MRS, HARKNETT and some members of her fourth grade class from the Lee Avenue school in Hicksville view some of the 3,000 butterflies and moths in Mr. Gregory's museum. The museum also contains over 800 rock and mineral specimens.

Local Collector Has Museum Of Rocks, Minerals AtHome

Anne Terry White in her book All About Our Changing Rocks has referred to rocks as the commonest thing in the world and the most valuable." One need only visit Gardiner Gregory's rock and mineral museum in his Hicksville home to attest the truth of the above statement. I am not alone in my enthusiasm about this collection for it is visited daily by teachers, parents, and children from Hicksville and neighboring Long Island achool districts.

The collection consists of innumerable rocks gathered from various areas of the United States. These are carefully titled and catalogued to render as much information as possible to inquiring minds. Many are displayed in specially designed cases which are fluorescently lighted to bring out the beauty of these most common of our natural treasures.

Viewing the many specimens and listening to comments by other challenged visitors, one realizes that there is more value derived from rocks than their use to us as precious stones and minerals. One reflects upon man's dependence upon rocks. Are not man, animals, plants, and all nature products of the soil; the soil which is really decayed, crushed rock?

the soil which is really decayed, crushed rock? The Gregory Museum, as it is commonly known to Hicksville School children and teachers, also houses an invaluable collection of butterfiles and moths. These are fittingly mounted and attingly mounted and attractively arranged in specimen family groups. One cannot find the words to describe the beauty and completeness of this collection. Mr. Gregory's lecture, entour of the collection, is most informative, interesting, and colorful. Due to the fact that this is a personal andeavor, he is able to provide background en richment information which has a carry-over into the classroom. Because of his personal experimentation in this area which continues throughout the school year. Mr. Gregory is able to provide many of the District #i7 school groups with moths, butterflies, coccons, etc. for observation in the classroom. His color sildes in this area are most helpful as well.

most helpful as well. Recently when I visited the museum, a group of third graders from a neighboring town were already there when I arrived. As I was introduced to the group one enthusiastic little boy remarked," Boy, aren't you lucky to be the one from Hickeville?' How true! We all are lucky to have this opportunity to gain first hand information about rocks, minerals, moths, and butterfiles and to visit this extraordinary exhibit which is an educational asset to our community. JOAN LENSKY, caugnter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lensky of 22 Amherst Lane, Hicksville has been awarded a full tuition scholarship of $1500 to Skidmore College. Joan is also the recipient of a Regents Scholarship and a Scholar Incentive award.

While in Hicksville Joan has been active in the Student Council, secretary of the National Honor Society and editor of the Year Book

New Method Of Teaching Basic Arithmetic Here

In line with newer methods in mathematics in Hicksville Schools, Cuisenaire Rods have been in use at East Street School for the past two years. The program has been used in grades one and two. Children participating in it have done so in conjunction with their usual traditional methods in arithmetic.

Cuisenaire Rods, while rclatively new in the United States are well known and highly thought of in Great Britain and in Belglum where they originated. The rods were invented by George Cuisenaire of Thuin, Belgium. Their populairty is increasing among American educators with whom they are fast becoming one of the teacher's most valuable tools. Educators have found the rods invaluable from kinder garten 'through high school. However, they are particularly helpful in the early school years where they make possible a rather different curriculum than we have theretofore thought possible for young children. This more flexible study of numbers from one to ten, for example, leads easily to a study of multipileation, division, and fraction, division, and fraction for general number relationships the reby a simplifying the task of learning specific combinations which, in turn, assures more rapid future progress. The rods are definitely helpful in the early school years where they assist a child in gaining a clear insight into number families and relationships. Early knowledge of these essential combinations prepare for more rapid arithmetical progress in the elementary school.

Because of the flexibility of the Cuisenaire method, a child gains a variety of experiences in learning the same subject material taught traditionally in the primary grades. Used in the very carly years, they provide an area of discoverya thrill, and excitement which is attune to the life the child has known from babyhood. A. substantiali

Thinking It Over

by Robert L Morgan

Freedom of Speech often takes odd turns the same as other freedoms guaranteed under amondments to the Constitution.

The Neo-Nazis in New York City are shouting for freedom of speech, the publishers of a book in the Farmingdale Library want Freedom of the Press and numerous other groups are continually complaining for the exercise of freedoms.

Press and numerous other groups are continually complaining for the exercise of freedoms. There is one point overlooked in all of this clamor. Freedom carries responsibilities. But for too long now there has been a loophole in the law that allows irresponsible freedom. Presently there is no such thing as group libel or slander. You legally can get away with calling the Jews anything you want, or you can slander the Catholic Church and even make speeches-claim-ing that the Pope eats a haby for breakfast, and nothing will happen. If anyone tries to interfere with your meeting or speech or writing, you can yell for freedom of speech or press or assembly... But should you be entitled to it if you are putting forth lies? We think not. Legislation must tread carefully in touching any of the freedoms, but it could draft a law that would compel the perpetrators of some of the biggest falsehoods to show proof or give up abusing our freedoms. It should be that members of a group could press for this needed legal action under slander or libel laws that would cover groups. As Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes once said to a man swinging an umbrella on the steps of the supreme Ccurt, "Your freedom ends where my nose begins."

Baths No Longer Taboo For Surgery Patients

By C!A. Dean, M.D.

MEDITORIAL: I am sure many of you have under-gone surgery and remember the prolonged post-operative period of "kceping the would dry." No doubt you remember as well the first time you were able to shower or bathe after the enforced dryness. Even though you probably received a bed bath, somehow this never compares with the good do-it-yourself type. For many years surgeons have advocated keeping surgical woulds dry. Healing, wupposedly, was more rapid and complete under these conditions. Recent experiences, however, may cause a change in this policy

A study of surgical patients was undertaken re-cently to test whether early bathing or showers have a detrimental effect on healing woulds. One hundred surgical patients were treated by keeping bandages and woulds dry (dry group) and another jundred were permitted tub baths or showers (wet group) on the second or third day after the opera-tion. There was no essential difference in the two tion." There was no essential difference in the two groups, in reference to the rate of healing and com-plications. From this point there appeared no harm in allowing early bathing. Neigher did there seem to be an advantage, until it was discovered that most patients in the wet group remarked that they liked it. As a whole they reported feeling better, both physically and mentally, because they were permitted to bathe soon after the operation. Although this was an unexpected finding, I am sure many surgeons will take advantage of it in the future and allow pat-ients to use soap and water within two or three days after operation. after operation.

MEDITORIAL FLASH FOR ALL BATHERS: Light skinned persons wearing black or dark swim suits are attecked most often by sharks. Swimming alone in shark infested waters is more dangerous than staying in groups and the person who goes to the rescue of an attack victim has a 1 in 5 chance of being attacked himself. Those Three Constitutional Amendments

By Russell Kirk

By Russell KITK The Council of State Governments, a most respectable body composed of officers and legislators of the several states, has recommended three amendments to the Federal Constitution. They ask state legislatures to call a national constitutional convention, to act on these proposed changes. So far, some 24 state legislatures have approved this plan, for one or more of the amendments. It is necessary to have the consent of 36 states before the constitutional convention can be summoned. All this makes Chief Justice Earl Warren unjudicially angry. Recently he denounced publicly the American bar, because lawyers have failed to protest against the Council of State Government's plan. Should these amendments pass, indeed they would somewhat diminish Chief Justice Warren's power.

Amendments pass, indeed they would somewhat diminish Chief Justice Warren's power. One amendment would make the state legislatures the arbitors of ap-portionment of state legislative districts -- which they always were, until last year, when the Warren Court (to the vexation of Justice Frank-furter) declared that the United States Supreme Court had the power to approve and disapprove the character and boundaries of state legislative districts.

districts. A second amendment would allow state legislatures to propose and ratify Constitutional amendments, without reference to Congress. The third proposed amendment would establish a "Court of the Union," made up of state supremc-court justices, which would have jurisdiction superior to that of the United States Supreme Court, where questions of relationships between federal and state governments are concerned. These reforms have powerful support across these United States. States so different as Arkansas, Idaho, Illinois, Montana, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, Utah, New Hampshire, and Florida have approved one or more of the amendments, through legislative action. So it is not a ques-tion simply of Southern state-rights sentiment. Ohio and New Jersey may join the list of approving states in the near future. Chief Justice Warren and some of his fellow justices are responsible for this movement -- though they oppose it. For the claim of the present Supreme Court to have jurisdiction in all sorts of matters never previous-ly subject to Supreme Court action has proviked a wave of resentment --

Supreme Court to have jurisdiction in all sorts of matters never previous-ly subject to Supreme Court action has proviked a wave of resentment --expecially strong in the several state supreme courts, but extending to state officials and legislators generally. Chief Justice Warren has made himself far more powerful than ever Chief Justice Marshall was -- with-out Constitutional amendment or act of Congress to authorize his increase of authority. And the frequent re-interpretation by the Supreme Court of Congressional acts -- sometimes quite counter to the intended meaning of the authors of those acts -- has stirred up much hostility to the Court in the national legislature. too

Now that federal courts have gone so far as to tell Alabama school super-intendents what pupils they may or may not suspend, local officials every-where are going to suspect the Supremie Court of working for total centralization.

Trailization. Throughout the world, one of the great dangerous forces of the twentieth century is centralization of political power. As things are moving in this country, presently American state governments will have less autonomy than do little Swiss cantons. In the interest of freedom, this writer sug-gests, the three amendments drawn up by the Council of State Governments are practical and desirable restraints upon a baneful centralization.

Hicksville is NS Champion: Plays Today for Nassau Title -

Title -Hicksville High is the 1963 baseball champion of the North Share Athletic League. With Ju pitcher Jim Erwin setting down potent Great Neck North, Champion of division two, with a pair of hits, the Orange and Black won its third title in ten years by a score of 4-0. Hicksville faces Wantagh High, South Shore Champ-ion on the Levittown Loring Field Diamond today (Thursday) for the Nassau County Championship at 4:00 p.m.

Hicksville vasilted to the top of the four division, 29 school league under the Guidance of Coach Dick Hogan. Himself a graduate of HHS, Hogan had pitched a spärkling 1-0 victory over Bethpage for the North Shore title eight years previously. This is his first vers at the hom ycar at the helm.

Erwin went into the contest with a 12-1 record behind him and two recorded no-hitters. This was his first year of competition and he capped it with a

Levittown CWV Crusades For School ireyer

"We can, if we have the will, change the Constitution and allow prayer in the schools."

So spoke Co.gressman John W. Wyd-ler of Garden City at the School Pray-er Raily of Frank Gushue Post 1623, Leviltown Catholic War Veterans, on May 26.

The congressman predicted that if any one of several amendments intro-duced in the House of Representatives ever got to the floor "it would pass overwhelmingly."

Bur his fellow Congressman, Steven B.Derounian, of Hoslyn Estates, said that bills aimed at amending the Con-stitution to permit school prayer are now bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee chaired by Congressman Emanuel Celler of New York City, "He has told me frankly that he does not intend to hold any hearings on the amendment," Derounian said. The North Shore legislator said his proposed amendment would reinstate the precise 22-word Regents Prayer which the U.S. Supreme Court out-lawed in its historic decision last year. He added, though, that he is not wedded

He added, though, that he is not wedded to this particular amendment. Any amendment allowing a non-sectarian, non-compulsory prayer in the public schools will receive my whole-hearted support.' Taking sharp exception to President

Kennedy's admonition that the proper Refinedly's admonition that the proper place for prayer is in the church and at home, Derounian said: "I think prayer is necessary anywhere the one stating the prayer wants to say it." Ite suggested that each member of the audience of about 400 persons write letters to the President asking him to use his "moral persuasion on Mr. Celler to have hearings" on the series of proposed prayer amendments al-rady introduced but obviously con-signed to oblivion in committee. "The President has a very sensitive ear," the Congressman explained," and his sensitive car is listening to the year 1964." He added that if enough people write to Kennedy on behalf of the prayer amendment, the President may "do a little arm twisting on behalf of the sensets were made by neveral of the secakors. Said Robert Hoshno, president of the Lording School Drevel with the to the place for prayer is in the church and

Said Robert Hoshino, president of the Levittown School Board: "The Ameri-can Veterans Committee is reported as suggesting that the words 'so help me God' be removed from the oath of culistees."

cnlistees." Commented Betram Daiker, the at-torney for the Herricks School District who won the Regents Prayer case in the Mincola Supreme Court, in the Appelate Division, and in the State Court of Ap-peals, only to see the U. S. Supreme Court reverse the three courts below: "The day I argued the Regents Prayer case the Supreme Court was opened with this prayer: 'God save the United States and this honorable Court." Professor Charles Rice called the U S. Supreme Court decision an "act oi vandalism'' which must be remedied through a constitutional amendment. Father Edward Lodge Curran, an out-spoken Roman Catholic pastor, said "Freedom of speech involves my right to publicly speak to God as well as to any group of American citizens... "It is necessary to win this fight," Father Curran added, "Because if we don't win, the ban is going to be ex-tended to the use of the words 'under God' in the Piedge of Allegiance) and to the national molto, 'In God We to the national molto, 'In God We

The priest advocated that mothers take their children to school and have them offer a "public prayer" at the beginning of the school day.

For the Benediction Father Curran led the audience in a recital of the Sup-reme Court -banned Regents Prayer. During the rally, petitions favoring congressional action on permitting "permissive, non-sectarian prayer" in the public schools were passed around. A call for a hand vote of those fav-oring prayer in the public schools produced what appeared to be a unanimous vote.

Last week, this columnist guoted an attorney who said that if prayer is unlawful for public school children, it is equally unlawful for adults who use the schools.

School boards, PTA groups, and others have been opening their meetings in the schools with prayer, showing that some adults are applying one standard for themselves and a diametrically op-posite standard for their children.

Auxiliary News by Cynthia Hochbrueckner

The annual Past Presipent's Pary will be held at the regular June meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary, Charles Wagner Post #421 on Friday, June 7th at 8:30 p.m. Awards will be presented to all members who have maintained continuous membership for periods from 5 to 40 years. All Past Presidents have been invited and a good time is promised by the committee.

A Citizenship Medal was to have been presented to a member of the Campfire Girls who best fulfilled a list of requirements set up by the Auxiliary and the Campfire Giel Guardians. It was with great disappointment that our Americanism Chairman, Mrs. Trudy Rutz reported that she had no entries this year in the contest. The medal will be held until next year when the contest will probably be opened to other groups. Now that Memorial Day is over, I wish to express my thanks to all those who helped make the Poppy Program a success this year. Our order was increased as requested by Department and through everyone's cooperation most of the order was disposed of. Special appreciation to those who met the early morning trains as that is quite an unreasonable hour to ask anyone to get out. This was another job well done for another year.
