By FRED J. NOETH. AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK, which opens Sunday November 7 and continues until Saturday, November 13, is one of the most important weeks of the year. The following message on American Education Week is worth reading. It is the contribution of a reader. THRIVING BUSINESS makes the owner happy. Merchants like to be on the jump every minute; bankers like to be at the counter serving their customers more anything else; a service station owner, a garageman or proprietor of a restaurant, each happiest when he is on the jump. A rush business is fine, however one like a let up now and then. The let up gives one an opportunity to chin with his customer, be it about the car, the new cars or the health of the family. Chinning is a transaction more personal. Business was apparently a little slow one day this week if I chanced in a business place in a neighboring community. The individual on the other side of the counter passed time of day and began to chat. He called my attention to a poster that one could hardly avoid seeing when entering the place. The poster was entitled American Education Week with slogan "Visit Your Schools, November 7-13, 1937." The gentleman proceeded to inform me in detail concerning the importance of American Education Week. From his enthusiasm he apparently believed it to be one of the outstanding weeks of the year. He is undoubtedly right. "What would these United States of America be were it not for its free schools?" he questioned. He went on to list to which, all regardless of race, color, or creed, are entitled to, no cost to aid one in securing a firm foundation for good citizenship. "One could hardly believe any person unless he be a professional educator could know so much about schools and American Education Week as this individual. My good friend informed me that the general theme for American Education Week for 1937 is "Education and Our National Future" with appropriate daily topics for the entire week." Really, this man should be a door to door salesman. He sold me much concerning our schools.

He urged me to read the announcement concerning Education Week in my local paper.

The Junior College Curriculum

Being very much interested in the question of Vocational Training and the Junior College I am enclosing "The Junior College Curriculum" which I believe would be very interesting to you readers.

A GAIN AND AGAIN a leading newspaper of this county has described the work of the Citizens' Committee for a County College as the misguided efforts of dreamers, and has gone on record as favoring a vocational high school instead of the junior college proposed by the committee.

What is vocational education? Vocateurs define vocational education as "instruction and training which attempts to give the student the knowledge and skill necessary to enter a vocation, and to work successfully in such vocation."

In conjunction with the basic cultural courses for both groups. Many of our existing high schools in Nassau county have already the facilities for giving instruction in the trades of group 1 such as carpentry, linotype operation and printing, fundamental electric work, etc.

But, the reader asks, what about the second, much larger, group of vocations? They include such activities as aviation, law, medicine, mechanical drawing, advertising and commercial arts, dental mechanics, building and contracting work, journalism, photography, bookkeeping and accounting, law clerking, technical work, engineering, industrial and medical laboratories, and a host of others.

LOW DOWN From Hickory Grove

BEN SOME kind of other of an agitator, sure your time. And the only way to live and put in your time is to live and put in your time.

And they will tell you, down in that country, that the season for the skunks betn' mad is the year around.

The Junior College Curriculum

The Citizens' Committee for a County College, they would have taken a different attitude, I am sure.

The functions of a public junior college are really fourfold: To prepare a fairly small number of students who cannot afford to go to a pay college for entrance into the junior year of some other academic institution, to give a larger group the finishing touches of a general cultural education, to give another fairly large group the necessary vocational education in accordance with the market.

When price then the central vocational high school, which turns out to be a manual training school in disguise? Its plant and equipment would be so expensive that it would be a luxury, unless students are trained each year by the thousands.

It would be just as serious an error to divert the manual training schools and to divert the manual training schools and to divert the manual training schools.

That a junior college really does serve these needs was clearly demonstrated and demonstrated the other day at Bethpage State Park at the conference of the Citizens' Committee.

But, the reader asks, what about the second, much larger, group of vocations? They include such activities as aviation, law, medicine, mechanical drawing, advertising and commercial arts, dental mechanics, building and contracting work, journalism, photography, bookkeeping and accounting, law clerking, technical work, engineering, industrial and medical laboratories, and a host of others.

Governor Sees Opportunity For Farm Youths; Speaks at Dedication of Farmingdale School

The Farm Bureau is interested in the school because it was in the birth of it, so to speak.

The Suffolk County Farm and Home Bureau association, also lauded the school's location.

From 1921 to 1924, it was unfeeling, but the pressure of space then became too great that it was put into use as a dining hall and student dormitory.

In 1935, Governor Lehman and Budget Director Abram L. Weber recommended to the Legislature an appropriation of $135,000 for the construction of a dormitory and dining hall.

It was found, however, that the sum of $135,000.00 was not sufficient to build a structure embodying the needed factory and services.

He pointed out that contracts for the building were drawn when labor and building material prices were about to turn upward.

State Senator George L. Thompson of Kings Park, called "the father of the Institute" since he introduced the bill for its establishment which passed in 1912, could not attend because of the death of his sister.

Assemblyman Abbot L. Moffat, chairman of the Ways and Means committee of the state Assembly, said "I am happy to see the Institute again to pay tribute to the school, the men and women who made it possible and particularly the great leader, Mr. Knapp."

Mr. Moffat cited the trends of Paicem and Gidder rule in other nations, declaring "this conception of a democracy which can be defined by the words 'of' and 'by' Democracy demands we have a government of and by the people as well as for the people."

Appreciation to the contractors who built the state building was voiced by State Commissioner of Education William F. Haugard who designed the new structure.

The Institute is fortunate in having a leader like Mr. Knapp, declared Harvey McComsey, president of the Nassau County Farm and Home Bureau association.

what I have said on other occasions, that I have great confidence in the future of agriculture in the Empire State.

"The outlook for agriculture as a career is better than at any time in recent years, both socially and economically. The role which scientific study has played in social progress is nowhere more forcefully presented than in the field of agriculture.

"I would like to encourage more of our youth to take advantage of the agricultural training now available. It has always seemed to me that many of our young people have been misled by the glamour and hope of high wages and quick returns in the industrial and commercial callings.

Leadership Unequaled A. K. Getman, representing Education of New York state, said he has visited every agricultural school in America as well as seven foreign countries "and nowhere have I found an institution as fine as this. My congratulations to Director Knapp and his staff. The title of leadership at this Institute is unequalled in the nation."

He Aggie Hill Billies and the State Glee club entertained during the afternoon program. Also on the speakers platform were Dr. Mabel Weed of Garden City, William Mennik of Jamaica and Miss Hilja, Ward of New York, members of the board of visitors of the Institute.

"At an occasion like this, declared Governor Lehman in his address, we may renew our faith in the unique function of education in a democracy.

Warner Oland At Playhouse Screen Starting Today

Warner Oland comes to the Hickville Playhouse today in the shape of Charlie Chan for a two day run. This time he goes into action in his latest "Charlie Chan on Broadway."

"Variety Show" opens Sunday for three days at the Playhouse and is hailed by everyone as the greatest fun-musical of the year. With a cast of stars second to none, such as Dick Powell, Fred Waring and his Pennsylvania, Ted Healy, Walter Catlett and hundreds of others, there is a plot of reason for its being one of the top notchers of the year.

PRINCIPALS in the feature attraction at the Huntington which opens Sunday. The film, "Stage Door," will stay in the day run, ending Wednesday night.

'Stage Door' Opens Week of Shows At the Huntington

Summing up in its strikingly realistic story the lives and careers of all stage-struck girls everywhere, "Stage Door" brings Katherine Hepburn and Ginger Rogers together for the first time, with Adolphe Menjou co-starred at the head of a brilliant cast.

The governor said the building is one of the foremost of its type in the state. He found deeper significance in the occasion, he added, in considering that New York is one of the greatest agricultural States of the Union.

From every walk of life they come; rich and poor, sympathetic and selfish, all motivated by one common dream of stage success. Their heart-throbs and heart-breakers are woven with the shimmering thematic patterns of the story.

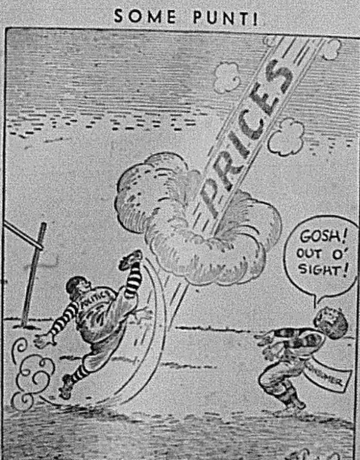

'Big City' Opens Co-Stars Tracy, Rainer at Loew's

More than ordinary originality has gone into the making of the picture, "Big City," which comes to Loew's Valencia for a full week's engagement, yesterday co-starring Luise Rainer and Spencer Tracy.

Modern American Salad

They say it is not what you eat but what you digest that counts. This is one of the many reasons for salads. Another reason is the fact that salads that are made available year-round are made available year-round. Made available by the low price and also fine recipes. A salad started out originally to be a simple and garnished with a dressing. Today, however, the offering of salads has stretched to include meats and vegetables as well, and has become a regular member of the dinner courses, being served in plain and simple, or sometimes elaborate and lovely to look at. Here is a typical American salad with those certain touches that make a salad a joy to see as well as eat.
To make this American salad use a thick slice of peeled ripe tomato with the core removed on a bed of lettuce. Push the stem of cassettes of cauliflower into the hole of the tomato and around this green string beans that have been marinated in French dressing. Pipe a little cream cheese around the edge of the tomato to hold the beans in place. This salad is very quickly prepared and has an attractive array of colors, besides being highly nutritious and quickly digested.
