THINKING IT OVER

By Robert L. Morgan

There is a great deal of talk about the school dropout and what to do for those pupils who have no interest or ability to pursue a college career.

The answer that is propounded very often is bigger vocational schools and an expansion of the public school system to provide this form of training.

On the surface this appears to be the all-purpose answer to a very real problem, but is far from being what it appears.

More vocational schools are needed only for training in fields that cannot give the training on the job.

For instance vocational school training may be needed to learn barbering, but a printer can probably learn the craft best in a regular operating print shop.

What we are endeavoring to point out here is that large scale building of vocational schools could turn out to be a large-scale waste of tax money and a needless drain on taxpayers, if another bandwagon is pushed by well meaning people who jump on a bandwagon and repeat slogans without thinking first.

When the GI bill was invented during the second World War, it formed the basis and a testing ground for important advances in education. Under this Bill Veterans were given an allowance to go to schools and colleges of their choice. The petty bickering about what church might benefit from increased enrollment in its schools was put aside. At the same time provision was made for the ex-GI who did not want to go to school. This provision was on the job training. It was really a vocational school using private enterprise as its classroom. The trainee was subsidized. On the job he used far more elaborate equipment than available in schools, he worked a regular day and was expected to produce something.

Allowing for abuses, which arise in any system, the GI on the job training was a success. Why then do we not see those people sincerely interested in the problem of the school dropout and non-college bound student pushing plans to revive this free enterprise form of schooling instead of larger and larger vocational schools?

Hypertension Tumor Can Be Removed

By C. A. Dean, M.D.

(Q) "A friend of mine recently had an operation to cure hypertension. He said they removed a tumor. Is there such a tumor that will produce high blood pressure? I know this fellow had his troubles for a long time."

Mr. F.I.

(A) There is such a tumor. It usually is found in the adrenal glands and removing it will usually cure the high blood pressure. This represents one form of curable hypertension. In most cases of hypertension, however, such a specific cause cannot be found.

MEDITORIAL: Shortly spring will awaken the hibernating man. With winter quickly fading, the urge to get out and enjoy the new beauties of nature increases. Before this can be done, other pressing chores must be finished, both outside and inside the house. The increased hazards and dangers attached to the new season also become apparent.

Roads and highways will become more congested with people seeking new forms of relaxation. This will require even more care and safety in driving. In the winter, cars spend more time in the garage than out and tend to get rusty. Driving knowhow can also get rusty, so preparations to eliminate this and increase safety are mandatory.

In and around the house, cleanup, painting, spraying and in general, use of potentially harmful instruments and chemicals will increase. Ladders must be checked for sturdiness and safety. Also exert care in following directions when using insecticides, pesticides and other chemicals in order to prevent injury to children and yourself. Make sure in awakening from winter hibernation, that safety doesn't sleep on.

The Detroit Of South Africa

By Russell Kirk

From Little Stone Fort Frederick (built in 1799), one looks down upon the pleasant city of Port Elizabeth, with its old houses, its broad beaches -- and its factories. Calling itself "the Detroit of Africa," Port Elizabeth is the site of big General Motors and Ford plants. As the Orange River hydroelectric scheme develops, Port Elizabeth will be a bigger industrial center still.

To the south of Port Elizabeth, all is empty ocean, right to Antarctica. A thousand miles to the north of Port Elizabeth, the social chaos of modern Central Africa begins. Yet though between the devil and the deep blue sea, Port Elizabeth is confident, immensely prosperous, and suffused with fair prospects. It has a new university -- and a new automobile engine factory, being built by General Motors at a cost of nearly $30 million.

South Africa's industrial and commercial success is even more conspicuous at the bigger cities of Johannesburg, Cape Town and Durban. Gold and diamonds were the foundation of the Republic's economic triumph, but now great economic diversity is evident. This country has all major resources except oil and water-power: the latter is being developed, and there are hopes even of striking oil. About 50,000 white immigrants pour into the Republic annually -- and many Bantu immigrants from the anarchic "emergent" African states of Central Africa. European and American radical journalists write lugubriously about the prospect of revolution and violent racial conflict in South Africa, making comparisons with Algeria and the Congo. (It is so very nice to talk about exciting revolutions -- so long as they are far away and one's interests aren't involved.) But nothing of the sort is going to happen in South Africa.

The hardy Afrikaans (Boer), and British folk who rule the Republic of South Africa do not mean to lose control of their country, where the ancestors of some of them settled nearly three centuries ago. To suggest that "African nationalism" will engulf the modern cities and the smiling countryside of South Africa is like suggesting that Manhattan Island will be conquered by its original Indian possessors, or that Los Angeles will revert to the Diggrs.

Economically, South Africa appears destined to benefit from an annual increase in real income of 5 per cent, for a long time to come. The nation's fiscal position will be one of the strongest in the world, if the pound sterling and the dollar are devaluated; for that would mean, probably, a doubling of the price of gold, with consequent increase of governmental revenues and greater purchasing-power for the Republic in international trade: the fruit of the mines of the Rand.

As prosperity waxes, the social problems of South Africa will diminish. More and more will be done, in part through public expenditures, to improve conditions for the Bantus, the Colored, and the Indian element of the population -- who scarcely are in a revolutionary mood today, anyway.

I wouldn't be at all surprised, indeed, if a dollar invested at Port Elizabeth should turn out to be a brighter prospect than a dollar invested at Detroit.

Books Trigger Anti-School Snoop Bills

By Edward J. VanAllen

The fight against snooping in the public schools of New York State has begun to warm up.

Already two bills which would bar "psychological probing" and the use of projective technique tests on school children, including the mentally retarded and physically handicapped, unless written parental consent is given beforehand, have been filed in both houses of the New York State Legislature. And it is believed that other legislators will file somewhat similar anti-school snoop bills soon.

The two bills against uncontrolled psychological probing of school children were filed by State Senator Bernard G. Gordon of Peekskill and Assemblyman John J.S. Mead of Waccabuc, New York. They would require (1) that the schools let the parent, guardian, or other person having custody of the child know beforehand about their intention to subject the child to psychological testing; (2) written consent from the parent; and (3) that official evaluations be made available to the parent or other person giving consent. At present, many school administrators, psychologists, and school boards entertain the notion that the schools may subject children to any kind of mental health examination they choose without parental consent, despite some states law which prohibit lay psychologists from practicing medicine.

The introduction of the anti-snooping bills was seen as an indication of the impact of such books as "The Branded Child" by Edward J. Van Allen, which spotlights family-privacy invading in the schools by means of psychological tests and other snoop devices; "The Brain Watchers" by Martin L. Gross and "The Naked Society" by Vance Packard, both of which take a dim view of certain psychological testing practices in the schools; and possibly two or three other books which touch on the subject.

"The Branded Child" in particular has been causing quite a stir in New York State. In the Harborfields School District in Suffolk County, Long Island, for example, it was reported this week that what are styled as the "liberals of the community" are out to smear the book, going so far as to insert literature in books being circulated in the area pooh-poohing the contents of "The Branded Child" and claiming that the practices it exposes are not prevalent in the Harborfields District. But it was learned that among the projective technique type tests in use in the district are the Rorschach Inkblot, the Thematic Apperception Test, and The Blacky Pictures, a psychosexual test whose use was discontinued in the Hicksville, New York schools after the test figured in a hot school board race.

The author of "The Branded Child" has scored the use of the Rorschach and Thematic Apperception Test (TAT) especially, charging that "lay psychologists often use these tests in concert to arrive at findings of mental illness in school children, even though they, the lay psychologists, are not medical doctors and even though the granddaddy of the TAT tests, in particular, warns the tester that the test is unreliable. Thus, the tester is not only unscientific, but runs the risk of being chargeable with malpractice as well.

"The Blacky Test", Van Allen continued, "goes so far as to warn the tester that there is 'danger' of the patient's (school child's) 'being traumatized' in being subjected to the psychosex test. 'Yet,' said Van Allen, 'projective technique tests like these are used freely in many school districts with taxpayer-paid psychologists claiming -- and school boards backing them up -- that parents have no say in what kind of psycho-snooping tests their children are to be subjected to in the schools.'

"The Branded Child" author is not alone in objecting to what are tantamount to psychiatric, not simply psychological, practices in the public schools. Thomas S. Szasz, M.D., a member of the faculty of Upstate Medical Center, State University of New York, said in an article entitled, "Psychiatry in Public Schools? No" (printed in "Teachers College Record" October, 1964, Vol. 66, pp. 57-63):

"I consider the introduction of psychiatric services into our school system undesirable because I believe that: '1. When a child is diagnosed as mentally ill and when this 'fact' becomes public knowledge -- which is bound to happen if the psychiatrist is an employee of the school -- that the child is psychologically degraded and socially handicapped. It is unlikely that the 'therapy' which the school can provide will compensate the child for the harm that will accrue to him as a result of having been publicly defined as mentally ill.'

Dr. Szasz also said that education is "likely to suffer" in schools that pay more attention to "mental health" than education. And, questioning the ethics of applying "psychiatric practices" in the schools to "so-called mentally ill persons," the doctor said:

"Usually, those most eager to get religion out of the public school are the most eager to get psychiatry into it."

Interestingly, the cumulative record of a deaf, cerebral palsied child in the Levittown, New York, School District, describes the child's mother as "hostile, anxious, overprotective," and obliquely criticizes her for her religious beliefs. In the record are such religious references as "It is her opinion that 'God sent Tommy for a purpose' and 'she ... evoked the power of God in getting service for Tommy' -- the implication clearly and inescapably being that there is something wrong with a mother who asks God's help on behalf of her handicapped child.

Letters

Dear Mrs. Chapak,

After reading the first two paragraphs of your letter, printed in the Mid Island Times, I was curious as to whether you were attempting to lend support to Mr. Lawrence because both you and he, for the first time in many years, had supported the same political candidate, or whether you were insuring your seat at the introduction of Mr. Bruno's name immediately established that your "naive" questions were really an extension of the slimy tactics which are so much a part of the educational organization that you serve so well.

For all - I am not Mr. Bruno's follower; nor does he follow me. But, I am not opposed to agreeing with him, or anyone else when the situation demands.

You have raised several questions which involve the educational system of Hicksville. Since we have discussed the same questions in the past, you are aware that our views are similar. You are also aware that I attend school board meetings; that I attended both full sessions involving the recent book banning, while you did not. Please re-read items 1, 4, and 5 in my recent letter, and then take the time to hear the tape recordings from both meetings. It is obvious that you have been misinformed.

You stated that Mr. Bruno is responsible for our present book review policy. I do not know who moved the resolution, or who voted for it, but I do know that four votes are necessary for quorum.

You stated that Mr. Lawrence's motion would have permitted the acceptance of Stormer's book. Mr. Lawrence's resolution was introduced after the book was banned. Since Mr. Stormer is not a Communist, how would Mr. Lawrence's resolution, to admit Communist authored books, have admitted his book?

The National Education Association suggests that students (1) investigate and compare many sources of information, (2) recognize the author's purpose, viewpoint, and prejudices, and (3) be able to sort out opinion from fact. This is impossible for our students under our present policy. It is time that the board members think and act anew, but first they must eliminate the personal conflicts which obscure and obstruct the reforms so urgently needed. At the present time we seek Communist author's names on the State Attorney's list. The State Attorney's list, lists only subversive organizations. Organizations do not write books. Besides Mr. Bruno, Mr. McCormack was the only other board member capable of recognizing this danger, and voted with Mr. Bruno to correct it. All other members voted against. I am sorry to say that Mr. McCormack has since been labeled "soft on Communism" in spite of his efforts. It is apparent that someone else does not have all the facts straight.

It is important that all understand that a man is not a Communist if he votes against a book or reads a Communist authored book.

Mr. Hornbostel recently stated that the board would pass a new resolution, which will allow all gift books to be admitted in the future. Final determination as to whether the book will be placed on the shelves, or in the furnace will be left to the school authorities. The board will thus be free of future censorship labels, but who will insure that our children's democratic heritage be safeguarded? Love of, and pride in one's country does not occur by a process of osmosis. Neither can you erase a mind, once it is damaged, the way you can erase a blackboard. (Case in point, Lee Harvey Oswald.) I believe our teachers do a fine job with the tools that are available to them. I wish I could say the same for the board.

Although the recent book banning touched off our present furor, the people of this community are giving vent to their accumulated dissatisfactions against a series of anti-democratic actions, which have been promoted by this school board over a two year period. Hicksville has become a battlefield where men and women, who love freedom, have taken a stand to fight and toil to defend it.

Why don't you join, Mrs. Chapak?

Sincerely
Florence Infantino

Man's Extremity

By PAUL HARVEY

If I ever stop writing this column, it's going to be a day like today. I'll look across this desk, piled with files on a dozen questions hungering for answers which I cannot provide.

A pregnant woman is stabbed eleven times in a New York hospital, a girl in Chicago has acid thrown on her legs, some nut threatens to blow up an airliner...

If we headline these perverts, we incite others.

If we don't, we leave decent people unwarned.

And another thing:

Doctors, allowing long lines in the waiting room, impersonal production-line service, inadvertently aid the cause of socializing medicine in the United States.

If we tell those doctors to revert to "private" practice, house calls, deliberate consultation -- then they'll necessarily see fewer patients and leave those long lines of sick people with no place to go. Thus we encourage further agitation for "state medicine," which worsens the conditions we want to correct. I don't know the answer. And anybody presuming to occupy these precious inches of space should have an R/x for everything.

I want terminal patients to be allowed to die with dignity, rather than to be kept alive mechanically -- but whom shall we allow to say "when"?

And in Vietnam...

And in Africa...

This column could provide you with a very convincing case for getting out, and an equally convincing case for jumping all the way in.

The embarrassing truth is that I don't know which course to urge. In decisions so critical, the blind must not presume to lead.

In my upper left hand desk drawer is a documented essay on the alliance of courts, politicians and police in sydicate cities. But the last paragraph includes no recommendation for improving the situation. An emotional harangue without a constructive conclusion seems somehow sadistic. So you may never read that essay.

Yesterday's student watches today's students with understanding and pity. For most material things we used to save and work and dream; today's young folks "charge it."

This leaves their time and effort and dreams available for gang fights, kookle causes, attacking teachers, picketing, panty raids and promiscuity.

Sometimes it seems the only cure for what ails them would be another acute depression, except that that cure might be more fatal than this sickness.

Of course, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." There is a remedy for most all that ails us which is as simple as "love thy neighbor..." as uncomplicated as "do unto others..."; but a fellow has to be careful talking like that.

truck drivers or hairdressers? newlyweds or grandparents? city folks or farmers?

Who buys more Savings Bonds?

As statistical-minded as we are today, the Treasury Department can't answer that question.

The Treasury does know that U. S. Savings Bonds are owned by tens of millions of families. So it might be safe to assume that people in every walk of life belong to this "savings club."

This is a happy fact for the United States, and for the free peoples of the earth. For Savings Bond dollars are playing an important role today in the making of history.

This $46 billion reserve in the government's hands is working vigorously today to help our country in the major struggle to defend freedom.

At the same time, Savings Bonds help build your personal purchasing power by paying good interest and providing a method of saving that's unconditionally safe and readily cashable. And the higher your purchasing power, the better it speaks for our system.

It all adds up to one of the best ways you can save money and at the same time help your country. Start buying Bonds next payday—through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or from any bank—and see if you don't feel pretty good about it.

Quick facts about U. S. Savings Bonds

- You get $4 for every $3 at maturity
- Your Bonds are replaced free if lost, stolen or destroyed
- You can get your money anytime
- You can save automatically on Payroll Savings

"What's so appealing about the MEENAN man?"

"He's there when I need him!"

Meenan really cares! I found that out the time we needed our oil burner adjusted. There I was with the three kids, the thermostat going down, down, down—and Harry away on a trip. Call Meenan, I said to myself. So call Meenan I did. And were they ever nice! 1-2-3 they had a man here—he said "Don't worry lady." And you know what? I knew he meant it. Said he'd fix it in no time and before long that heat was coming out of the radiators again. Was I ever relieved. That's why we depend on the Meenan man. He's there when you need him. We've been a Meenan family for the past 15 years.

The showdown for the last playoff spot in the County championship tournament will take place this Friday night at Hicksville.

MacArthur and Hicksville will battle it out for the right not to be excluded and it is a strong point of honor if not of importance.

Taking the bit in the last minute of play, Hicksville staved off Plainedge 57-49 in the upset that provided the staging of Friday's contest.

Hicksville had enjoyed a 12 point lead but as always the failure from the foul line --- the Comets missed eight straight before Jim Bergholtz sunk one with 2:43 to go -- rallied the opposition.

With 1:23 remaining the score moved to 50-49 buy Guy Van Wagenen deposited two important buckets to turn back the Red Devils. Van Wagenen had 24 points and Bill Corrigan netted 15.

MacArthur overtook Hicksville in the first game of the season 52 - 49 -- the Comets blew seven from the foul line in the last three minutes -- and comes in the favorite for the decisive contest.

On Tuesday night Hicksville concludes the court campaign with a visit to Plainview. It was the same trouble in that first game with the Gulls. The Comets froze on the foul line and lost 60-59.

We expect the Comets will make the playoffs. HICKSVILLE 45, Plainview 43

HICKSVILLE 59, MacArthur 49

When our friends from MacArthur visit the Hicksville gym this Friday night they will find a bright and gleaming hall. A refurbishing job has been successfully undertaken and the gym is clean and neat. New lights will be added this spring to remove it from the dark ages. The community no longer need be embarrassed by its condition.

The football series with Island Trees is at an end. The gritty school has asked out of its commitment to Hicksville and it has been granted. Island Trees won the first two games in the series but has dropped the last four. Hicksville's stinging 34-19 upset of its divisional championship team last fall was the final blow.

Hicksville is a much bigger school and the feeling is Island Trees should play with its own comparative size.

Athletic Director Lou Millevolte is now trying to bring a major school to the Hicksville football slate for a non-league encounter.

RABBIT SHELTERS

RABBITS ARE ATTRACTED TO AND THRIVE IN AREAS HAVING ABUNDANT FOOD AND SHELTERS TO HIDE WITHIN WHEN PREDATORS APPEAR.

IF SHELTERS ARE SCARCE, FELL A SMALL TREE HERE AND THERE FOR HIDE OUTS. TO KEEP FALLEN TREES ALIVE, DON'T CUT TRUNKS COMPLETELY THROUGH, ONLY FAIR ENOUGH SO YOU CAN PUSH 'EM OVER. THUS, FOLIAGE CONTINUES ITS YEARLY COVER, NOT ROTTING AWAY AS BRUSH PILES WILL DO.
