Optimism for the New Year is reflected in the smiles of newly reelected officers of the board of directors of Woodward Mental Health Center in Freeport, secretary Doris Brody of Woodbury, and treasurer Martin Gach of Roslyn. Their installation took place at a recent dinner meeting at the center. A nonprofit, voluntary agency, Woodward offers a day long program of mental health care, education and rehabilitation to emotionally disturbed youth, ages 3-21, without cost of their families.

Town Initiates In-Step Program

A resolution creating an in-school training and employment program known as In-Step, was approved by the Oyster Bay Town Board according to Oyster Bay Town Councilman Kenneth S. Diamond.

Diamond said, "a recent federal grant under the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) will allow the Town's Department of Intergovernmental Affairs, Division of Employment and Training to offer youngsters in local school districts work experience and pre-employment training."

School districts encompassed by the Towns of Oyster Bay, North Hempstead and the City of Glen Cove will offer to economically disadvantaged youths between the ages of 16 and 21, an opportunity to earn $3.35 per hour for up to 15 hours of work each week.

Diamond added, "the program will begin on January 7 and continue through June 30. Along with the work experience, the enrolled high school students will be taught work maturity skills such as filling out job applications and writing resumes. District coordinators will hold bi-weekly meetings to guide the youngsters in these and other essential skills as well as monitor their work progress."

To learn more about eligibility requirements contact the Department of Intergovernmental Affairs, Division of Employment and Training, 977 Hicksville Road, Massapequa, New York 11758, or call 795-1000, ext. 750 and 751.

Mid Island Y Presents Musical

The Mid-Island YM-YWHA, 45 Manetto Hill Road, Plainview, is programming a "Y" Spectacular on Sunday, January 20 from 3:30 to 6 p.m. The musical "Story Tales" is being presented by the Jewish Repertory Theatre in their only appearance this season in Nassau County. Following the performance, a box supper and special entertainment is being offered.

This Sunday afternoon special has been planned by the "Y" so that dad can watch the Super Bowl football game at home in splendid isolation. Kids and adults not interested in watching football will spend an interesting afternoon away from the television set. The program is one that will be enjoyed by mothers, kids, and grandparents.

Ticket prices, including a box supper and special entertainment as well as "Story Tales", are $7 per person for members; $9 for non-members. Dinner reservations must be made by January 14. Show tickets only will cost $3 for members and $5 for non-members.

Zone Change Request Denied

The Oyster Bay Town Board has denied a request for a zone change from "D" residence to "R-O" residence-office district in Plainview, according to Town Councilman John Venditto.

"The applicants, Myron W. Goldstein and Donna Goldstein, were seeking the change of zone in order to operate a physical therapy center," Venditto explained. "The property is located at 2 Hope Drive on the southwest corner of Old Country Road and Hope Drive."

A public hearing on the zone change request was held on October 30.

Town Tax Payments Due

Oyster Bay Town Receiver of Taxes Gary F. Musiello reminds residents that the first half of the 1985 General Tax Levy is due on January 1 but may be paid without penalty through February 10.

"By law, a taxpayer has a 40 day grace period from the date the tax is due, during which time payment may be made without any penalty," Musiello stated. "After that 40 days, a penalty is attached for each month the tax remains unpaid."

When paying in person at the Tax Office citizens are reminded to bring the entire tax bill with their payment. Payment being made by mail should include Stub #1 only or Stubs #1 and #2 if the entire tax for the year is being paid.

Musiello also cautioned residents not to write, cut, fold, staple or otherwise deface the tax stubs since these will cause the computer to reject the payment.

Our movement chairman Edward Kleniewski, reported to the membership about our monument at the Hicksville Junior High School on Jerusalem Avenue and Fourth Street. There is too much vandalism. You see soda cans, and beer bottles around the area, bushes and shrubbery are too high and the grass is not growing. We as a Veterans group are very concerned about the War Monument. We would like to see all the bushes and shrubbery cut down and grass growing and lights to shine on the monument.

Typing isn't a sissy skill

By Williard Abraham
Ph.D.

Q. My 14-year-old boy has a peculiar course request for next semester and both my husband and I feel it may not be a good choice. He wants to take up typing and we think that's a mistake.

It's really still a woman's job skill and job involvement, even in these days and we believe that it would be a worthless activity for him.

The arguments have started and to end them we'd like your advice.

A. If you don't watch out, a lot of angry people are going to be after you!

During recent years especially (and probably at least since World War II) there have been innumerable cross-over jobs and related activities. Journalists and other writers (long before that war), computer personnel (more recently), teachers and many others find that typing skills come in very handy. College students certainly do to meet some of their assignment requirements.

Boys are taking home economics courses, girls enroll in ones related to automotive repair, and why not?

Q. I can't understand very clearly everything my 2-year-old says, but one remark comes out of his mouth very clearly. It comes with different words like "My own self," "Do it," "Me do it," "I can," "Let me," "Don't you."

He almost sounds like he's trying to take over the world, and it's all happened quite suddenly.

I think I need some advice from you on how to handle all this. This parenthood business is all new to me!

A. It's "all new" to most of us. After all, what preparation did we ever get for it?

He's not really trying to take over the world, just his little piece of it. He has so many new capabilities he wants to try out — putting on clothes, feeding himself, playing with toys, looking at picture books, going to the bathroom, and so much more.

This important transition period won't go smoothly for either him or you. His controls and manipulative skills will take a lot of sharpening during the next few years.

Letting him experiment, helping him when he asks for or needs it, and supervising the scene when there's a potential danger are all factors to consider.

It's really exciting to see the young ones begin to take care of their lives. It is just among the first steps in cutting "the silver cord" (title of an old mother-son Broadway play).

Town Awards Tennis Contracts

Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Joseph Colby announced Town Board approval of a contract award for reconstruction and repairs to thirty Town tennis courts.

Colby said, "This contract award is for needed improvements to Town tennis courts located within the Town's six community parks."

"Some tennis courts are slated for complete reconstruction," Colby continued, "while others will require resurfacing. Net and post repairs, curb repairs and repainting of court lines will be done where needed."

The Town project will be scheduled so as to permit some court space to be utilized at each facility during the course of the construction.

The construction contract has been awarded to Rason Asphalt, Inc., the low bidder, in the amount of $207,640. It is anticipated that the work will begin as soon as in early spring as weather permits.

"At the rate I was going, in ten years I'd have about $2000 saved."

I have a pretty good job. I've never been out of work. I've received regular promotions. The only thing I've never been able to do is save money.

One day I overheard my secretary talking about how much she'd saved buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. I was astounded.

Then I looked at my bankbook. I figured out how much my average yearly savings had been since I'd been working. And I almost cried. At the rate I was going, in ten years I'd have about $2000 saved.

Oh, some years I'd save three or four hundred (nine hundred one year), but it didn't last long. Something would always come up and I'd take it out and spend it. I always figured one of these days I'd bear down and build up a nest egg.

Since nothing else seemed to work, I decided to give the Payroll Savings Plan a try. I should be able to save as much as my secretary. If it worked for her it should work for me.

It turned out to be very easy. They take a little out of each paycheck toward Bonds, so that's a portion of your pay you're not tempted to spend. Not only is it easy but it's safe. The Bonds are piling up and so is the interest. And, by the way, the interest is guaranteed.

I never thought much about Bonds before but it's hard to find a better return on such a small, initial outlay.

When I get enough saved I may look into other things. But as for right now, it's the best, easiest way I know of to save. Actually, it's the only way that works for me.

I started late, but better late than never.

Many Answers To Wish For The Coming Year

Many answers were received from input callers on what would be a wish for the New Year for the World in response to this question: "If you had but one wish for the world for the year 1985 what would it be?" Here are some of the answers:

HEALTHY IDEA

While it might be trite I sincerely hope that good health will be the single wish granted to most people during the new year. Because, whether you know it or not, there is not really much that can be done if you are suffering in bad health. My wish would be that those who are very sick would feel better and that in so doing more people would be able to enjoy life. This is a wish that money cannot buy. K.T.

PEACE ON EARTH

Peace on Earth is the often repeated slogan at Christmastime. But it really should be the motto during the entire year and the most sought after thing for all nations. Unfortunately greed and self gain cloud the issue and there are fights, wars and plundering. But peace for the world would be the greatest gift if we were entitled to but one wish. J.R.

FEED THE WORLD

If we could do only one thing next year the eradication of hunger in the world would be the most important thing to do. We, who have all of the food and often more than we can use, find it hard to completely understand the feelings of those people who do not have enough to eat. Many countries do not have the resources we have to produce food so it is our duty to help feed the world when it is unable to do it for itself. G.R.

FREEDOM

My wish for the world would be complete freedom for everyone to help build great societies. While others will focus on specific problems, the way that change can be brought about is not through stop-gap measures but through a total shift to world government by the people. It is true that there will have to be some restraints on people who would use freedom to injure others but there is little need for the restrictive governments in South Africa and the mismanagement of food supplies that has taken place in Ethiopia. Individual freedom will solve problems that governments cannot. K.E.

GOLDEN RULE

The single wish that I have for 1985 is that everyone in the world would try to understand the other person or a year of using the golden rule of doing to others what you wish them to do to you. If that rule were, really put into effect I believe that the world would change radically and that it would turn into a wonderful place. Just think of the possibilities that would lie in store for a world where everyone was interested in the rights of the other person. It is a simple wish but it probably will never happen. E.W.

BETTER U.N.

My wish for the world is that the United Nations would grow into what it was founded to do. It should be a world forum in which all countries can go to and talk out their problems and resolve things without resorting to arms. If the U.N. were really functioning there would be no need for an arms race and this would free money to create a better life for many people who need a better world. C.G.

COMPLETE TRUST

The most critical problem facing the world today and at any time in its history, has been and is lack of complete trust between nations. And, I guess I should go one step further, people generally distrust each other and constantly require reassurance that their faith has not been misplaced. Of course, this becomes a matter of degree but fundamentally the knowledge that we can't believe each other often leads to false conclusions and artificial extremes in behavior. As a case in point, we don't believe the Russians and they don't believe us. Furthermore, every public utterance is suspect whether across or within national boundaries and regardless of source - the media, public servants or aspirants, corporate creatures, professional people of all kinds, etc., etc. Even religious opinions are challenged with rationale attributed to motives less than altruistic. So, my wish would be for all people and peoples to mean exactly what they say without equivocation and to have the confidence to accept as undiluted truth everything that they hear. I know that I am asking for Utopia but why not - after all I am convinced it is worth wishing for. P.G.S.

DISCOVERY

A Garage Sale Treasure

By Abraham Blinderman

While I rummaged through a pile of old books at a garage sale in Levittown several months ago, my eyes alit upon a fine copy of "Pup tent Poets, Stars and Stripes Mediterranean", Italy, 1945. The front cover of the book bore a humorous map of the area, which brought to my mind memories of Oran, Bizerte, Sicily, Sardinia, and Naples. My duties were unheroic; stationed at fleet post offices in historic seaports, I watched thousands of servicemen sail away to watershed battles. Some of them would never receive the letters that I sorted for them. I still recall with sadness the devotion of the wife of a lieutenant killed in action who could not accept the fact of his passing. She persisted in sending letters to him for six months after his burial. I could do nothing but enclose her messages in large Bupers (Bureau of Personnel) envelope and hope that she would finally accept the reality of his death. On the little island of La Maddalena in the Straits of Bonafacio, I often ran to the docks to hand P.T. crews their mail before they shoved off on perilous missions in the waters off Northern Italy.

While turning the pages of "Pup tent Poets", I came across a sentimental poem which I had written in Bizerte in late 1943. It isn't a good poem but it was one of one thousand of 15,000 poems submitted to "The Stars and Stripes Mediterranean" in two years. And of the thousand that appeared in the newspaper, only 187 were chosen by the editors for inclusion in the 1945 anthology.

As far as I know, I must agree with Corporals Hogan and Welsh on the ephemeral fame of pup tent poets. In the foreward to the anthology they wrote: "In two years of Pup tent Poetry, no greater war poet has revealed himself. What the Pup tent Poets department has provided is a kind of open forum whose only requirements are a poetic leaning and an interest in writing about the war as well as living it."

Mediocrity has its sting but the soldiers and sailors, airmen and marines who wrote verse in foxholes, bomb shelters, and sheltered installations give the lie to the ancient superstition that male poets are either eccentric or effeminate. The poems run the gamut from comic burlesque to philosophical odes. Simple couplets in doggerel are followed by metaphorical gems in free verse. Not many poets are destined to be Winifred Owensens, Joyce Kilmers, Alan Seegars, Rupert Brooke and scores of lesser poets who died in World War battles, but time, distance, love, longing, jealousy, horror and idealism stirred Pup tent Poets to take pen in hand between battles or chores to distill from their store of speculations a substantive poetic moment of the times. When nursing both Union and Rebel wounded in understaffed hospitals, Walt Whitman said that the true history of the war would never be written because each soldier's experience was in fact a history, and who would ever write the histories of millions of men in blue or gray? Perhaps a thousand Studs Terkels might write an oral history of a war in this respect, but even an ambitious project of this kind would barely uncover an honest history of war.

In "Pup tent Poets" local belles are contracted with the girls at home; military bureaucracy is lampooned; battle scenes are poignantly depicted; longing for peace is tempered with forebodings of future wars. If some of the poems lack metaphorical vision or falter rhythmically, they attest, on the other hand, to the need of men to be creative even under the most severe duress they are put to, namely, the killing of other men.

One poet, Sgt. William Tully bitterly proclaims his fears and hopes for the future in:

Manifesto

What lasting peace can now be gained
With nations rotten to their core?
What foolish words of peace remain
To haunt our minds forever?
Be gone and die, each one of you
Who thinks the world is his to rule.
Awake, awake, you men in whom
We did entrust our nation's bloom.
We want a peace—a peace our own
With no more fears of carnage wrought;
We want to live a life-full grown.
It must be so, this peace when bought.

I am happy to be included in an obscure book with fellows like Sgt. Tully. Perhaps poets are, as Shelley said, "the true legislators of the world."

FIRST IS BEST

Sometimes the old is the best. The Mona Lisa in Garden City is a restaurant that we have spent many fine evenings in and always found it to be first rate in its preparation of food. And that is whether the order is beef, fish or chicken. The preparation of food at the Mona Lisa is something that you can count on and that is why when I have an important dinner or lunch appointment I go to the Mona Lisa. The decor is great and the service is always prompt and courteous. D.N.

MIKE MCGRADY - NEWSDAY - DEC. 25, 1983

"One thing I'm sure of, you're going to like the way DEVINS looks, the owners' goal was to achieve the feel of Edwardian England, but it is sufficiently eclectic to include echoes of New Orleans and Paris. The fish here is properly fresh and the meat is properly aged, and great care is taken in their presentations. Here, I must pause to compliment the service. No matter how good the main dishes, the desserts are better."

SUPERB FOOD

I'm calling about a wonderful restaurant, the George Washington Manor in Roslyn. My husband and I had occasion to have lunch and dinner there several times recently and I want your readers to know it's fantastic. The food is superb, they serve wonderful American-Continental food. The Sunday Brunch is a real delight. The decor and ambiance can't be beat. I don't often do something like this but I just had to share this with you.

Q. The other night we noticed two acquaintances having dinner at a nearby table. My husband wanted to go over and say hello but I told him to wait until they were finished eating. Unfortunately they left before we did and we thought perhaps they thought we ignored them. What should be done? H.T.

A. It was right to wait for them to finish eating and it would not have been very gracious to interrupt. But you might have sent a card of message to the table via the waiter if you really wanted to chat with them or just say "hello".

GOOD NIGHT

Last Wednesday we decided to follow one of the suggestions in your Reader Ratings. We were mainly satisfied with what we got although the service was a little slow. We went to the Plattdeutsche Park Restaurant in Franklin Square. The place was no stranger to us because we have been there many times before at catered affairs. But this time we went to the smaller restaurant and had sauerbraten. Considering that the check was reduced because we had four in the party eating sauerbraten and they gave us all of the salad we could ever eat it was a very good night both in food and cost. J.H.

Favorite Restaurant

For a truly great restaurant, we heartily endorse The Executive Restaurant, on Mineola Blvd. in Mineola. You can be assured that the fish is fresh daily. Recently we went there for dinner and had two great meals. One was their Bouillabaisse, and I have truly never had better, the other dinner consisted of broiled swordfish. Both were served with a baked potato, vegetable and a salad. We topped this off with cafe espresso with Sambucca. In my opinion it is more difficult to find fish perfectly prepared than meat. The Executive is one of our favorite restaurants. You will also find that the service is exceedingly good. Once you have dined there you will be looking forward to your next visit.

FINE FOOD

This week we went to the Arbor Inn a week after our anniversary which we wanted to celebrate last week. They gave us great service and great food on Thursday. The decor of the Arbor Inn, the piano at the bar and the fine food is worth going to at any time. In addition to the food the people are very friendly at the Arbor Inn. We recommend it and especially if you are going to celebrate something.

PICTURESQUE PLACE

Last week we visited the Milleridge Inn in Jericho. This beautiful restaurant is even more picturesque in the spring and good weather. We had a fine dinner and then found our way to the little shops that are adjacent to the restaurant.

The Milleridge Inn has been a favorite of ours for two generations now and we always find that the food and service are tops. The Milleridge Inn deserves first place in any mention of good restaurants. H.F.

Q. The other day I went to a restaurant and the waitress said to me, "What are you drinking?" And I said "coffee". She and other people smiled because she meant an alcoholic beverage when in fact I do not drink. Shouldn't she ask the question differently? T.W.

A. The answer is Yes. And you need not have felt sheepish about your answer. It was perfectly correct. To not be a drinker is surely nothing to be ashamed of. In fact the other side might have more to hide.

Q. On one or more occasions I have called your Reader Ratings to say that I disagreed with someone's assessment of a restaurant, but I never saw the call printed. Aren't you interested in any criticism? F.H.

A. We certainly do want to hear all sides about restaurants that are featured here. We carefully look over all points of view. When something involves service or food we send the criticism on to the restaurant. If criticisms mount, we spot visit the restaurant and on several occasions we have discontinued a restaurant. But not all complaints mean that the place is bad, it could mean that they had an off day and do better most of the time. We try to distinguish.

READER RATINGS

Q Which is a better choice, ala carte or a full dinner?

A. The answer to this question is found in another one. How hungry were you when you went to dinner. Many times ala carte is a good choice because you only feel like eating a certain amount.

But on the other hand the restaurant usually chops a little off of the ala carte prices so that they can include them in a full dinner. Some restaurants say that they want to serve a full dinner because when the guests leave they feel that they have had a full meal and therefore the restaurant makes a good impression.

Q. Is the introduction of salad bars in some restaurants a way of saving labor?

A. The answer to that is simply that salad bars use almost as much labor as if the food were brought to you. The advantage of the salad bar to a restaurant is to let the diner feel that he can have as much of an item as he wants and also, it provides a longer interval for preparing the main course so that guests are not pushing the waiter for faster service. These are some of the reasons for salad bars. Individual restaurants may have their own reasons for having them or not having them.

Suiting people to a tea

By Janet Setter

The box of Lipton teabags on the grocery shelf used to represent the extent of Americans' knowledge of tea and about the only choice they had in brewing the drink.

Tea was connected to social events (all those ladies in white gloves and hats) or chilly, damp days, or fragile health — a little tea and toast, please.

Not now. Supermarkets, as well as the gourmet shops, offer an array of English Breakfast, Earl Grey, Formosa Oolong, Lapsang Souchong and many more. Health food stores stock herbal teas, like lemon grass, rose hips and alfalfa, as well as the green and black types.

In addition, "afternoon tea" is enjoying a social boom, with many restaurants throughout the country offering traditional tea and cakes, and those in Los Angeles and San Francisco giving it a California twist by serving white wine or sherry, too.

Tea was so successfully adopted by the British that we sometimes think they invented it. Indeed, in Britain, "tea" has many meanings.

In the morning, tea is served before breakfast. Many hosts serve guests tea in bed.

There's elevenses (the equivalent of our coffee break) and tea in the afternoon at home or in the office. This is simply a cup of tea, and any biscuits (cookies) one can scare up. In almost every office in England, there are the traditional office tea ladies clanking down the hallways with their tea trolleys.

Some people also say tea or high tea when they really mean supper, perhaps salad with cold roast beef, chicken or ham.

But best of all, there is afternoon tea.

The Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes fly outside Upstairs, Downstairs, The English Tea Shop in San Diego where one whole page of the menu is devoted to afternoon tea, the three most substantial ones being the Farmhouse Tea, Devon Cream Tea and Festive High Tea. All three start with little tea sandwiches made with brown bread and butter, with fillings of cucumber, or egg and cress, or sardine. On another day, there might be cheese with tomato or cream cheese with walnuts. On very special occasions, smoked salmon appears.

Homemade fruitcake and crumpet with preserves also are part of the Farmhouse Tea. The Devon Cream Tea, perhaps the most traditional, features a scone with preserves and whipped cream, plus a slice of Victoria Sponge cake, a yellow cake with strawberry jam and whipped cream between two layers. The Festive High Tea menu also has trifle and (when in season) strawberries and cream.

This is the domain of Stella Arkell, who with her late husband, ran a combined hotel, restaurant and supperclub in Devon, England. Then in 1975, she came to this country, eventually winding up in California.

She is precise about the making of tea. First one must rinse the pot out with hot water. Then, put in the tea, one spoon per person and one for the pot. As soon as the water comes to a full, rolling boil, it is poured over the tea leaves. It must be boiling, not just hot, and must be left to steep for five minutes.

Stella recommends putting the milk (never cream) in the cup before pouring the tea — this "is considered correct." She thinks that the custom may have originated from the days when milk wasn't pasteurized, and if the milk had turned sour, that quickly would become apparent before pouring in the costly tea.

(Along with the pot of tea, sugar bowl and milk pitcher, one may set out a dish of thinly sliced lemon — but never try to combine milk and lemon — and a jug of hot water to add to the tea. There are two schools of thought on tea cozies, one source says never use one because it allows the tea to stew.)

Stella does a great deal of the baking at Upstairs, Downstairs, including the tasty and traditional scones. The secret to making these — which she's done for 20 years — is to handle the dough as little as possible.

The recipes she uses for scones, shortbread and Victoria Sponge cake follow:

SCONES

1-2 ozs. butter or margarine
8 ozs. self-rising flour
¼ level tsp. salt
Approximately ¼ pt. milk

Preheat oven to 450 F. Grease and flour baking tray. With fingertips, rub butter into flour and salt until resembling fine bread crumbs. Make well in center and stir in enough milk to make soft, sticky dough. Turn onto floured board. Pat out with spatula until dough is 1 to 1½ inches thick. Cut dough into circles with 2-inch diameter cutter. Place on baking tray and cook for 8 to 10 minutes.

The less the dough is handled, the lighter and higher the scones will be. Be sure the dough is sticky.

1¾ cups flour
4 tbsps. sugar
4 ozs. butter
1 egg yolk
1 tsp. milk

Sift flour into bowl. Add sugar and rub butter in with fingertips until mixture is crumbly. Make well in center of bowl and pour in egg yolk and milk. Work into smooth dough. Transfer dough to 8-inch diameter cake pan and press dough to sides. Crimp edges with fork and chill in refrigerator for 30 minutes.

Heat oven to 400 F and bake for 5 minutes. Turn heat down to 300 F and bake for 30 minutes, or until golden brown. Remove from oven and cut into slices while still warm, but do not remove slices until cold.

VICTORIA SPONGE

4 ozs. butter
3 large eggs
1 tsp. milk

¾ cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
Salt
Confectioners sugar
Filling:
5 tbsps. strawberry jam
1 cup cream, whipped

Preheat oven to 375 F. Melt butter in saucepan over very low heat, making sure it does not boil. Beat eggs with milk at room temperature. Add sugar and beat hard. In separate bowl, sift flour, baking powder and pinch of salt and fold gently into egg mixture. Stir in melted butter. Divide mixture between two well-greased 7-inch cake pans. Bake side by side for 12 to 15 minutes or until well risen and golden. Cool on rack for 10 minutes before turning out cakes.

When cakes are cool, spread whipped cream and strawberry jam on one and cover with the other. Dust top with confectioners sugar.

Try these pork chops

Pork made its North American debut courtesy of Hernando DeSoto, who brought 13 porkers along with him, as a kind of commissary-on-the-hoof, when he landed in Florida in 1539. Native Indians became very fond of pork, and reportedly raided DeSoto's herd regularly, making off with pigs for their own consumption.

By the time DeSoto died, in 1542, his captive herd had grown to over 700 head, not including the pigs that were eaten, the ones that the Indians took and still others that ran away to become the patriarchs of our wild hog population.

Other notable dates in the swining of America are 1600, when Hernando Cortez introduced the pig to New Mexico and 1607, when Sir Walter Raleigh brought some English-bred stock to Jamestown Colony.

From the earliest colonial days, until very recently, pork was one of the most widely prepared meats throughout this country. American pork became the standard of quality for the world, much like French veal.

Pork produced in America today is much lower in fat than that of even a decade ago. At one time, farmers tried to raise the fattest hogs possible. Today's pork producer turns out a much leaner product — the average hog today has 50 percent less fat than one raised 25 years ago.

For equal-size servings, pork has about the same number of calories as beef, veal, lamb and dark-meat turkey. It is approximately equal to any of these in protein, and is far higher in B vitamins. Lamb, veal, dark-meat turkey and even some fish are higher in cholesterol than pork. Pork also has less saturated fat than either beef or lamb.

Pork should, of course, be cooked thoroughly. Cooking pork slowly at moderate temperatures will ensure even cooking, minimize shrinkage and make the meat more tender and flavorful. As a rule of thumb, pork should reach an internal temperature of 170 to 180 degrees during cooking, to be sure that it is thoroughly cooked.

Our recipes for today are for two of our favorite ways to prepare pork chops. Caraway Pork Chops with Fried Apples and Onions is a combination that we find particularly pleasing. Hungarian Pork Chops, with paprika, marjoram and wine, go especially well with noodles. The recipe yields enough gravy to pour over both the chops and the noodles.

CARAWAY PORK CHOPS

4 thick loin pork chops
Olive oil
1 tbsp. (approx.) caraway seeds
Freshly ground black pepper

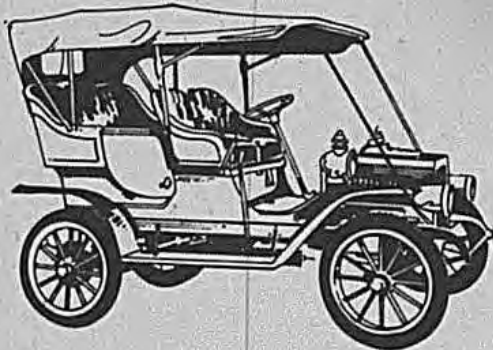

At least an hour before cooking chops, rub them lightly on both sides with olive oil and sprinkle generously with caraway seeds and pepper, pressing down so that seeds adhere to meat.

Heat lightly oiled, heavy cast iron or non-stick pan over medium-high heat. Sear chops until they are browned on both sides. In frying pan, if ovenproof, or in roasting dish, place chops in preheated 400 F oven for 15 to 20 minutes, until cooked through. Serve with juices that have accumulated during cooking, and with Fried Apples and Onions (recipe follows).

Serves 2 to 4.

VEGETARIAN VIEW

Serving yourself

By DIANE SAVAGE

It seems that there are more people living alone these days than ever before. These singles are sometimes moved to curse their kitchen cupboards, not to mention the refrigerator, because of the difficulty of cooking for one.

Most recipes are planned to serve around four people — but what if there aren't four of you? And even if there are, you might find yourself the only vegetarian in the house — and that usually means at least an occasional separate meal.

Freezing in one-serving portions is a great way for the lone diner to survive, and it prevents waste of leftovers. No one wants to eat the same entree three nights in a row. (If it's a four-serving recipe, you'll be throwing it out by the fourth night!) Just eat one portion, freeze the rest in individual packets and defrost again at a later date. By then you'll be ready to have it again and your dinner for one will be ready in a jiffy.

Single diners should be especially careful of nutrition — it's easier for them than for anyone else to just forget about eating. Why go to the trouble if it's only you? Because your body and health and happy outlook depend on it. Be nice to yourself: Set an attractive table for one and light a candle or two.

With larger recipes, eat what you care to and freeze the rest. With today's "recipes for one," you can entertain yourself in high style.

Don't sit in front of that TV set, either. Why not try a nice dinner conversation with yourself: tell yourself a story, or recite your favorite poem. Listen to some good music — and remind yourself that dining with you can be a lovely experience.

ZUCCHINI PARMESAN

- 1 medium zucchini
- 1 tsp. vegetable oil
- 1 small garlic clove, minced
- ¼ tsp. salt
- Dash oregano
- Dash basil
- 1 tbsp. water
- 2 tbsps. grated Parmesan cheese

Wash and cut zucchini into ¼-inch-thick slices. Heat oil over medium heat in small skillet; stir in minced garlic and sauté for 1 minute. Add zucchini, salt, oregano and basil. Stir-try until zucchini is almost translucent; add tablespoon of water, cover and steam for 30 seconds. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Serves 1.

BAKED APPLE

- 2 tbsps. honey
- ¼ tsp. cinnamon
- Dash nutmeg
- 1 tbsp. butter, cut into small pieces
- 1 large baking apple
- 2 tbsps. water
- Cream or half-and-half, if desired

Preheat oven to 350 F. Mix together honey, cinnamon, nutmeg and butter. Remove core and peel top ¼ of apple. Place apple in ovenproof custard cup. Fill apple with honey mixture. Sprinkle water over top and bake 40 to 60 minutes until apple is tender. Baste top occasionally with juices. Serve warm with cream or half-and-half if desired. Serves 1.

COTTAGE CHEESE PANCAKES

- 1 egg
- ¼ cup cottage cheese
- 1½ tbsps. whole wheat flour
- 1½ tbsps. wheat germ
- 1 tsp. oil
- Pinch salt
- Vegetable oil for griddle

Separate egg, placing white and yolk in two small bowls. Beat egg white until it forms soft peaks; set aside. Combine egg yolk with cottage cheese, whole wheat flour, wheat germ, 1 teaspoon oil and salt. Beat well until smooth. Stir in beaten egg white a little at a time.

Heat griddle or skillet over medium heat (about 375 F). Drop pancake batter by spoonfuls onto hot griddle and spread with back of spoon into 3-inch circles. When edges begin to bubble, turn with spatula and brown other side. Serve with butter and honey. Makes four to five 3-inch pancakes.

Antique or Junque

By James G. McCollam

Q. Can you tell me anything about this 36-inch-high stand? It was purchased in Italy in the late 1890s.

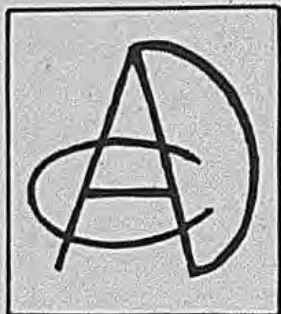

The pedestal is formed by a black boy in Oriental costume.

A. This looks like an 18th century piece, but it is impossible to be sure without actually examining it. Assuming that it is authentic, the value would be in the $1,500 to $2,000 range.

Q. My composition boy doll is 15 inches tall and dressed in blue denim with buttons imprinted "Railroad King." The eyes and hair are painted. It is marked as shown in the sketch.

Who made it, when and how much is it worth?

A. This was made by the American Doll Co. in the early part of this century. According to "The 20th Century Doll Series," it is worth from $55 to $120 depending on condition.

Q. What can you tell me about collecting Fiesta dinnerware? It is not antique, is it? Why should it be so expensive?

A. Fiesta is ordinary pottery made by Homer Laughlin in East Liverpool, Ohio, from 1936 to 1972. According to U.S. law, an antique must be 100 years old, so Fiesta Ware only can qualify as a collectible.

It's expensive, although it is neither scarce nor fine quality, because collectors have bid the prices up to a point that it sells for far more than fine-quality Haviland porcelain made over 100 years ago.

Q. I have seen what dealers call "cup plates." What is the difference between these and saucers, or is that just another name for saucers?

A. One hundred years ago it was customary to serve tea with a cup and saucer and a plate. The tea was poured in the saucer and the cup was set on the cup plate; the tea was drunk from the saucer. Although this practice would be frowned upon today, it was perfectly proper in the mid-19th century.

The most valuable cup plates are Sandwich Glass with prices ranging from $25 to $75. Incidentally, the cup plates run about 1 inch smaller in diameter than saucers.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q. We have an aluminum overhang, very badly stained, which we assume is caused by the surrounding maple trees. We would like to clean this overhang.

Would you please let me know what to use, and if it requires a brush to do so, whether it be soft or hard bristles. Thank you. — Mrs. M.S.

A. From your description I would say your problem calls for a heavy-duty cleanser such as trisodium phosphate (about 1 cup to a gallon of warm water) applied with a stiff bristle brush.

If this method does not remove the stains, you can try one of the following:

Apply an etching chemical cleaner, following manufacturer instructions carefully.

Or, use a combination of an etching chemical and a heavy-duty abrasive cleaner applied with a damp cloth or stainless steel wool pad (00 grade or finer). Rub by hand in a reciprocating (back and forth) — manner or with a power tool. Follow the direction of the grain, not crosswise or in a circular direction. Rub evenly to prevent bright spots, rinse and dry thoroughly.

You can use a rotary wire brush with a power tool for particularly stubborn spots.

I would not recommend any of these more complex cleaning methods, i.e., then use of etching chemicals, abrasive cleaners or a rotary wire brush, on an aluminum surface that still has a good coating of Aluminate (anodized finish).

Your best source for heavy-duty cleaning products and etching chemicals is a janitorial supply outlet.

Q. I plan to place redwood flooring over the concrete on my patio, which is covered. Will this involve doing more than placing the wood planks directly on the concrete? — J.E.K.

A. Because concrete is porous and moisture can come up through the concrete slab, you cannot lay a wood floor directly on the surface of a concrete slab.

However, there is an economical installation technique that allows you to lay a wood floor over concrete without the expense of a wood subflooring, which was once customary on slabs. You will need to use a double layer of 1x2-inch wood nailing strips, called sleepers, as a nailing base for your new wood flooring.

Between the two courses of sleepers a polyethylene film should be used as a barrier against moisture, which otherwise might rise from the slab into the completed wood floor.

The bottom course of sleepers is secured to the concrete by latex mastic and by concrete nails. The top course is nailed over the first after placement of the moisture barrier. Then your redwood flooring can be installed at right angles to the sleepers.

After the floor is installed, a water repellent or penetrating seal should be applied, which helps preserve the color and natural finish.

Q. For 10 years we've lived in a double-wide mobile home. About a year ago we started getting a vibration and loud air hum in our water pipes. This lasts from 30 seconds to nearly one minute.

We have two baths. I can stop it by flushing one toilet. I have installed some air chambers and replaced all faucet seats, but it still makes this noise intermittently.

We have our own well and pump for water. Can you help us? — A.L.W.

A. Since you already have taken some recommended steps to correct the problem, I would suggest that you should call in a qualified plumber to help diagnose and correct your problem.

Q. Some time ago I read in your column that the leaves of a certain tree grown here in California could be used to get rid of fleas in your house, or rid your dog of them. At the time I did not have a dog so the name of the tree didn't stick with me. But now that I have a dog, he and I both need your help. — L.E.

A. The leaves you refer to are from the eucalyptus tree. Bay leaves also are recommended for such pests. The use of leaves may be helpful in drawers and cupboards, but I doubt that they would be of much help for the entire house and in carpeted areas that attract fleas.

TWEEN 12 & 20

By Robert Wallace, E.D.

Dr. Wallace: Have you heard about clove cigarettes? A lot of teens have been using them as a substitute for drugs. I have tried a few and rather enjoyed them.

Will you please let me know how safe they are? Are they safer than "normal" tobacco cigarettes? — Jordan

Jordan: The American Lung Association is warning the public about the use of clove oil cigarettes imported from Indonesia.

According to Debbie Mahood, director of smoking education for the Orange County, Calif., Lung Association, cigarettes containing clove oil have become increasingly popular as a status or luxury cigarette, especially among teenagers.

"Unfortunately, many people believe that clove oil cigarettes are safer to smoke than conventional cigarettes," said Mahood. "While it is not known whether cigarettes with clove oil are more dangerous to smoke than regular cigarettes, we must assume that clove oil cigarettes pose at least the same danger as regular cigarettes unless proven otherwise."

Clove oil is one of hundreds of additives currently being used by the tobacco industry to "improve" flavor, aroma and burning qualities of cigarettes, especially those with low tar and low nicotine. While most of these additives appear in the "generally recognized as safe" list of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, they are only presumed safe when consumed orally in their unburned form.

When burned, many of these substances may become toxic and potentially harmful to a smoker's health. Additives such as cocoa, licorice and caramel have been widely used by the tobacco industry but are known to produce carcinogens and co-carcinogens when burned.

Another additive, glycerol, produces acrolein, a potent, toxic product of combustion. Acrolein, together with other combustion products, paralyzes the action of the cilia, thereby inhibiting the natural cleansing mechanism of the lungs and increases risks of developing chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

According to Mahood, the tobacco industry has resisted attempts of health and government agencies to secure information identifying which additives are used in various brands of cigarettes and, therefore, identification can only be made through chemical analysis.

"Because additives are likely to continue to be used in tobacco products, and because the potential threat to public health of such additives remains an important issue, the American Lung Association advises the public that smoking any substance or material should be considered dangerous to your health," she said.

Dr. Wallace: I am 13 and attend a boys' club. My friend and I like to take a pinch of snuff. We are very clean about it but our program director tells us that it could cause oral cancer. Is this true?

We feel that a pinch of snuff is better than smoking. Do you agree? — Chris.

Chris: Your program director is correct. The prolonged use of snuff can cause oral cancer. I agree that taking snuff is not as bad as smoking, but it's still undesirable. I have yet to meet the snuff user who did not constantly spit.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 35-year-old young lady and I'm a freshman in college and I don't like it one bit. You see, when I was a junior in high school I decided that I wanted to join the Army. In fact, I dreamed about it. When I discussed it with my parents they got "all bent out of shape."

They said they had "plans" for me to attend college and to make something out of myself. They think that all women in the military are tramps. My grades in college are OK but I still want to join the Army. In fact, I am thinking about dropping out of college and joining the Army in the very near future.

I'm going to do what I think is best for me, but I would like to have another opinion. That's why I have chosen you — will you help? — Bev Bev: Stay in college until June, then if you still feel the way you do now, join the military. Get all the college credits you can. You may still attend college while in the Army and, of course, if a military career doesn't work out, you may want to re-enter college after you are discharged.

Dr. Wallace: I am 15 and date quite a few guys. My most recent was Randy, who was 24. My dad got mad when he found out Randy's age so now my dad has to meet every guy I go out with. Do you think that my dad is too strict? — Stephane.

Stephane: Not! Parents should meet all dates their teens go out with and inquire where they are going and what time they are returning home.

Mainly For Seniors

Dear John: I've heard so many references recently in your column and elsewhere about nightshade foods, but no complete explanation. What is this all about? — Hazel S.

Dear Hazel: You must have "come in late."

So here goes again, although we have reported fully on nightshade plants, including an item in the new arthritis leaflet.

Norman F. Childers, a professor of horticulture at Rutgers University, discovered that the nightshade family of plants was responsible for the aches and pains of arthritis. These plants include potatoes, eggplant, tomatoes and tobacco.

With Gerard M. Russo, Childers wrote the book "Childers' Diet to Stop Arthritis." He said that these common vegetables were naturally poisonous and contained a chemical that caused arthritic pain. He claims that more than 3,000 sufferers have tested the "no nightshade" diet with great success.

He said the revolutionary diet was simple, but not easy for most people.

"You must avoid the nightshades for at least three months," he said. "It's more effective if used for six to 12 months." He also urged complete abstinence from these foods, otherwise there will be little or no results.

He pointed out that many substitutes may be used, such as sweet potatoes, rice, yams, noodles, corn, turnips, radishes, onions, beans, bread, pumpkin and squash for white potatoes.

Childers warned that dieters must watch out for prepared foods containing nightshade plants and should check all ingredients listed on the containers.

Another thing, he said to take ample vitamin C while on the diet as the nightshades contain rich supplies of this vitamin.

We might point out that information on the nightshades is contained in our arthritis leaflet, which also has several alternative ways to eliminate the pain of arthritis, which might be easier for one to follow than Childers' diet.

We also mention when there is a reference to the arthritis leaflet, that it is only available if you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. A postcard is not enough and a loose stamp with a note doesn't do it. There are so many hundreds of requests that we must follow these rules. Also, donations are needed to help for printing of the leaflets.

Dear John: What has happened? I sent a letter, and also a little poem, and never received any response. I received mail from you about being a member and I would be glad to join, and write to other members. — Florence S.

Dear Florence: There is some misunderstanding somewhere. You will see my note at the bottom of the column that I cannot engage in correspondence, due to the volume of mail.

Also, there is nothing to "join." You probably refer to the Pen Pal list. The final list has not been published and if you wish to receive it you need to send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and $1 to handle costs.

I don't recall seeing the poem, but we do not have the space to print verse.

Dear John: I am a recently retired widow, age 62, in good health. I am interested in an affiliation with a cultural group that attends theater, takes city tours, etc.

Please inform me if you know of any group or organization. I also would like to know where and how I can apply for a senior citizen card. — Lorena W.

Dear Lorena: I'd start at the city hall, where you also might get a senior citizen card. There also must be a senior citizen club, which your newspaper might be able to tell you how to contact.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. We recently purchased an 8-week-old male Dalmatian puppy. For what should we have our puppy vaccinated? We want to give our puppy the best possible health care.

A. Although recommendations may vary among different geographical areas, most veterinarians recommend routinely vaccinating dogs against distemper, hepatitis, leptospirosis, parvovirus and rabies.

Most vaccines are made by altering the virus or bacteria that causes the disease. The altered virus or bacteria is no longer able to produce the disease. However, the modified virus or bacteria is still able to stimulate the dog's immune system to produce antibodies that will protect against the disease.

Your pet's immune system must be normal to respond to the vaccines. Stress such as parasites or malnutrition can adversely affect the immune system and decrease the production of protective antibodies. Therefore, it is important for your veterinarian to perform a physical examination of your dog prior to vaccinating it.

Canine distemper is a highly contagious viral disease found throughout the United States. Although puppies are most likely to be susceptible to the virus, unvaccinated dogs of all ages may get the disease. It is estimated that three out of every four puppies are exposed to the virus before they reach 1 year of age. The distemper virus can be spread through the air by aerosol or it can be spread by direct contact with contaminated objects.

Dogs with distemper show varied signs. These include coughing, loss of appetite, listlessness, running nose and running eyes. If the nervous system is involved, paralysis and muscle tremors may be seen. Depending on the severity of the signs, only about half of the dogs with distemper survive. Death due to distemper is often prolonged and quite unpleasant.

The best age for initial vaccination for distemper depends upon several factors. These include the condition of the puppy, whether the puppy was raised by its mother or hand reared, and the type of vaccine used. Following initial immunization, your dog should be boosted annually.

Canine hepatitis, a viral disease of the liver, is nearly as widespread as canine distemper. The dog with hepatitis usually has a fever, is thirsty and sleeps more than usual. Like distemper, hepatitis is often fatal.

Many veterinarians vaccinate dogs for hepatitis at the same time as for distemper. In fact, one injection, DHL, contains vaccines for distemper, hepatitis, and leptospirosis.

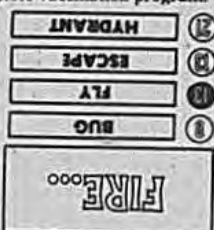

Only recently has the importance of parvovirus become known. Dogs apparently become infected by contacting feces of infected dogs or by contact with contaminated objects in the environment. Dogs with parvovirus rapidly become dehydrated due to a severe diarrhea. Canine parvovirus disease can be prevented by vaccinating susceptible dogs and by strict hygienic practices. Generally, all susceptible dogs should receive two doses of vaccine spaced two to three weeks apart. Revaccination times will vary with the particular vaccines used.

Leptospirosis is caused by a small bacteriophage germ and is spread from dog to dog by contact with contaminated urine. Puppies are most susceptible to leptospirosis. Dogs showing signs of leptospirosis are usually weak, refuse to eat, may vomit, breath with difficulty and have a marked thirst. As already stated for the other diseases discussed, leptospirosis easily can be prevented by proper vaccination.

Rabies is an extremely serious disease of dogs. Rabies is caused by a virus that attacks the nervous system. Sudden and marked personality changes are the chief sign of rabies in dogs. There are several types of rabies vaccines. The ages at which a dog should be vaccinated and revaccinated depend on the particular type of vaccine used. The importance of having dogs properly vaccinated for rabies cannot be overemphasized.

Routine prophylactic care of your dog should include a complete vaccination program.
