin - pointed later by Mr. McClusky.

Mr. Blankman's concern was the lack of profitability of the Nassau Coliseum. It had been his position that the Coliseum should be contracted out to professionals who would guarantee the county an income from it. He spoke at length about a contract which was never finalized between the county and LR Productions, a decision made in 1970. He said LR Productions guaranteed the county a profit of $500,000. He blamed County Executive Caso for the contract's never having been signed.

The County Executive, present to hear Mr. Blankman, explained at length that the decision on the contract took place during the previous administration, his having taken office officially in 1971. Mr. Deeley later cornered newsmen to say that Mr. Caso's position as Presiding Supervisor of the Town of Hempstead in 1970 with the most powerful vote on the Board of Supervisors precluded a decision on the contract from ever having come before the board.

Long Beach Woes
Hannah Komanoff spoke about the tight situation of Long Beach taxpayers and the Long Beach school district due to an overwhelming number of welfare cases being assigned to the district. She said that although Long Beach had only 2 per cent of the County's population, it has eleven per cent of its welfare cases. In the school district, the ADS (Aid to Dependent Children) youngsters amount to 24 per cent of the school population, she said.

Mrs. Komanoff handled herself well in the face of Julian Jawitz' claim that her appearance at the Supervisors' meeting was a campaign ploy. He pointed out that his one-and-a-half year old administration was doing all it could to correct 51 years of Democratic leadership in Long Beach, which he felt had allowed profiteering landlords to demand excessive rents from welfare some mumbled exhortations from the Democratic candidate Bill Deeley, presumably to keep cool.

Her primary opposition came from Vivian Sturdivant, of Roosevelt, chairman of the Welfare Rights Committee, who added Mrs. Komanoff to her topics for the day, headlining poverty problems in the Roosevelt area. She said she was in favor of the re-election of directors of the Roosevelt poverty staff, as requested by John Kearse of the Nassau County Economic Opportunity Commission this spring, and as refused by Cecil Johnson, of Roosevelt and his colleagues.

In other business, the Supervisors approved a change in the firearms permit law, raising the license fee from $3. for one year to $20. for two years. Reasons given highlighted the deep research required into applicants for firearms licenses which raised the cost of processing applications. The Supervisors also voted to pay one-third of the tuition of Nassau County residents attending City University of New York, formalizing a previous practice.

LOCAL YOUNGSTERS enjoy meeting the Lone Ranger's horse "Silver" and cowboy Stoney Burke on the mall at the Mid-Island Shopping Plaza in Hicksville last week. Stoney will be bringing "Silver" and his full line rodeo to the Nassau Coliseum on September 14, 15 & 16. Talking with Stoney are (left to right) Ricky Schneider, 3, Rodd Schneider, 6, Alyssa Root, 5, and Lance Root, 7, all from Plainview. (Photo by Robert Berkowitz)

Dear Friends:

PEOPLE MAY NOT REALIZE IT, but the Giese property on Lee Avenue in Hicksville which will eventually become a park, is still private property. Mr. Giese, who owns this property, is still conducting his florist business there, and, in all probability will be doing so for one or two years more. We mention this because a great deal of vandalism is presently being inflicted upon this property. While repairing broken glass panes recently, one of Mr. Giese's employees was injured, to the extent he has limited use of the fingers of one hand. How much better if each one of us, in his own small way, would do something to make our world better, rather than vandalizing it. We know it is only a small percentage of thoughtless people who do these things, but this does not make it less deplorable. Someday we hope, a beautiful park will be ours to enjoy. In the meantime and I direct this to those responsible for this vandalism, remember, that if you want your rights respected, it behooves you to respect the rights of others. Don't just talk about...do it! You'll be pleasantly surprised when you become part of the solution...not part of the problem.

THE HICKSVILLE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION held a most successful book sale last week...details in next week's HERALD.

THAT'S ALL for now, enjoy the Labor Day weekend, and don't forget the old adage, "In a democracy the buck can never be passed without adverse effects."

Summer '73 At The Hicksville Library's Children Room

The Hicksville Library has been keeping its young patrons busy with special Summer Children's Room programs.

Ninety-five children, who had read six books or more in the Summer Haunted House Reading Program, spent a fun-filled day visiting the South Street Seaport Museum, and touring the Statue of Liberty. After the all-day excursion, the travelers were joined by the other participants in the reading program for a party at the Library.

There were large audiences for two well-performed plays presented by the Teen Repertory Theatre of the Oyster Bay Recreation Dept. Children enjoyed viewing "Hans Christian Andersen" on July 18, and "So Sorry Circus" on Aug. 7. They were also entertained by two delightful puppet shows, "Big Apple" and "Bewitched", performed by Nassau County's Dept. of Recreation during August.

Each Wednesday morning, children from ages 5 through 8 were transported to a fantasy world through films and stories told by the children's librarians.

Older children watched "Monday Movies" on a variety of subjects from "Our Gang comedies to colorful Oriental folktales.

The Library was also the scene of art classes and crafts workshops, where many beautiful paintings and other projects were completed.
