Escalator Bids Due On Feb. 11

Bids for two escalators at the new upper level station of the Long Island Rail Road at Hicksville will be publicly opened and read February 11, it was announced by Councilman Edward J. Poulos, Board Majority Leader.

The Town Board approved a resolution directing Town Clerk William B. O'Keefe to arrange the bidding session at 3 p.m.

The proposed escalators will be toward the west end of the station platform adjacent to the two existing stairways. The estimated cost is $150,000. Plans call for installation of the moving stairs, general maintenance and emergency service, the latter by renewable annual contracts.

Engineers proposed that the escalators are to move in the upward direction only and that the stairways be used for descents. They serve both east and westbound platforms.

Councilman A. Carl Grunewald, who lives in Hicksville, has served as liaison for the board in the Hicksville grade crossing elimination program. He said he hoped the escalators would be in service later this year.

"The town administration has followed the project very closely," said Grunewald, "and has cooperated closely with Public Service and railroad officials to insure that residents have the most convenient and safe entrance and exit from the station platforms. Benefits to the entire community of Hicksville from the grade crossing elimination are becoming increasingly evident."

THINKING IT OVER

By Robert L. Morgan

In all of the talk for Federal aid to education a basic premise gets lost in the shuffle. That premise is whether federal aid to education, in anything but the oppressed areas, is really needed.

The talk now centers around whether it will be Constitutional or unconstitutional to share time in public schools with private schools. There is really no categorical answer that may be given to this question until it is tested in the courts which it undoubtedly will be if Federal aid passes.

But the basic question is still side-tracked. If Federal aid to education donates large sums for education, Federal income tax will have to go up, but will the local school taxes go down? We think not. Nor do we think that if state aid to education is increased greatly that local taxes will go down. But once again state taxes will go up.

Each year the local powers blame the state for local school tax increases, but we still doubt very much that when the state, and if the Federal government chips in, that local school taxes will go down. What may happen could be what happens when the head of a family gets a raise. The amount of money spent on essentials stays the same but the extras absorb the raise.

Now consider something else. When the state began to pay money towards public school education it handed the local school district rules and regulations that they must abide by in order to get the so-called aid. Such things as mandatory retirement contributions were imposed by the state and regulations of how many gyms were needed in each school among other things. But now with the Federal government getting into the picture shouldn't the local districts expect more regulations to justify the so-called aid? And, won't these regulations be more remote and more foolish coming from Washington? And what about the private and parochial school? Won't it have to accept some of these foolish regulations in order to qualify for the Federal government to give back the money that the government has already taxed out of the area? Is it all necessary? And will it be worth it?

Choice Of Sex Isn't Quite Possible Yet!

By C.A. Dean, M.D.

(Q) "A few months ago I read where a woman may be able to choose the sex of her child. Please tell me if anything new has been developed. I have five boys and really want a girl."

Mrs. A.R.C.

(A) What you read was only early results of some research work, which has not been universally accepted. Apparently one research doctor has found that there is an increased chance of having a boy if insemination occurs at the time of expected ovulation, and a girl if insemination occurs 36 to 48 hours before ovulation. Problems are obvious as the exact time of ovulation is often difficult to determine. Consult a gynecologist for further advice.

MEDITORIAL: If you were asked what disease was the greatest killer of mankind in the whole world, what would you answer -- cancer? Heart disease? The correct answer is malaria. Malaria not only kills more than any other disease but it also robs millions of others of their strength for long periods of time.

Malaria is a parasitic disease characterized by bouts of severe chills and high fever. The malarial parasites enter the blood stream through the bite of an infected mosquito or through the transfusion of blood from an infected donor.

Malaria is found mostly in countries around the equator such as in Central America, northern South America, Central Africa, Turkey, India, Burma, the Philippines. In the U.S.A malaria is not common although it is occasionally seen in the states of the southeast. Sporadic epidemics have been seen in California, New Jersey and Illinois.

Books To Stir The Young Conscience

By Russell Kirk

Parents sometimes inquire of this commentator what books they should get for their children to improve upon the very dull literary diet offered in too many schools nowadays. A slightly advanced version of the Dick-and-Jane, run-Sport-run motif is not calculated to rouse the moral imagination.

Among the many good books I recommend, I emphasize some that teach enduring truth through fantasy. Through myth and allegory, we come to know reality better -- and far less painfully -- than we would learn it in the school of hard knocks.

There are certain great fantasies which can be read with pleasure and profit by any intelligent child between the ages of six and sixteen. Indeed, adults learn afresh by reading these books aloud to their children.

In this realm, I always commend the romances of George MacDonald -- which greatly influenced, in youth and in maturity, G. K. Chesterton and C. S. Lewis. These are 'The Princess and the Goblin', 'The Princess and Curdie', and 'At the Back of the North Wind'. From the fairy godmother in the attic to the goblins in the labyrinth beneath the collar, the fantastic characters of MacDonald are real; that is, they teach the nature of good and evil in mankind.

Probably the best boys' book -- or rather, series of books -- of this century is J.R.R. Tolkien's 'The Lord of the Rings.' (Like the others I name here, this is in print, and can be got from any bookseller.) Tolkien's three volumes commence as a boys' adventure yarn, that is; but the style and seriousness increase as the long fantasy progresses, and a boy grows up as he reads. Professor Tolkien creates a whole world outside time and space, in which a terrible power of evil besets a broken land; by the hardihood and sacrifice of a little band, the consummate warlock of the Dark Tower is undone at last. For readers a little younger, a slim book which is a kind of prelude to this trilogy ought to be got: Tolkien's 'The Hobbit.' The adult reader, incidentally, scarcely will be able to carry on his duties in the workaday world until he has finished the 1200 pages of the 'Rings,' you have been warned.

Charles Kingsley's Victorian moral allegory, 'Water Babies', stands the test of time. (I'm reading that to my wife, while she endures a bad cold; and though she has a B.A., she is overjoyed.) Don't neglect John Ruskin's 'The King of the Golden River,' with little Gluck and his Black Brothers who turn into Black Stones. From such imagery, we learn what it is to be truly human; while from the typical grade-school reader, we learn -- at best -- a mere drab Togetherness.

Many parents know the 'Perelandra' trilogy of C. S. Lewis, meant for mature minds. Quite as imaginative and symbolic, but written for children, are Lewis' Narnia stories, commencing with 'The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe.' A great scholar, Lewis also knew how to tickle the fancy of the young -- though he had no children of his own.

Second thought passing stymied Hicksville High in the first half as it fell behind 26-13 to visiting Island Trees. The Comets tried to avert a mild upset in the non-league encounter with a furious fourth period rally but fell short, 52-47.

It was late in the third period that the tally against read 39-26. Coach Ed Petro moved Greg Hoberock into the top of the key and when he got the quick pass he helped riddle the Island Trees zone. He hit with four baskets in a drive that drew Hicksville to 44-42 with three minutes remaining.

At that point the tempo of the game outraced the Comets. The Orange made six mechanical mistakes in the last 120 seconds and lost the issue.

Schedule Change -- The Hicksville High basketball game against MacArthur scheduled for this Friday night at MacArthur will be played at 4:15 p.m. on Friday afternoon.

Plans to have the contest played Saturday afternoon and be broadcast on a Long Island Radio Station were vetoed by Hicksville.

Hicksville will win this important notch in its bid for second place and a spot in the Nassau playoffs: HICKSVILLE 57, MacArthur 53

The Hicksville program announced that six foot six inch Guy Van Wagenen might be ready for limited action against MacArthur. It took many people by surprise since he was not expected back this season after breaking his wrist rather severely in December. It would be a great asset if Hicksville could hold on and get a late February run out of him.

The Hicksville High matmen are working towards the schools first divisional championship in wrestling. Ralph Sonntag has won eight straight matches and is undefeated to pace the orange for coach Fred Recher.

The team has a match at Wheatley this Friday afternoon and rolls out the mats for Bethpage this coming Tuesday in another 4:00 p.m. date.

Competing on the wrestling program are Donn Bongo, Pete Ingvaldstad, George Water, Bill Brock, Bruce Yatras, Carl Wiberg, Greg Vatier, Howard

L.I. DUCKS: NO QUACKS ON ICE!

The Long Island Ducks, entering their third season in the Eastern Hockey League, are being touted as contenders for the League's Northern Division Championship. Led by Gene Achymichuk (at right) of Neconsit, L.I., who topped the League's scoring in 62-63, the Ducks play at the L.I. Arena in Commack, against 5 other teams in their Division. Their opponents include the New York Rovers whom they meet in Madison Square Garden, and whom they beat early this season. (Graphic News Photos)

Fuel Oil Use Measured

An analysis of fuel consumption on Long Island has revealed that "each additional degree on a thermostat setting results in only 3% additional fuel consumption," it was reported to the January meeting of the Oil Heat Institute of Long Island by William R. Kampfer, president.

Mr. Kampfer told the representatives of the 220-member Nassau-Suffolk trade association in the Sky Club, Garden City, that "homeowners know that the more fuel they burn -- the warmer their houses are. However, they have never actually determined how much the higher temperatures cost."

He reported that "Long Island homes (90% use oil heat) can use a simple rule of thumb in determining fuel consumption increase. About 3% additional fuel is used for each degree of higher temperature. Mr. Kampfer added:

"Thus, if you've been keeping your thermostat at an even 70 degrees, and if your annual fuel bill has been $200, you would spend about 50¢ per month on a yearly basis extra, if you changed the habitual thermostat setting to 71 degrees."

BEAUTY SECRETS

By Victor of Vilu

Is Your Hair on a Diet?

Is your hair starving? Is it suffering from lack of proper nutrition? Sounds ridiculous, and yet it's a fact - proper hair care begins with proper diet. If your hair is to have that "just right" look, that lustrous rich texture, it must be fed, not from the outside, but from the inside. Your Vilu Beauty Salon specialist can only work on your hair as she finds it - but if you want to give it a healthy, beautiful look, this can only be achieved by proper diet.

Why is this so? Because the texture, color, luster, and body of your hair has its roots right in your own body cells. Your body chemistry is tied in mysteriously with all your other bodily functions. A healthy body produces healthy hair - and by healthy hair I mean hair that moulds itself to any beauty frame you choose. Healthy hair is hair that has a beauty all its own, even before you apply anything to it.

Your beauty operator knows a healthy head of hair the moment she digs her skilled fingers into it. She enjoys working with it and it is no problem to work it into any style you or she chooses. However, when she works with hair that is limp and scraggly, without life, body or built-in lustre, she has her work cut out for her and her first job is to correct as well as she can, what nature failed to provide. Ultimately, being the skilled technician she is, a Vilu operator will give your hair all the beauty she sets out to achieve.

How to achieve healthy hair? With proper diet! A balanced diet of proteins like cottage cheese, fish and meat, grains like bread, or fruit juices and vegetable oils, give you that balance. Add more oil, like olive oil, wheat germ oil and others in your salads and in your cooking, if your hair has a tendency to be dry and thin. You'll be amazed how proper dieting helps give your hair that healthy look.

Avoid excessive carbohydrates, starches, sugar and animal fats in your daily intake of food. They will either starve your body and your hair or else give it more fat and oil than it can absorb. The result? Oily hair, or hair that is dry as a bone. Pass up the extra cakes and ice cream, the soda pop and potatoes. Substitute beauty-giving foods, as mentioned above.

Add to proper diet, a program of proper exercise and a full program of rest. Your skin your hair, your whole body will glow with health. Not only will you tone up your whole system and feel like a million - you'll look like a million.

The Air Jet set may be interested in an examination given the Royal Australian Air Force trainees where this problem was presented: "What is the first thing you would do if you were piloting an aircraft and the Queen of England fell out of the rear exit door?" The trainees answers varied a good deal. With such as, "I'd swoop down and try to catch her," said one hopeful, "I'd commit suicide," said another, "Just disappear," one answered. The approved solution -- "adjust tabs to compensate for reduced weight in the rear section."...A Garden City dowager upon arriving late at a dinner party apologized to her hostess thusly: "Oh, dear please excuse me for arriving so late, my chauffeur lost his cap so I had to come by taxi."...Mrs. S. Groomly, Bethpage, bought four extra turkey legs from her butcher, sewed them neatly onto the turkey and overwhelmed her family by serving the six legged bird at her husband's birthday dinner. "For once," said Peggy, "there were enough drumsticks to go around..."Manorhaven's Dane Hermansky, once tripped while ice skating and injured his thigh two stitches worth. The Doc who sewed the kid's injury, was so understanding and kind that young Dane said, "I bet you were once injured when you were a kid." The doctor said, "Yes, I was injured once when ice-skating, on the same pond as you, it required two stitches. I was about your age then too." When it was announced that reporter Edgar May, had won the Pulitzer Prize for local reporting, congratulatory telegrams began flooding the editorial room. The number of wires got up to 1200, then one arrived that gave us a laugh. It thanked Mr. May for the new business, and was signed by the district manager of Western Union...A sign warning drivers, "Slow Dears Cross Here" near Westbury, slows up many more drivers than the sign it replaced which read "Slow, Children Cross Here."...Port Washington's Fred Lohmann tells of the doubting Thomas who doubted that the giant computer was for real. To prove it he inserted the questions "Where is my father?" Moments later the computer answered "Your father is in Chicago." The questioner smirked out with, "I told you this thing was a phony, my father's been dead for ten years." The computer's operator prevailed upon him to re-phrase the question to "where's my mother's husband?" The wise-guy nearly fainted when the computer pushed out this answer, "Your mother's husband has been dead ten years, but your father is still in Chicago!" (Poor fellow)...Many hospitals have plaques showing names of contributors to their building funds. Near the operating room of one Brooklyn Institution is a beautiful plaque giving credit to "The Meat Cutter's Local." (ouch) Astute Advice: Seems that a farmer whose potato crop had done very poorly decided to borrow (steal) a few bushels from a neighboring farmer. On a dark night the "borrower" and his ten year old son headed for a distant corner of his neighbor's field. When they reached the line separating the two fields, the father looked furtively to the right, to the left, ahead and behind. Just as he was about to step onto the neighbor's heavily laden acres of potatoes, the silence was broken by his son, "Daddy," he said, "you forgot to look up."...Carl Hoppli's thriving Westbury Manor has added venison steak or ragout to its already elegant varied menu...If You Please, yum, yum...

Zoo Story To Be Given

Art Forms Creative Center, Inc., is an ambitious and exciting venture in Levittown to create a non-profit community center offering workshops in the arts for both children (small 'uns and big 'uns) and adults. In character with what promises to be an excellent and artistic approach to the inevitable fund-raising problems, Art Forms is presenting The Lona Island Studio Theatre's production of Edward Albee's "Zoo Story" on Friday, Feb. 5th at 9 p.m. The donation of $1.50 includes an art exhibit and espresso. The play is to be shown at the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, corner of Old Country Road and Jerusalem Ave., Hicksville. For ticket information and reservations call PY 6-4438 or PY 6-3233. "Zoo Story," which is also being shown in New York at this time, offers our community the opportunity to see this much-discussed one-act play by Edward Albee, one of America's most controversial and leading playwrights.
