How To Get To The Soap Box Derby

ENJOY ENCHANTING VACATIONS,
BLISSFUL RETIREMENT

Here is one of Hampton Water's modern new homes. You may own a home and plot for as little as $12,500 up to as much as you want to spend.

This typical old Salt box house was the home of "Jackie" Kennedy, where she spent many summers as a child.

Guild Hall and the famous John Drew Theatre, above, produces amateur and professional plays the year around. A series of art exhibitions is held here in three galleries all summer long. East Hampton is said to be the headquarters for more modern artists than anywhere in the country outside of New York City.

Here's how your kiddies can fish from the banks at Hampton Waters, catch snappers galore, king fish, porgies, small sea bass and an occasional big blue, weakfish or striped bass. They'll love it. You will, too.

Hicksville Student Gets Grumman Award

Ten leading high school scholars from Nassau and Suffolk County were named today as recipients of the 1963 Grumman Scholarship awards. The students, all seniors, were awarded grants covering tuition and laboratory expenses for four years at the engineering or science school of their choice.

The awards highlighted the 20th anniversary of the Grumman Scholarship Program which was conceived and implemented in 1944 to give promising students the opportunity to prepare for a career in what was then called the aviation industry. Today the program is designed to accommodate Long Island scholars who wish to study for engineering or science careers in aerospace. The ten scholars received their awards at a special luncheon held at the Terramar Restaurant, Hicksville, bringing the 20 year total of scholarships awarded to more than 220. Richard Hutton, a Grumman Senior Vice President, made the presentations.

Astron Scott Carpenter addressed the luncheon meeting which was attended by officers of Grumman, former Grumman scholarship winners, as well as the principal and guidance director from each scholarship winner's high school.

Thinking It Over

by Robert L. Morgan

SOME OF THE people who are supposed to be in the know around Hicksville are most likely reading the back files of this column going back about five years.

At that time we ran large headlines and strongly worded stories of what the Town, the Chamber of Commerce and even the businessmen should do about a state department order which would cut off more than 40 feet from the west side of Broadway Hicksville. At that time there were many good businesses still on Broadway but the encroaching Mid Island Shopping Plaza had many people in a frenzy and although a few people listened to what was said very little developed. At that time we questioned whether it was necessary to widen Broadway and wipe out the businesses or find an alternate route.

Now five years later some of our strongest critics and political foes of that time are trying to lock the barn door with pious statements of what the state is doing to Hicksville. While this last minute effort is late and while we think it is phony, we hope that some good will come of it and a planned business district will emerge in Hicksville somehow.

Face Pains May Originate In Sinus

By C. A. Dean, M.D.

(Q) "For the past year I have had excruciating pains across my cheek bones, eyes and temples, especially while bending over or coughing. Please advise."

F.J.M.

(A) This problem is very likely to be due to a chronic sinus condition. I suggest seeing a nose and throat doctor. Sinus X-rays may be needed.

MEDITORIAL: Mrs. E. M. would like some detailed information on hypochromic anemia and its cure. She also asked in her letter what a healthy person's hemoglobin should be.

A description of hemoglobin is helpful in understanding anemia. Hemoglobin is the main ingredient of the red blood cells and its function is to carry oxygen to all parts of the body for nourishment. Hemoglobin is basically a structure of protein and iron. A lack of either of these could result in a lack of hemoglobin and this is what anemia really means.

Hypochromic anemia is one that results from a lack of iron. The various causes include chronic blood loss as the most frequent. Others are chronic diarrhea, pregnancy, infants on milk alone, and unusually heavy menstrual periods. As I mentioned recently in a column, anemia from a diet poor in iron content practically never happens in an adult, unless their diet is grossly abnormal.

The treatment of hypochromic anemia is first to find the cause of the blood loss (iron loss), second to treat the cause (stop the bleeding), and third to treat the anemia with iron. This latter may not be necessary as the hemoglobin often returns to normal as soon as the cause is eliminated. X-rays of the stomach and intestine are often necessary in the search for the source of trouble. Most cases of hypochromic anemia are cured by this means. One important fact must be remembered -- the normal hemoglobin count varies in women from 10 grams to 14 grams and in men from 12 grams to 16 grams. There is a tendency to place the stigma of an anemic condition on a woman with 10 or near 10 grams of hemoglobin and to treat this person by indefinitely trying to build her hemoglobin count above her normal. After the diagnosis of a normally low hemoglobin is made, only an occasional examination without treatment is necessary.

Keen Students And Indolent Professors

By Russell Kirk

At the University of Milan, Italian students have been carrying on a sit-in strike to demand stricter scholastic standards. They want their professors to invite distinguished guest lecturers, prepare more rigorous examinations, and offer tougher courses. The members of the faculty, resenting such dictation, refuse to comply -- so the students barricade themselves in their classrooms.

These stirring events occur in Milan's school of architecture. Your servant would not be sorry to see American students in nearly every discipline similarly stand up for the restoration of learning.

On several American campuses, student councils and other groups have petitioned college authorities to raise the norms of course-work and to take stern measures against student indolence and student cheating. The better members of college faculties take the side of these reforming undergraduates; yet college administrators often prefer huge, indiscriminate enrollments over something for the mind.

"Most of our colleges being what they are," Mr. Paul Goodman writes in his recent lively book "The Community of Scholars," "I fear that many of our best youth would get a better, though very imperfect, education if they followed their impulse and quit; and certainly many teachers ought to be more manly even if they risk getting fired."

According to Mr. Christopher Jendis, associate editor of the "New Republic," only about 1 per cent of American undergraduates desire a serious scholarly or scientific training; perhaps 2 per cent want a more general intellectual education; some 5 per cent want an introduction to upper-middle-class conviviality and upper-middle-brow culture -- and so on, down the scale. More than half of them haven't the foggiest notion of why they are enrolled in college.

But we ought to pay serious attention to that earnest minority of students who believe that college is intended to discipline the intellect. The National Student Association ought to emphasize far more strongly the cause of such reforms, rather than fretting about the politics of Angola -- which land almost no American student really knows aught about.

"I find fewer and fewer students who know what the purpose of education is," a young Ph.D. writes to me, "much less desire it; the faculty is equally confused as to their own rationale; and the administration regards the whole educative function as an impertinence." In disgust, he quit his post. Perhaps more students should strike for standards, and more professors resign in protest.

BEAUTY SECRETS

By Victor of Vilu

Your hair dresser has only one goal to achieve -- to make you more beautiful. From time immemorial hair dressing and styling has been considered one of the arts. Witness the skilled hair designs we find in museums on kings and queens, gods and goddesses -- these could only have been achieved by artists. Then, as now, men and women recognized that beauty and good appearance begins with the hair, and only a skilled artisan can produce the desired effect. I have said many times, and I repeat, that a hairdresser is an artist in every interpretation of the word. She is an artist because she is a creator who begins by examining the material with which she has to work, and ends by molding a hair cut of a hair style that will best bring out and develop the inherent beauty that exists in every one of us. A good hairdresser, and the only kind we make it our business to employ, is original and creative in her work. This skill is developed by training. But -- the flair has to be in the operator to begin with.

A good hair cut begins with a good design--a design that conforms to the lines, the shape, the textures and the colors the hair specialist has to work with. Hair has to be cut with care and skill in order to bring out the full potential of the style that will best conform to your coiffure, individual requirements and personality.

A good hair cut achieves harmony, balance, good design and correct proportions. Perhaps you are

She takes a moment to plan and then applies scissor and comb with all the agility and purpose that any artist would apply to her work. Good grooming must of necessity begin with a good hair cut, if we are to achieve the many breath-taking effects that is the trade - mark of our salon.

how FAST CAN YOU STOP

If your safety depended on it, how fast could you stop your car? To bring a moving vehicle to a standstill requires three separate acts: First, your eye must see the danger; Second, your brain must pass the "stop" command to the foot that applies the brakes; Third, your foot must move to the brakes and apply sufficient braking power. This is known as reaction time or thinking distance. To this, add the actual braking distance . . . the distance your car travels after you've applied the brakes.

Under perfect driving conditions, it takes an expert almost twice the length of a football field to stop a car going 70 miles per hour. At 60 mph, it takes 366 ft. At 20 mph, almost 50 ft. How add to these distances your own physical and mental condition when your "emergency stop order" comes and you get the whole picture of how fast you can stop. Not too fast, is it?

Whether you're driving on the open highway or in a residential area, gauge your driving by your stopping capabilities. Drive carefully and join the over 6 million State Farm Mutual policy-holders who have found careful driving really pays off through fewer accidents, lower insurance rates and extra benefits.

AN INTERESTING THING HAPPENED ON THE WAY TO ROOSEVELT RACEWAY

PHILLIPS STARTER

In 1910 young Steve Phillips began a long career in harness racing by acting as race starter at a country fair in Xenia, Ohio. Twenty-five years later, he began fooling around with a heat-up Ford chassis to which he added wide stationary airplane wings. He used the contraption to school horses.

This primitive vehicle was the forerunner of the famous Phillips mobile gate that has revolutionized harness racing. Previously, horses used to be started in races in a haphazard, walk-up manner that caused numerous delays.

The cream-colored car with the folding arms, which is now a familiar sight at the major harness tracks, was used first at Roosevelt Raceway to open its 1946 season. George Morton Levy, founder of Roosevelt; the Liberty Aircraft Corp. of Farmingdale, L.I., and Phillips cooperated in its design and production.

Steve Phillips is now retired, but his son, Charles (Chuck), operates the gate at Roosevelt Raceway.

Should We Let The Politicos Apartmentize the County?

If conversion of the Long Island Railroad into a rapid-transit system comes to pass, as it probably will (and it appears to be the only sensible solution to Long Island's present transportation woes), the likelihood of an invasion of the "cliff dwellers" is not quite so remote as some Democrats would have us believe.

As a matter of fact, I'm inclined to think that Democrats eye apartment houses as potential sources of more and more Democratic votes. So, rather than being against apartmentizing the county, as they may proclaim publicly, the Dems, I am sure, are staunchly for a rapid-transit railway system with stands of "cliffs" lining the right of way on into the city. It is clear, then, that the fears of Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Thomas R. Pynchon are not exactly groundless.

Pynchon has called for a study of the Democrat-proposed rail loop system to see just how many sky-scraping apartment houses will displace single-family houses along the loop, which among other things, would link such suburban communities as Hicksville, Levittown and East Meadow.

Of course, to present the matter in its true light, many GOPers haven't been exactly opposed to apartmentizing the county either.

In the Town of Hempstead, for example, there has been a lot of building of what are sweet-soundingly called garden-type apartment houses. Often one or more prominent Republican attorneys have represented apartment house applicants in these matters, demonstrating again the potential power of political influence. (What I think about the peddling of political influence isn't printable, so I shall refrain from making further comment.)

The squabble over the possible apartmentizing of Oyster Bay Town has pitted two of the fightingest political game cocks against one another—Nassau transportation director Edward J. Morris and Pynchon. As the two spit fire at each other in months to come, the resultant tussle should provide a little diversion for the public, especially welcome in the dull summer months.

I can see the disease from which New York City has long suffered—population-glut—creeping eastward. With an improved railway, the glutters will not creep—they'll ride in style. And they'll bring their problems with them, as though Nassau didn't have enough of its own. For, if there's a buck to be made by building cliffs along the railroad right of way, you can bet your bottom dollar there'll be plenty of people, politicians included, around to get in on the big money.

I've often said that people have a right to live like pismires in concrete anthills if they desire. But I've also said that the people most responsible for population-glut, the politicians, whose altruism is no more than pocket deep, should be caused to live in the concrete pillboxes alias anthills. After all, why should the despilers of trees, of verdure, of Nature itself receive special privileges?

There is some hope for Nassau, though, before just too many people per square foot forces many to move out of the county. Hope lies to the east.

Suffolk County dwarfs Brooklyn, Queens, and Nassau combined in square mileage, aggregating 920 square miles as against 453 square miles for Long Island's three other counties collectively. And Suffolk is the coming county.

By the year 2,000 I venture to say that Suffolk will be glutted with more people per square foot than any of the three other counties.

It is to Nassau's advantage, therefore, to borrow and slightly modify a phrase attributed to Greeley. It should say to those thinking of helping sardine this county even more than it is now sardined: "Go east, friends, go east. Right now Suffolk has more elbow room than we."

Will the loop system solve Nassau's transportation problems? Hardly. It will, in fact, create more because population-glut means greater transportation headaches.

The City of New York now has a network of fast-moving subways, railroads, busses, etc. But it is still faster to walk, say from Pennsylvania Station to the United Nations building than it is to go by taxi.

Do we here in Nassau want this kind of ludicrous condition because of the gluttony of those who don't give a hoot about people-packing and the problems it triggers? Certainly not.

Here's a tip for the exploiters of the populace: Why not start beating the drums for floating apartment hotels? They would be cheap to maintain, would pay no taxes (until the politicians got around to latching onto such a rich source of revenue), and would be an utter delight during summer heatwaves!

IT IS TO BE expected that admirers of Surrealism (or perhaps Anti-Art) will profess to understand this drawing above.

"What a striking likeness!" they may exclaim. "See how he walks with his eye always on the ground, his head full of illusions and elementary mathematics! Marvelous! If we met him in the street we should know him instantly."

The problem for the ordinary reader, however, is not to recognize the artist, but to unravel his illusions.

In presenting this clever creation in Mazes and Labyrinths: A Book of Puzzles (pub. by Dover), Walter Shepherd stipulates that the viewer is on his honor to do the untangling by eye only, unaided by pencil or other pointer.

Pick up the thread at the arrow marked "O," and follow it through all the obstacles till you arrive at one of the numbers along the top of the picture.

THEY'RE IN THE BAG

HUBERT PHILLIPS included the following in his collection, My Best Puzzles in Logic and Reasoning (pub. by Dover), that is, posers which demand no mathematical knowledge, but call for clear thinking and an ability to establish the logical relationships which the data presented imply:

A bag contains twenty marbles. They are of three different colors. There are eight blue ones, seven red ones, and five green ones. You are invited to close your eyes and draw the maximum number of marbles consistent with your leaving in the bag: (1) at least four marbles of any color, and (2) at least three marbles of any second color, how many marbles should you draw?

Answer: 1-99 1/3. 2. 10 1/3.

SUPPOSE that on the day before yesterday, the weather forecaster broadcast, "Today's weather is different from yesterday's. If the weather is the same tomorrow as it was yesterday, the day after tomorrow will have the same weather as the day before yesterday. But if the weather is the same tomorrow as it is today, the day after tomorrow will have the same weather as yesterday."

Let's assume it is raining today, and it rained the day before yesterday. Also that the forecaster's prediction proved correct. What was the weather like yesterday?

It's in the Cards

SAM LOYD, who was to become one of the immortal names of puzzlers, attracted attention with his problems based on what and the then novel game of auction bridge. Indeed, it has been claimed that Loyd's bridge puzzles did much to popularize the game in the United States, into which it was introduced from England in the 1890s. It was relatively little known in the United States until two decades later.

An Englishman, Hubert Phillips, who uses the pseudonym of "Caliban," is a modern composer of intriguing contract bridge brain-teasers. The following is from Caliban's Problem Book: Mathematical, Inferential and Cryptographic Puzzles (pub. by Dover).

In a hand dealt at contract bridge, the bidding went as follows:

E	S	W	N
N	W	E	S

1 ♠	double	2 ♠	3 ♦
No Bid	3 ♠	No Bid	3 ♦

Numberology

FIGURES can be tricky, of course. Here are some examples:

1—Write four nines so they will equal 100.

2—Make a cross consisting of the figures 1 to 9 so that the vertical column and the horizontal line will both total the same amount.

3—Write an even number, using only odd digits.

4—Express 24 with three equal figures other than 8.

The question is, what were South's thirteen cards? How quickly can you deduce the answer?

Along with an expanding public interest today in science, puzzles and "brain games" based on mathematics, physics or logic have come to enjoy greater popularity than ever. Significantly, the Scientific American Magazine has a regular monthly department devoted to puzzles. Compilations of great posers of the past are in demand, and the creations of Sam Loyd, H. E. Dudeney, Hubert Phillips ("Caliban"), Gerald Kaufman, Jerome Meyer, M. Krattchik and other master-makers of puzzles are available again in inexpensive paperbacks. Noteworthy new collections are coming out in hardcover editions.

A reader whose interest has been stimulated by examples given in this page can make himself or herself acquainted with the best in old and new puzzles, from the select books listed below.

Pynchon Calls For New Studies

Supervisor Thomas R. Pynchon today called for the institution of two studies to determine (1) the economic feasibility of the Morris-Stonler Rapid Transit Plan and (2) the long range effects on the one family home in the Town of Oyster Bay.

Plainview, Hicksville, Levittown and other mid-island communities in the Town of Oyster Bay.

"The people of the Town of Oyster Bay are greatly concerned over the possible suburban devastation that may occur in the central communities of the Town from the double loop rapid transit system. This fear continued Pynchon, "is a justifiable one, especially since earlier this year Mr. Morris and Dr. Storier asserted that one of the consequences of the double loop rapid transit system would be the introduction of 'high-rise apartments' in the central tier communities of the Town of Oyster Bay.

"It became more pronounced on Monday, June 24, when Dr. Storier said that at the outset the double loop rapid transit system would have a harmful effect on more than 300 homes."

In my judgement it is vital that we ascertain whether or not the detrimental effect to these 300 homes presages the beginning of a total change in the characteristics of our one-family home-owning communities in the mid-island areas.

"We all recognize the need for improvement in transportation, but we must not be hasty in embracing a particular solution that may in the long run bring about criticism of the mid-island area,

"Further, I believe it to be of the highest importance that an immediate in-depth economic feasibility study be undertaken to accurately determine the actual cost of this proposal to the home-owning taxpayers, especially since the 103 million dollars in the transit report is judged to be a conservative figure by railroad experts, and does not include the purchase of all of the required additional rolling stock.

"I believe that if these two studies were undertaken all of us in responsible elected positions would be able to more intelligently evaluate the proposal and to determine whether the Town of Oyster Bay is to remain a suburban community dedicated to the advance of better living or if this policy will be undermined by action taken to eliminate one source of inconvenience. I believe we are at the crossroads in this regard and the people should have every fact possible so that their voices may be heard."

MONEY MAKER

JOSEPH has earned a considerable amount of money doing various errands and chores after school. For each job Joseph has been paid a silver coin of one of four denominations. This week end, when Joseph counted up his total, he found that three denominations of the coins amount to the same number of dollars each. He has twice as many 50-cent pieces as dollar coins, and twice as many dimes as quarters.

How many of each of the four coins does Joseph have?

Answers: Silver dollar = 10 cents; 50-cent piece = 50 cents; quarter = 25 cents; dime = 10 cents.
