Local Instrument Co. Gets Polaris Flag

In ceremonies in Hicksville and at Westwood, Mass., the U.S. Navy today presented to General Instrument Corporation the coveted "Polaris Flag," for developing and producing a "complex sonar system of unique design" for the Polaris submarine program.

While details of the system itself were classified, the Navy disclosed that the first one has been successfully tested at sea and that three more will soon be operational.

Contracts to General Instrument for the four systems totalled approximately $9,000,000.

The Polaris Flag was presented by Lieut. Commander Robert Irving of the U.S. Navy's Special Projects Office. It was presented jointly to the two main units of the General Instrument Defense and Engineering Products Group -- the Radio Receptor Division at Hicksville, and the Harris ASW (Anti-Submarine Warfare) Division at Westwood, Mass. -- which together developed and built the systems.

The Flag, which is a symbol of membership on the Polaris "industrial team", was accepted at the Radio Receptor plant here by J. R. Pasouzzo, Group Vice President for Defense and Engineering Products.

THINKING IT OVER

By Robert L. Morgan

It would be easy to catch on to the current wave of anti-school board sentiment that is being generated by Newsday and go along with it on the basis of the performance of the Hicksville School Board. But regardless of how weak and ineffective the present school board is, we cannot believe that the people's chance to have a voice in school affairs should be terminated.

About a year ago Newsday had a big thing going in an attempt to convince people that one large Nassau County school board could do the job better, but this idea hasn't gained much momentum and even the Democratic political party that has been most favored by Newsday disowns the plan.

There are several groups that would favor the abolishment of local school boards. Political leader Joe Carlino, for one, finds them an obstacle and a constant source of worry to Governor Rockefeller and his friends. School administrators would like to see the abolishment of local controls -- but not their jobs -- and the teachers look to non-interference by the people who pay their salaries as a longed for paradise. Newsday of course sees local issues like school boards etc. as being a burden that they find hard to cover in their idea of a one big county where everyone agrees.

We think school boards must continue to exist so long as there is a publicly tax supported system of education. We also think that it is a little far-fetched that people who want air conditioned schools, swimming pools and other strictly luxury items should get them and then pass the bills on to other people outside their areas to pay. We think school boards will have to give up some of their silly methods of going over petty bills and budget codes that bog them down in mechanics and form committees that will allow them the time to do over-seeing work on what is being done in the schools and their business departments. School Boards should reconsider why they are elected and affirm the idea that they are the representatives of the people of the area -- not the public relations officers for the administration, the teachers or the central office of the NEA which is so remote from the problem that it cannot be of help.

So in short the answer is not to do away with school boards -- but make them do a job that is worthwhile.

Crying To Relieve Tension Is Temporary

By C. A. Dean, M.D.

(Q) "I am a very emotional person and at times I find I need to cry but cannot do so. I believe if I could cry the cramped-up feeling I get in my chest and throat would be lifted quite a bit. Please advise."

Mrs. R.L.

(A) Simple crying will not be the answer to your basic nervous problem. Crying is only a temporary outlet and is not of much help at that. What would be more helpful is someone to listen to some of your troubles. Good advice would be helpful in achieving a better understanding of yourself. Your family doctor may be able to help you.

MEDITORIAL: A recent letter from a reader (Mrs. H.B.) asks about a condition known as geographic tongue. This condition is seen most often in adolescents and young adults, especially those with an allergic background, a nervous tendency or those who are somewhat undernourished. Geographic tongue is a disease of the tongue that derives its name from the map-like appearance of the affected part. There are smooth, red patches with a yellowish-white border that may cover part or all of the surface of the tongue. The pattern of these areas may change from day to day or it may remain unchanged for long periods.

One important factor in this disease is that it usually causes no complaints. The patient may not know he has the condition until someone points it out to him. Patients frequently believe this condition is a fungus infection or even a cancer due to its wild appearance. Neither of these two is at all possible.

Childe Harold Comes To Indiana

By Russell Kirk

THOUGH MR. HAROLD STASSEN stood ignominiously at the bottom of the New Hampshire primary (with less than 1,300 votes) and was ridiculously feeble in the Illinois write-in competition (with less than 100 votes), his hopes spring eternal. He aspires, as David, to slay Goliath Goldwater, in the May 5 Indiana primary.

At least he has contrived to get his name on the ballot. Indiana requires only 500 signatures of electors for a place on the primary list. These Mr. Stassen obtained by paying the Young Republicans of DePauw University $500 to round up as many signatures for him. Though the YR's of DePauw, like nearly all the other Young Republicans of Indiana, are Goldwater backers, they complied -- and put the money in their treasury.

Despite this feebleness of organization, Mr. Stassen should make a fair showing in Indiana -- though he will get far fewer votes, probably, than will that other dissident (on the Democratic ballot) Governor Wallace of Alabama. For all the anti-Goldwater people will help Stassen, at least surreptitiously, so as to diminish the Goldwater majority; thus the backers of Rockefeller, Lodge, Nixon, Soranton, and Margaret Chase Smith hope to slow the Goldwater bandwagon. The Rockefeller organization in Indiana sits on its hands -- its only chance being a protest vote expressed through Stassen. Yet Senator Goldwater should beat Mr. Stassen several times over.

In California, Mr. Stassen will not be on the primary ballot, after all: he was some 4,500 signatures short of qualifying, which leaves Goldwater and Rockefeller a clear contest there. In Oregon, on May 15, he is expected to finish a sorry last on the long list of Republican candidates. If he hoped to trade convention delegates for some eminent appointment in a Republican administration -- and it is hard to see what other hope he could have indulged in running for the nomination -- he will be chagrined, for it is doubtful that a single Republican delegate at San Francisco will mention his candidacy. Where does the gentleman obtain his considerable financial backing?

Senator Goldwater will not campaign in Indiana: he's busy with California. Out there, he has altered his strategy. The Senator from Arizona tells this columnist that thereafter his California speeches will be televised, locally or state-wide; he finds the door-to-door, town-to-town hand-shaking not only exhausting physically, but imprudent. For Mr. Goldwater, like Mr. Nixon before him, has been subjected several times to a "press ambush" -- reporters firing questions at him confusedly, and writing down the answers before Goldwater has even finished replying to them. An increasingly astute campaigner in recent weeks, the Senator is not disposed to make himself a sitting duck for journalists irreconcilably hostile to his candidacy.

Already, Mr. Goldwater has more formally pledged delegates in his bag than all the other serious candidates, "favorite son" candidates, and non-committed blocs combined. With the Indiana delegation secured, he will be far in the lead. It will take more than Mr. Stassen to slow him.

New Restaurant In Bethpage

Bethpage residents and their friends and neighbors from surrounding community were invited, this week, to step into a new experience in dining pleasure. Now open to serve the residents of the local area, the new Tung Hing Restaurant is situated in the Bethpage shopping center on Stewart Avenue, Bethpage.

Operated by Mr. James Yuan, manager, the restaurant features a beautiful cocktail bar, seating for dinner for almost 150 patrons, continuous music by Symphonairre, exciting decor and the best in service. More important, however, than the pleasant surroundings offered to patrons, is the menu of exciting Chinese specialties and delicious American dishes. Perhaps most important of all is the fact that Tung Hing specializes in moderate prices.

Translating the name of the new restaurant, Mr. Yuan explains that Tung Hing means "Prosperity in the East." From early indications it appears that Tung Hing Restaurant will certainly realize prosperity in Bethpage.

No amateur in the restaurant business, Mr. Yuan has managed a number of similar establishments in the New York and Long Island area. Years ago he was secretary of the famous Sun Ya restaurant in Shanghai, China, before the Chinese Communists occupied that area. The local restaurateur has been active in other fields of endeavor as well. Holding as M.A. from Stanford University (in journalism) he has worked in the newspaper field and served for a time in government service.

Mr. Tommy Choy, president of the Tung Hing firm, also represents considerable experience having served in similar capacity with many other restaurant firms in the New York and Long Island area.

Native-Bred Steeds Prep for L. I. Trots and Flats Stakes

A RESURGENCE OF RACE HORSE BREEDING on Long Island for the billion dollar betting meets at Aqueduct and Roosevelt Raceway is evident with the appearance of several native contenders at both tracks this year. Left, Roosevelt Baby, first foal born at Roosevelt and owned by Jack Barchi of Old Westbury, is being accustomed to starting gate. The colt is slated for 1965 Dexter Cup race. Center, left, Mr. Barchi hugged his week-old foal for photo with mama, "Misty Flight" standing guard. Center right, "Nazami Lu," born at Merrylegs Farm, Upper Brookville, owned by prominent New York real estate investor Seymour Cohn, is clocked in anticipation of racing this Spring at Aqueduct. At right, Mr. Cohn is boxed in by "Tony's Dream" and the filly she delivered this April. The sire was "Dr. Bill" who gave a good account of himself at Aqueduct. A third well-known Cohn-owned racer, "White Collar" is expecting in May.

Mothers Elect New Officers

On April 27 the St. Ignatius Loyola Confraternity of Christian Mothers held its monthly meeting, and for those who attended, it was an evening well spent.

During the business meeting the members were reminded that the annual Corporate Communion will be held on May 9, at the nine o'clock Mass, followed by a continental breakfast. Father Vincent McDonald, C.M., Provincial Director of Carmelites, will be the guest speaker at the Mass.

Mrs. Gough, who was chairman of the Rummage Sale in April was pleased to report that it was very successful as well as a lot of fun.

The Dark Horse winner for this month was Mrs. Edward White who left the meeting ten dollars richer.

The nominations having been completed for the slate of 1964-65, the candidates were introduced by the Chairman, Mrs. John Brennan in the following order:

For President, Mrs. Joseph Gough, Mrs. Joseph J. Hecker and Mrs. E. Schrom; Vice-President, Mrs. Charles Lamoureux, Mrs. Lawrence McCaffrey and Mrs. James Wright; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Edward Korb, Mrs. August Peragallo and Mrs. Joseph Robinson; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. William Krajci, Mrs. John McCrosson, and Mrs. Thomas Wall; Treasurer, Mrs. Benjamin Beniamino, Mrs. Arthur Murphy and Mrs. Robert Solaski. Ballots will be mailed out to all paid members before May 18 and voting will take place at the May meeting.

Father Goggin, moderator, had words of praise for those who come to the meetings month after month and reminded the members that belonging to the Auxillary was more a matter of duty than one of choice. Belonging does not mean merely paying ones dues and attending once in a while - but attending regularly. For, Father said, the mothers cooperate in the teaching of their children by their presence, work, suggestions and support.

The guest speaker for the evening was Father Vincent Nugent, Professor of Theology at St. John's University and Secretary of the American Theological Society. Father Nugent gave a very thought-provoking talk starting out with the declaration that although the Catholic Church has been in existence for over 1900 years there has never really been given a satisfactory definition of what the Church is.

So great is this need for clarity that Pope Paul VI has given the Council as its objective to explain more clearly just what is the Church's awareness of its own mission and its relationship to the world.

Through the Ages the Church has been referred to as "The Mystical Body", "Bride of Christ", "The Net", "The Building on a Hill", "Congregation of the Just" - but best of all "The People of God".

Father stressed the importance of having first hand knowledge of the Old Testament in order to understand the New, and to throw light on what we are. Our Church does not go back merely to Christ as such, but to Abraham, for in understanding the Scriptures, one sees that every promise God made through Jeremias, Daniel and St. John the Baptist has been fulfilled in the Church.

If we are to understand what we are and what the Church is we must go back to Abraham, Moses and Jeremias and see how all that was promised to them has been extended to us. We are the New Israel, the Chosen Race, the spiritual sons and daughters of Abraham - the "People of God". Christ said "I have not come to destroy the law, I have come to fulfill it".

The Church, Father said could be likened to a Family of God, an assembly in which all members are equal. Even the Pope has the title of "The Servant of the servant of God", and the Bishops and priests are not to rule, but to serve, teach and sanctify.

In the deep study of the Old Testament and its relation to our Church we take a new look at our Jewish brethren. We find that we are one with them in Abraham, Moses and Christ, sharing a heritage that sprang from the same source, under one head - "People of God".

At the end of his lecture Father threw the subject open to discussion and many more interesting facts were brought to light and questions were cleared up in the minds of some members.

Living up to her usual exceptional program planning during this past year, Mrs. Patrick McGee has another planned for next month. Sister Edmond de St. Bernard, a Daughter of Wisdom, who spent over twenty years in Africa, will tell of many interesting experiences and other little known facts about the once dark Continent and some of its inhabitants. We are looking forward to this meeting on May 25.

How To Write A Speech

I've always admired people who could speak right off the cuff. I tried it for a while. I used to pen little shorthand notes on my cuffs to jog my recollection as I went along.

But my wife soon put a stop to that. She told me right out one day that it was costing us too much money to wash my shirts in ink eradicator.

So then I went out and bought a book on how to write a speech. It's a nice book, about two inches thick; and it has lots and lots of words in it. I like that. Nothing's more helpful than words when you try to write a speech.

First off, this author says you have to warm up your audience by making your auditors laugh. Right away, he thinks you're a Jack Benny who can keep CPA's rolling in the aisles. Or maybe he thinks you ought to sneak around and give members of the audience the hot-foot!

Next the author says, "Be simple." Is he kidding?

Then he adds: "Be clear. Be concise. Be right to the point. And above all, be completely unpolysyllabic."

I like that too. I always like the man who uses a word three yards long to tell you that one-syllable words are best.

If I could be clear, concise, simple, and right to the point, I'd sit right down and write a book on how to write a speech.

For all that, I've always appreciated the man who could enrapture an audience with laryngeal creakings or vocal garglings. I myself am more the guttural type.

And, speaking of the "guttural" type, I kind of miss those Red-hot Communists who used to stand at the foot of a pigeon-decorated Ben Franklin statue on New York City's Park Row and babble on for hours about the glories of Russia as against the very horror of having to live in the United States.

Once I remember I stood by in awestruck silence as one of the Red-hots flailed the air with his arms ("milling the wind," I used to call it) to accentuate ate what he said as he roundly ridiculed the very country which gave him the right to roundly ridicule it.

Usually the Red-hots spouted such un-speakable nonsense that they were good for a bellyful of laughs. For that reason, they rarely lacked an audience.

This one, however, was so boring he could easily have been mistaken for a sandhog. So I ignored him and blithely stared skyward at the pigeons lazily winging overhead.

Soon the whole crowd of free-entertainment seekers was staring toward the sky, presumably wondering what I was gawking at. New York was New York, and I knew it.

One of my fellow starers spoke up. "What's up, Mac?" he asked. "Watching the pigeons?"

"Yup," I said in my best Sunday English. "You see how they have shamelessly besmirched, besmeared, and besmudged poor old Ben's head, shoulders, and body?"

"Yeh, it just ain't right, what they do to statues," he said.

"Well," said I, "I theorize that if we watch long enough, one of them is sure to miss old Ben and give our vocal friend his comeuppance or maybe I should say comedownance."

By now the speaker was also staring heavenward, his mouth still in gear and his tongue at full throttle.

Just then it happened: Two pigeons let go and scored direct hits on the physiognomy of the Red-hot.

"Branzal!" I yelled. "That's right, bull's-eye!" a nearby gentleman shouted.

"You're strictly for the birds," another auditor yowled. I immediately pinpointed his geographical beginnings when he followed up his assessment of the Red-hot with a Bronx obeer.

The Red-hot Red beat a hasty retreat. Somehow or other, the pigeons had expressed the sentiments of the crowd, which had suddenly been transformed into a surly mob.

Usually, though, passersby rarely did more than laugh appreciatively at the utter silliness of the Red-hots. They probably held, as did I, that if a donkey wants to make an ass of himself in these United States, he has every right to do so.

Which gets me back to the subject: How do you write a speech? Just ask any politician with a gift for gabble; that's how! And stay away from the pigeons, of course.

Oddments and Endments

LOOK for a spectacular development in the growing war between medical doctors and lay psychologists over charges that lay psychologists (including school psychologists) are not entitled to diagnose and treat mental illness...

As another little "scoop," it looks as though State Controller Arthur Levitt will shortly be asked to rule on conflict-of-interest charges involving the Hicksville School District...

A SPEAKER at the recent National School Boards Association convention in Houston charged that this country's dropout problem is attributable to the schools and the teachers, not the pupils.

This columnist has frequently so contended. Actually, the unacademically inclined are forced out of school, more or less summarily tossed into the street to fare for themselves if they can't measure up to preconceived academic standards. Little account is taken of the fact that many kids are very good with their hands, but not with their heads. Common sense (a commodity not very common in educational circles, it seems) would dictate that the unbookish child be taught mental skills, at least, so that he might have a fighting chance to make a living in this highly competitive society of ours.

The main trouble with public education is that we parents have allowed the so-called "experts" to run the show far too long. A Ph. D. without common sense is not worth a tinker's dam to himself or to anybody else. Yet, he may make decisions that help ruin the educational lives of untold thousands of children.

Who's to blame? The parents who are contented into believing that they're just too ignorant to have a real voice in the running of public school systems.

EYE OPENER: Census Bureau statistics show that, contrary to popular belief, Americans are marrying earlier than at any time since 1867. In 1890 the age of men for first marriage was 26, for women 22. In 1947 it was, respectively 23.7 and 20.5. Now in this country one out of seven girls between 15 and 19 is married... A Nassau Woman's organization made a study of the broadcasts from the NYC television stations. Their report shows TV averages 19 murders per day, not including wars and westerns... From Harlan Miller: "Often the difference between a successful marriage and a mediocre one consists of leaving about three or four things a day unsaid..." As a hobby, a friend of mine raised a flock of chickens for table use. He made great pets of them; they followed him around and even "sang" when he appeared. (Editor's note: Singing chickens, eh?) Not long ago he bought a false face and other paraphernalia for a disguise. After laboriously getting decked out, he asked his wife, "Do you think they'll recognize me?" She retorted, "Who do you think you're fooling?" He answered sheepishly, "If I got to kill those hens, I haven't the nerve to let them know, who's doing it."... In Mineola traffic court. A man stated: "I was driving down Main street with my wife at the wheel."... Dr. Maurice Ernest, founder of the Centenarian Club designed to help people reach 100, believes in thoroughly enjoying life. At Garden City hotel he told his favorite story about the man who wanted to be a centenarian and was advised by his doctor to give up drinking, smoking, and women. "Will I live to be a 100 then?" asked the patient. "No, said the doctor, "but it will seem like it."... Talking about stiff prices in restaurants at the World's Fair. Chic Farmer says, "The waiter brought me the check and I told him, "There must be some mistake, I have more money than that!"... Overheard at King Kullen: "I'm already so disgusted with my garden that I'm ready to throw in the trowel."... Journal ad: "Platex Baby Pants for social security."... In a Port luncheonette, as a father bought his little daughter an ice-cream cone: "Now let's eat it and not wear it."... Note to restaurant owners who continually complain about business being bad: Junior's Restaurant, Union Turnpike, New Hyde Park, jam packed all week. It's a fine restaurant for the entire family. At prices dad can afford. Maybe that's their gimmick... Note from Syosset: "My husband is able to make both ends meet, but there is never enough left over to tie a little bow. Why?"... Now I have to change my daily route to work. Everytime I drive by Port Washington Trading Post and see my boat on the lot there with a "For Sale" sign on it, I feel a little sad... Fred Lohmann's advice dept. "Success in dealing with other people is like making a rhubarb pie - use all the sugar you can, and then double it."... If You Please, try it....

Art Group Spring Show

The Studio Art Group is having its second annual Spring Show at Central Federal Savings and Loan Association, W. John St. and Broadway, Hicksville, from May 4 to May 15.

The exhibit will be judged by these artists: Jane Lutnick, sculptor and painter in oils, who is a graduate of Queens College, a member of Suburban as well as Huntington Township Art League. Her works have been shown at Heckscher Museum and in other Long Island Shows; by Frank Iovino, former president of Suburban Art League in Syosset who studied at the Art Students League in New York and is a painter of note; as well as by Richard Ericson, art instructor in Hicksville High School. Mr. Ericson has exhibited his paintings and graphics in Europe as well as in the United States and Mexico City, he acted as one of the judges at the Lipschitz show, and has recently had a one-man show in Valley Stream.

According to Joy Binger, art chairman, plans have been completed for an exhibit to be held at the East Nassau Medical Building, 350 So. Broadway, exhibit to start on May 18th until the first week in June. This will be a membership show to be followed by a one man show by Rose Wenck, painter and award winner who is a member of the L.I. Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, the Studio Art Group and Suburban Art League.

At a meeting held at the studio of Olga Hoebel, chairman for the Studio Art Group, plans were formulated to have Mrs. Dorothy Bedell, well known painter, hold a demonstration in oil painting at Hicksville Public Library on Friday, May 22 at 8 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Gets Scholarship

Stephen O'Brien was one of only fifteen students in the United States awarded a scholarship by the American Classical League for his exceptional record achieved in three years of Latin at Hicksville and for his intention of pursuing his study of Latin in college.
