Plainview-Old Bethpage Road Runners Club Vice President Julie Shapiro celebrated her 49th birthday earlier this month—and her running friends honored the occasion with a special party at The Gallery Restaurant in Plainview after the Club's regular Wednesday evening run. Pictured here, Julie proudly displays the hand-made rug presented to her at the party in honor of her birthday.

During the school's Winter recess the Hicksville Gregory Museum presented 3 sessions of "Scientific Discoveries" workshops. Each day the children gained a basic understanding of matter and energy through fun and experiments.

Those youngsters were taking part in an experiment to discover the scientific law of static electricity. More of these new and exciting programs are scheduled for the spring and summer, all designed as "hands-on in science" workshops. Children from 6-12 may pre-register for these activities by calling the Hicksville Gregory Museum at 822-7505. The Children's Workshops are planned and conducted by the Museum's Director Joan Scancarelli.

Rotarians Hear About 'Gift Of Life'

Rotarian August Cassella, chairman of the Hicksville Rotary Club Gift of Life program, gave a detailed report to fellow members on the Gift of Life "Bridges of Friendship" dinner dance held at the Waldorf Astoria in New York recently. At the Waldorf event comedian Jerry Lewis was given the Gift of Life International Humanitarian Service Award for being a symbol of tireless advocacy of worthy causes. Rotary Club President Elie Zambaka complimented Chairman Cassella's efforts in the program and for his presence at the dinner dance. The Gift of Life program is a major humanitarian project of the Hicksville Rotary Club.

School Dist. Mails Survey

The Hicksville Board of Education has mailed survey forms to community residents to learn more about public opinion on a number of important issues. The survey was developed by the District Facilities/Community Affairs Committee chaired by Daniel C. MacBride with input from other Board members.

Some of the questions touch upon instructional issues while others seek community guidance on budgetary matters. The Board wanted to determine whether community residents would be willing to pay higher taxes to institute or expand programs or whether greater restrictions in spending were favored.

Residents are urged to complete the surveys and return them using the business reply mail address printed on the forms. The district will be charged by the Post Office for only those forms returned to the schools through the mail. As soon as the responses have been tabulated and evaluated, the results of the survey will be shared with the community.

VOLVO INVENTED
THIS TOOL TO FIX YOUR VOLVO BETTER.

(Does your mechanic own one?)

Tools make life easier for the Volvo technician who works on your car. But they also make life easier for the car. (Can you imagine hammering the lug nuts off a wheel because nobody had invented the lug wrench? Or its predecessor, the wrench-wrench?)

And when a tool doesn't exist to perform a job, your Volvo mechanic doesn't try and make do with the wrong tool. Instead, Volvo's tool and die makers invent one of their own. (Inventions like these help Volvo mechanics work more productively. And that saves you money.)

Which won't prevent somebody from making a tool that's just a little bit different from Volvo's. But then it wouldn't be a Volvo tool designed especially for Volvos. And that could make a world of difference.

Cub Pack 172
Blue/Gold Dinner

Cub Scouts Pack 172, from East Street had their Blue and Gold Dinner. It was an exciting evening for everyone. The room was decorated with navy blue table cloths, placemats and centerpieces made by the Cubs and blue and gold crepe paper around the room. Everyone worked together preparing the cold buffet. It was great.

The entertainment began. Den 1 sang "Scout Busters" to the tune of "Ghostbusters". Everyone joined in by saying "Scout Busters". Den 2 kept the excitement going by singing "Happy Birthday Boy Scouts of America". This was to the tune of "On Top of Old Smokey".

The Webelos did a skit of the Marx Brothers. The boys told jokes such as "Why are the squirrels chasing me? They think I'm nuts". Another joke was "If a plane crashes on the border of Spain and France, where do you bury the survivors? You don't bury survivors."

Then the awards of the evening were presented.

The following boys received beads: Jamie Di Silvestre 3, Richard Kruger 2, Chris Giarraputo 1, Greg Walunas 1, Michael Lortz 1, Michael Endes 2.

Michael Endes also became a Wolf. Jim Walker received his gold arrow, Matthew Arlet received a sportsmanship badge, Danny Schieferstein, Jim Walker, and John Rasmussen received the Alumni Search Badge.

Cancer Soc. 'Daffodil Days'

American Cancer Society volunteers smile proudly as Supervisor Joseph Colby, seated, signs proclamation for Daffodil Days. Mr. Colby is the Supervisor for the Town of Oyster Bay. Looking on are: left to right, Long Island Division, Inc. Unit Presidents Estelle Kessler, Massapqua-Seaman's Neck Unit; Mildred DeMarco, Farmingdale-Bethpage Unit; Councilman Angela A. Delligatti; Alice Maaz, President of Plainview-Old Bethpage-Hicksville Unit; and Lucia Sabatello, District Director for the Oyster Bay Township. Daffodil Days will take place from March 19 through 23.

On February 25, Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Joseph Colby signed a proclamation declaring March 19 through 23, Daffodil Days: the American Cancer Society's days of hope for cancer patients everywhere. During this time, volunteers in this organization will sell daffodils throughout the Township to raise much needed funds for the Society's programs in research, public education, and patient care services. Ms. Alice Maaz, President of the Plainview-Old Bethpage-Hicksville Unit stated, "This is one of the priciest projects we sponsor. It enables us to raise money for the American Cancer Society, and gives us the chance to go out into the community and remind people that we are there carrying on with the very important work of fighting cancer. Every daffodil we sell serves as a symbol of hope for our ultimate success in conquering this disease."

For further information on Daffodil Days and how you can help fight cancer with the American Cancer Society, please call 385-9100.

School Officials Visit Museum

On hand to greet the Hicksville educators, to guide them and to describe briefly the Gregory's unusual capacity to reinforce, to expand and enrich children's learning experiences were Museum Director Joan Scancarelli, a seasoned entomology specialist and children's nature/craft program creator, Curator Thomas Daunt, so much admired by teachers and children for his routine, witty and informative class tours, and Museum Historian Richard Essex whose 30 years of enthusiastic Long Island courses for teachers and students have helped create appreciation of Long Island history, tradition and its environment.

High Councilor, President of the Museum Board of Trustees led other trustees and museum volunteers in making the educators welcome and invited their repeated visits to the museum.

Scouts Enjoy Mardi Gras

Story and Photos
By Marcia Gunnigle

On Sunday, February 23, the Girl Scouts of Fork Lane Junior Troop 3001, participated at a Mardi Gras Gala. The event was held at Bethpage State Park and was sponsored by The Long Island Parks and A & S.

The early shift arrived at 10:30 a.m. Some of the girls made themselves up as clowns, others blew up balloons full of helium. At 11 the crowds started arriving. Our girl scouts helped with Funny Fotos and the Poster Contest "Happiness Is". They handed out hundreds of balloons and lollipops to the eager children. At 1 the morning shift ended and the afternoon scouts took over. Entertainment of all kinds was going on in many areas, and our girls eagerly gave directions and assistance where it was needed. At three o'clock all activities ended and square dancing became the main event.

A lovely letter of gratitude and a certificate of appreciation was received by the troop.

Those who gave so lovingly of their time were: Leader Sharon Fusco, Wendy Fusco, Kiri Gallahue, Jackie Antonacci, April Rodriguez, Susan Gaylord, Leader Marcia Gunnigle, Vickie Gunnigle, Peggy Arecco, Shannon Faulkner, Melissa Perry, Jane Jedzinak, and Julie Jedzinak.

Volunteers Important To Mid-Is. Hospital

"Helpful, pleasant and cheerful" is the credo of our volunteers said Beverly Wagner, Patient Advocate and Director of Volunteers of the 237 bed health care facility in Bethpage.

Last year, Mid-Island Hospital volunteers contributed 10,000 hours, creating a record for the most hours served in the 30 year history of the health care facility.

At the conclusion of an in-depth training/orientation program, a volunteer is required to serve a minimum of four hours per week. In as many instances as is possible, volunteer service assignments are made according to individual choice. However, Beverly Wagner noted, "we do not guarantee a first choice placement every time." Volunteer assignments are numerous and include: selective patient care areas, clerical offices, Dietary Department, X-Ray, Laboratory, Administration offices, Admitting Pharmacy and reception areas.

Other essential volunteer services include Bookmobile and Arts and Crafts distribution, and in the Hospital's Nursing Department, such activities as patient assistance, meal service and other important assignments.

In many instances, Wagner said, volunteers use their past acquired skills which aid in current hospital assignments.

"Volunteer recognition is essential to our operation," Wagner said. Every June, for the past 15 years, we conduct a Volunteers Service Awards Dinner to honor different levels of completed hourly service. As many as 100 or more guests - both family and friends - attend the recognition program. For 50 hours of completed service, a volunteer will receive a Certificate of Merit; 100 hours, a beautiful pin is awarded and beyond 100 hours, a guard is presented which is attached to the pin.

"Most important, Wagner concluded, "we're always seeking the generous voluntary support of dedicated individuals from throughout the 15 communities surrounding our hospital."

Anyone wishing to combine the ingredients of an interesting, worthwhile life with active voluntary humane services, make new friends and partake in challenging activities, should call Beverly Wagner, Director of Volunteers, Mid-Island Hospital, at 579-6000.

Kindergartners Learn Geography

Mrs. Nancy Baron's kindergarten class at Woodland Avenue School developed an interdisciplinary unit about geography dealing with the places most familiar with the child, the home, the school and the neighborhood titled, "We Are The World". Clay models, string and treasure maps, fingerprint maps, land and water experiments, murals and creative dramatics were some of the exciting and fascinating activities going on in this classroom. The results of tape recorded findings proved this to be a very successful unit!

Willits Students Donate Toys

Sylvia Secunda's sixth grade class at Willit School in Syosset made stuffed animals which they sent to the Association for the Advancement of Blind and Retarded. The Community Coordinator of the Association Frances Stillman wrote to Ms. Secunda and the class thanking them for their thoughtfulness. We quote from her letter: "You are very kind and thoughtful. Your teacher, Mrs. Secunda has inspired you to give of yourselves, your time, ideas, your artistic talent and compassion. It is a beautiful lesson; it gave you pleasure and brought happiness to others."

Roller Skating Party

A very special evening was held on January 22 at the Levittown Roller Skating Rink. It was Family Night for the Old Country Road School families.

A good time was had by all the parents, teachers and students. There were racing contests in age groups, the teachers and parents also had skating competition between themselves. With well over 200 people in attendance the evening provided a wonderful chance to renew old friendships and get to make new ones, not to mention how well the skating ability improved as the evening progressed.

This event was sponsored by the Old Country Road School PTA as a fund raiser to pay for the increased costs of school trips.

Bowling Party

On February 8 in the Woodbury Bowling Lanes a very special event was held.

This event was hosted by Nadine Cain and Gloria Lievano for the parents of Old Country Road School students. It was a private endeavor to promote funds to aid the relief effort for Colombian families who need assistance because of the devastation brought on by the earthquake and mudslides.

A wonderful time was had by all. There were smiles galore and plenty of cheers because of all the excellent bowling scores that had been attained. Also during the course of the evening, raffles were held and many prizes were given away. The special guests were treated to a buffet dinner with a Disc Jockey playing all the good old records from the 50's and the 60's.

League of Animal Protection By Scott Gilmore

We had very special people visit our school. These guests were people from the League of Animal Protection. They came to tell us about how to care for our animal friends and how to protect ourselves.

They showed us how to care for our dogs by walking them every day, feeding them every day and making sure they have water to drink at all times. You should not let a dog run loose at all. A dog should always have a collar on him with identification on it. We also saw a video on cats and how to care for them. You have to be careful of what you feed a cat.

To protect ourselves they told us not to tease a dog or cat. The dog will bite and cats scratch. They also said that if you see a dog without a collar you should not pet it because it could be dangerous. If an animal is hurt or sick do not touch it or go near it, it could hurt you. Tell an adult about it and let them call someone to help the animal.

Road Runners 2nd Annual Run

The 2nd Annual Long Island 12 Hour Ultramarathon Run will be held on Saturday, May 10, at the all weather track facility at Socrates High School on South Woods Road in Socrates. The Race will start promptly at 6 a.m. and finish at 6 p.m.

The Run will be sponsored by the Phoenix Old Bethpage Road Runners Club, and will be directed by Club President Mike Polansky and veteran ultramarathoner Larry Davidson, with technical assistance from Finish Line Promotions and a staff of qualified volunteers, lap counters and other officials. The event will be TAT sanctioned.

Registration will be strictly limited to 50 runners, and race organizers are once again planning to attract a mix of elite ultramarathoners and strong local runners who are looking to graduate into the ultramarathon ranks. "We expect that most of the metropolitan area's top ultramarathoners will be on hand once again this year," observed Davidson and Polansky, "but we are also interested in affording an opportunity to strong local runners who want to test their endurance ability for the first time in a race of this sort."

The registration fee is $15. All registrants will receive a special commemorative collared leisure shirt. An awards table presented to every competitor with special awards to the top male and female finishers. Refreshments will be available throughout the day. Spectators are encouraged to attend and bring the competitors.

For a complete athletes' complete of the first edition of the Long Island 12 Hour Ultramarathon in 1985 including winners and race times, names of those competing in their first ultramarathon, Jim Acker of Franklin Square took the first place (male) with 857 miles and Ken Moore of Denver, Colorado took 2nd with 600 miles in only one hour of rest. A Manhattan for the winner's sponsorship.

The 1985 12 Hour Run was an unqualified success, and we expect our second effort to be even more successful. Davidson and Polansky continued, "A 12 hour run is not for everyone, but we are proud to be able to provide a specific event for those who are interested in putting their physical and mental abilities to this kind of test. We are also proud to be able to promote again that Long Island is among the top running and fitness areas in the country."

For applications or more information, call Larry Davidson at 563-8014 or Mike Polansky at 471-0919.

'Voice Of Help' Speaker At Kiwanis

The "Voice of Help" was the subject under discussion by the guest speaker at the March 5 meeting of the Hicksville Kiwanis Club.

The speaker was Iris Jumper, a sales representative for the American Medical Alert Corp. in Oceanside. Ms. Jumper explained that the Voice of Help is emergency assistance at the touch of a button, and can be helpful to elderly or infirm individuals living alone, or who are home alone much of the time, who may be subject to physical or medical problems. Ms. Jumper explained that by the individual just touching the emergency activator button carried by the individual, an emergency signal is transmitted to an emergency center. The emergency center has personnel on duty 24 hours a day with the subscribing individual's complete medical information in computers, can speak to the individual through a Voicemitter transceiver connected to telephone lines, and can alert and dispatch emergency aid, or alert relatives who possibly also should respond.

A demonstration of the use of the emergency button and the voice response by an operator at the emergency center in Oceanside through the Voicemitter transceiver, was most impressive.

Yevoli Says 'Money Wasted'

Assemblyman Lewis Yevoli (D-Old Bethpage) today called on Oyster Bay Supervisor Joseph Colby "to stop wasting taxpayer money in a fruitless effort to expand the Old Bethpage garbage dump, the Number One hazardous toxic waste site in the State of New York."

Yevoli pointed out that by unanimous decision, the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court has rejected a suit brought by Oyster Bay aimed at overturning a decision by the State Department of Environmental Conservation denying an application by Oyster Bay to expand the Old Bethpage dump by 13.5 acres. The suit also attempted to overturn State law on solid waste disposal, a law passed by the State legislature three years ago. The decision was handed down Monday. (March 3)

"The decision by the Appellate division is one solid victory for all of the people of Oyster Bay in our continuing efforts to close this hazardous toxic waste site," Yevoli said.

He also pointed out that the Town has spent "millions of dollars in this frivolous effort for reasons that are not comprehensible and perhaps understandable to only Joe Colby and his supporters in town hall. This has been a gross misuse of taxpayer money.

Let us now move on to solving this threat to the health of the residents of Oyster Bay, this threat to the underground water supply of all of Nassau County by closing this dump and cleaning up this hazard," Yevoli concluded.

Parents Invited To Meeting

On Thursday, March 20, at 8 p.m., the Hicksville Junior and Senior High School PTSA's will be holding a joint meeting at the Little Theater in the Senior High School. Guest speakers will be counselors from Phoenix House in New York City. Phoenix House is a drug rehabilitation program which claims an 80% success rate in turning people away from drugs. This meeting is being held in conjunction with Phoenix House counselors visiting with 9th grade health classes during the week of March 17. The program for the students focuses on the decision of whether or not to use drugs. During 3 class visits, Phoenix prevention counselors address the 3 aspects of a decision making model: motivation, information and values. At the parent meeting counselors will familiarize parents with the student curriculum, review current patterns of drug abuse, offer specific drug prevention strategies and deal with parent concerns. All parents should attend this meeting, as drug abuse is an issue that concerns and affects us all.

If there are any questions about this, please call Cathy Michaels 826-2465 (Mon.-Fri. 10-2), 822-9036 evenings.

Dutch Lane Jump-A-Thon

On Tuesday, March 4, our annual Jump-A-Thon began right after school. The children (grades 3-6) were organized into teams of 6 jumpers, which jumped for a maximum of 3 hours. The jumpers rotated in sequence. When one jumper tired, another team member began jumping.

The team members had already secured pledges before the actual event and depending on the amounts from the children's sponsors it determined what prize each member would receive.

Regardless of any pledges donated, each team member was awarded a Certificate of Appreciation and a jump rope from the "American Heart Association" at the end of the Jump-A-Thon.

Jump Rope for Heart is a national event for students to promote physical education and cardiovascular health, while raising funds to help local Heart Associations fight heart disease and stroke which kill more annually than all other causes of death combined.

Holy Family Basketball News

Holy Family sixth grade basketball team played three games in three days and came away with two impressive victories.

On Saturday, March 8, the Eagles placed St. Mary's of Roslyn in the opening round of the St. Vincent De Paul tournament. St. Mary's jumped out to a 19-4 lead in the first quarter but Holy Family led by the great play of Ted Knoop. Wayne Rothchild and Mike Murray were able to overcome the 15 point deficit and win the game by a score of 41-41. With the score 41-40 in favor of St. Mary's, Chris Doyle stole the ball and scored a lay up to put Holy Family in the lead 42-41. Mike Murray sank one of two foul shots with ten seconds left to enable the Eagles to win 43-41.

Ted Knoop was outstanding all over the court in leading the Eagles with 14 points and 23 rebounds. Wayne Rothchild scored 10 points while Mike Murray had over 8 points and 13 rebounds. Also scoring for Holy Family were Mike O'Malley 5 points, Greg Schentzler 4 points, and Chris Doyle 2 points.

On Sunday, March 9, Holy Family beat a tough St. Dominic's team 46-36 in the opening round of the playoffs. Ted Knoop continued his outstanding play by leading the Eagles with 19 points and 20 rebounds. Greg Schentzler and Ken Davis played their best game of the year with Schentzler scoring 8 important points and Davis scoring 6 points, and grabbing 6 rebounds. Mike Murray grabbed 11 rebounds to help control the boards for the Eagles. The Eagles were also aided in this big game by the overall play of Wayne Rothchild 6 points, and Mike O'Malley 6 points. Even though they didn't score Chris Doyle and Jason Kinglesley played great defense which helped hold St. Dominic's to 36 points.

On Monday night March 10, the Eagles played the undefeated St. Edward's in the section finals and even though the Eagles gave it their best they were finally overpowered and defeated 46-27. The game was closer then the score indicates; in that during the third quarter the Eagles after being down by 12 points, pulled to within one point of St. Edwards only to have St. Edwards pull completely away in the fourth quarter.

The Holy Family players never quit and made their coach proud even though the opposition had an enormous height advantage (over the Eagles.) Ted Knoop, Mike Murray and Mike O'Malley kept jumping and trying to grab rebounds, but because of St. Edward's height advantage were unable to pull down many rebounds.

Ted Knoop again led all scorers with 9 points. Also scoring for the Eagles were Greg Schentzler 6 points, Mike O'Malley 4 points, Mike Murray 4 points, Wayne Rothchild 2 points, Ken Davis 2 points.

The Eagles now go back to play in the semi-finals of the St. Vincent De Paul tournament.

The following businesses have sponsored the sixth grade Eagles: Cousin Video, Carvel (W. Village green) Boo's Florist, Wagner Funeral Home, Green Liquor Store, Pejer's Cleaners, Friends Power Test Station, Tower Deli, and Wicker's Pizza.

Spray Paint Can Theft Arrests

The Eighth Squad reported the arrest of 4 Brooklyn men who are charged with Petit Larceny in the taking of cans of spray paint on March 8.

At 3:25 p.m. at the Pergament parking lot, 3901 Hempstead Turnpike, Bethpage, the four were arrested by Police Officer Edward Deegan of the Eighth Precinct. Mike Fishbein, 18, Eric Holder, 20, Howard Blanck, 18 and Ulises Rodriguez, 17, had allegedly taken 6 cans from Pergament and 45 from the TSS in Oceanside. They had in their possession a total of 121 cans. The four told detectives that they were graffiti artists and were unable to purchase their paints in the city so they came to Nassau for the cans.

Three of the subjects were released on Appearance Tickets, and the fourth, Eric Holder, was held for arraignment at First District Court.

Most Input Callers Believe In Drug Tests For Players

Most callers to Input believe that club owners should have the right to require drug tests in answer to this question: "Do you think that ball club owners should have the right to require drug tests of players?"

Here are some of the answers:

SHOULD TEST

Yes, I cannot see how players should balk at this requirement. They have sold their services to the club and to the fans. The least they can do is prove that their full abilities are being put on the line in each game. There is no question about it in my mind. F.G.

CIVIL RIGHTS

There is a legitimate point being argued by players and their union that civil rights are being infringed upon by ordering drug tests of players. However, there are some other rights involved. These players are held up as idols to our youngsters. It certainly is damaging to youth to see that players half on drugs are running around the field and getting paid high salaries for it. There has to be a rule whereby these public figures have to set good example. In the past there have been players who did not perform well and were on drugs so it is not possible to police drug usage without some test. K.E.

DWI TESTS

I would liken the requirement that ballplayers have to take drug tests to the law that requires drivers suspected of DWI to take tests. Both are giving up some rights. The car driver would be a danger physically to other drivers. Athletes on drugs are a danger to other players and to psychologically damage the youth who believe they are models. The tests can be challenged if they are wrong. But they should be required. L.E.

FAIR VALUE

It is silly to pay high salaries to people who are only able to perform half as well as they are being paid for. Players on drugs are not giving the public its fair value and the club owners will in the long run not be able to pay the players if the public revolts. J.E.

PERFORMANCE ONLY

I would dissent on the drug testing. I would say that if an owner has evidence that a player is on drugs that he should suspend the player but there are too many people ready to waive personal rights to achieve goals that can be won in other ways. A player who is not performing well will lose out on the next contract. Performance should be the only test. L.W.

TEST THREAT

I favor the tests and I believe just the knowledge that they will be given will do a great deal to stop the use of drugs. A player who will be found out will have too much to lose by fooling around with coke or other drugs. If he is already an addict he won't be playing well and will be finished anyway. W.R.

STAND BY

It took a lot of courage for the baseball commissioner to pronounce his edict on the use of drugs and I hope the public will stand by this measure. Who needs a bunch of drug users running around trying to play baseball? We want to see good competitive sports by players who are fit. There is no place for the drug user in baseball. M.T.

COURAGEOUS STEP

I believe that baseball Commissioner Ueberroth took courageous and proper steps in devising a thoughtfully considered penalty for professional ball players who were proven drug users. And, I am happy that there didn't appear to be any significant dissention among the club owners. But, even at that, we find the Mets first baseman Keith Hernandez acting like a prima donna in deciding how to beat the rap so to speak. The professional ball players of his talents receive munificent salaries to provide the fans not only with outstanding athletic performances but to build images of high character which adoring young people strive to emulate. Without that continuing interest, the dwindling returns at the box office would quickly create a detrimental effect on the Club's ability to pay those high salaries. The owners take a calculated risk in engaging players hoping that with proper training and experience they will mature and with stellar performance pay off at the box office. If such a player jeopardizes this scenario by taking illicit drugs, the owner should have every right to take corrective action individually and precautionary measures collectively if that seems called for. In my opinion, enough evidence has been displayed to warrant the right of club owners to require drug tests in the personal interests of everyone concerned - the individual players, the team, the management and the paying public. P.G.S.

Getting Over The Death Of A Parent

Getting Over the Death of a Parent
as told by a daughter expressing her loss

By Laurie Beller

Sometimes I think I'll never be the same, getting over the loss is still so difficult, the pain, so excruciating at times I can hardly bear it. It has been over a year now and I still cannot accept the reality of it, still not wanting or willing to believe He is gone, never to return. The feeling of security gone too, knowing he's there when you need him, somewhere, whether near or far. Knowing he is only a phone call away, or a piece of paper and a pen that could draw you near again. Knowing he is there to say the right things that will make everything bright again no matter how lost you feel.

The innocence is gone too, the innocence that goes along with childhood and adolescence, that part of the book ended, that page somehow yellowed and withered with age.

How can we ever go back; we cannot, that time is lost, but not forgotten. We must go on, on for those that depend on us such as our children. How do we do this and still try to remember and teach our children to remember as they must not forget?

Still, what I wouldn't give to have one day, one hour, one moment, just to say hello, to see his face, to hear his voice to feel his gentle and comforting touch. To have him say "It will be all right" or "I love you". What I wouldn't give for that right. At a moment's notice I would give up all I own for that pleasure.

When will that pain disappear; the heaviness of my heart diminish?

Some days it is easier, days when we are busy caught up with the active lifestyle we lead. He wouldn't want us to spend this much time and energy mourning, so we must go on. We must try to erase from our memory those last days that were a living nightmare. Those days spent in a hospital Special Care Unit when we experienced fear and anxiety we never knew possible.

What makes a special parent; his goodness and kindness, his generosity, mine possessed all these rare qualities. A man that gave with his heart; a man sympathetic to the cause of his fellow man.

When I was very young we were walking in the City, a brisk walk on a cold windy day. I can still feel the sharp pains I felt in my side from walking so swiftly, but I wanted so much to keep up I dare not say a word. We passed a man in tattered clothes wearing dark glasses begging, obviously blind. My father reached into his pocket and threw a few coins into the man's hat. I questioned him, how did we know the man was blind, perhaps he was a fraud, he answered "You never deny an outstretched hand." He had a need to do for others, driven by any cause to help his fellow man. Charity was very important, even if it meant doing without so that others could have, or inconveniencing himself to please others. I hope I inherited some of that benevolence and will pass it on to my children.

We must try to remember the happy times, the wonderful times together that were so special. The summer vacations together when life was carefree, the graduations, weddings, births, we must try to make those memories count the most now for that's all that is left.

We are taught that the Spirit lives on, the Soul lives within us every day. We must comfort ourselves with those thoughts until the day comes when we will be joined together once more embraced in God's Kingdom.

READER RATINGS

YOU CAN BE A RESTAURANT CRITIC-If you visit any of the restaurants selected for inclusion in this section-call WE 1-0027 at any hour and tell your ideas. We want you, the reader, to be our critic. Your message then can be printed in this space.

Q. Why in some restaurants do I have to sit there so long before the waitress gives me the check?
A. Well, the answer to your question is hard to define. It might be simply because the restaurant is so busy that the waitress hasn't time to add up the check. But at some of the better restaurants you will never get a check unless you ask for it. In these establishments they feel that the guests should decide how long they wish to talk or occupy the space after eating and only on rare occasions will they bring a check that has not been solicited and then with apologies.

Q. Some restaurants make a big thing over a lobster tank, but I think it is disgusting to have to kill these animals in order to get a meal. Why do they have these tanks?
A. The reason is simply that lobster has to be freshly killed to be eaten. The lobster tank lets the diner see that what he is getting is really fresh lobster. Possibly some squeamish people believe that the lobster tank should be somewhere else but most diners want to see the live ones and if you do not, you should be suspicious. They are killed instantly in boiling water.

READER RATINGS

Criticism of restaurants are sent directly to restaurants concerned on the form of a memo. Restaurants that consistently give bad service or food are dropped from these pages.

TRIP INTO PAST

We always feel that we have a fine time and wonderful food when we visit George Washington Manor in Roslyn. It is like a trip into the past with modern food and service to visit the Manor.

They have a good menu of American food that is cooked just right. Last week we had a party of four people who visited the G.W. Manor and had entrees which included fish, beef, and veal. Every person in our group said that they thought this restaurant is one of the finest they had ever been to. We decided then that we should spread the word around and decided to make this call J.H.

READER RATINGS

Q. Recently I was a guest at a club luncheon in a restaurant. Accidentally, I overturned my tomato juice. What was the right thing to do? The waiter didn't see the accident immediately. T.L.

A. A waiter seeing such an accident would immediately change the cloth, or if that was impossible at a long table, would spread a clean napkin over the spilled food. As the waiter did not do this because he was busy elsewhere, at a large luncheon you could have spread a napkin over the spot yourself, without undue discussion of the incident. Everyone occasionally has things like this happen.

Q. What do you do with the wrapper on a lump of sugar when you are dining out in a restaurant? Do you put it on the tablecloth, in the saucer of your cup, or in the ash tray? A.M.

A. This is one of those things for which there is no real rule. You just use common sense. I would say put it on the tablecloth, for if you put it in the ash tray it may start a fire, and if you put it in your saucer it may cause the cup to tip over when you put it back in the saucer.

GOOD RESTAURANT

A surprisingly good local restaurant is the Surfside on Hillside Ave. in New Hyde Park. This good sea food restaurant has been discovered by many other people who assemble there on almost any night of the week.

We were there on Thursday and found that their shrimp scampi and red snapper were wonderful. The preparation of the food and the entire look of the restaurant is appetizing. It is of new construction and everything looks spic and span. The food was deliciously cooked and the fish was as fresh as if it were caught a few hours before. This is a very good restaurant. G.F.

MARINATED AND GRILLED FRESH SWORDFISH STEAKS

- 4 1/2-inch slices fresh swordfish steaks
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 4 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1/2 cup white wine
- 3 garlic cloves
- 1/4 tsp. capers
- 3 tbsps. fresh parsley, chopped
- 1 tbsp. Parmesan cheese
- 1/2 tsp. ground pepper
- 1/4 tsp. salt

Blend all ingredients except fish steaks in blender and whirl 5 seconds. Place fish steaks in large baking pan. Pour sauce over fish and marinate about 1 hour.

Make sure coals are hot and grill is positioned close to fire. Place steaks on grill and cook 5 to 8 minutes on each side. The swordfish are done when the flesh near the bone starts to separate from the bone. Be sure to baste swordfish frequently with sauce to preserve the natural juices.

Spoon leftover sauce from baking dish over the fish when it is removed from grill. Do not overcook fish; it toughens and dries the delicate protein. Serve immediately.

Makes 4 servings

Note: You may use any firm-fleshed fish, such as halibut, herring or tuna. You can broil bake or microwave. Serve with a pasta salad and fresh green beans.

ROCK COD STEW

- 4 tbsps. olive oil
- 2 1/2 lbs. rock cod (have your fish market scale and cut into large chunks)
- 2 potatoes, peeled and quartered
- 1 large onion, coarsely chopped
- 3 tbsps. chopped green onion
- 3 cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 cup carrots, chopped
- 1 cup celery, chopped
- 1 (28 oz.) can peeled whole tomatoes
- 2 tbsps. tomato paste
- 1 cup white wine
- 2 cups water
- 1/2 tsp. dried oregano
- 1/2 tsp. dried thyme
- 3 bay leaves
- 1/2 cup fresh parsley, chopped

Heat olive oil in 8-quart kettle over medium-high heat. Add rock cod chunks and potatoes. Sear one side. Cook a few minutes, then turn over and sear other side. Add onions, sauté until onions are lightly brown. Add garlic, carrots, celery. Cook and stir for a few more minutes. Add tomatoes (break up with knife) and their liquid, along with tomato paste, wine, water, oregano, thyme, bay leaves and parsley. Stir. Bring to boil, then reduce heat.

Cover and simmer about 30 minutes, until fish separates from bone. Remove from heat, sprinkle with fresh chopped parsley. Serve immediately. Serve rock cod stew from kettle or use a decorative tureen. Serve into large soup bowls, with fresh Italian or French bread.

It is not necessary to add chicken broth or bouillon cubes, which are very salty. This fish stew is very low in calories and is a nutritious meal.

Makes 4 servings

FRESH CALAMARI WITH PASTA SAUCE

- 3 lbs. cleaned fresh or frozen calamari (squid)
- 6 tbsps. olive oil
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 large garlic cloves
- 1 (28 oz.) can Italian style whole tomatoes, drained
- 1 (6 oz.) can tomato sauce
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1 tsp. fresh basil
- 1 tsp. dried oregano
- 2 bay leaves
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 (10 oz.) pkg. frozen peas or 2 cups shelled fresh peas
- 1 lb. spaghetti
- 1/2 cup chopped parsley

To clean squid, pull tentacles from body and remove hornlike beak in center of tentacles. Empty sac, wash thoroughly. Scrape skin from both parts with knife. Rinse again in cold water. Cut into 1-inch pieces; if tentacles are large, cut in half. Dry pieces of calamari and brown in large skillet with 4 tablespoons olive oil. Fry until squid begins to curl and turns pink, about 5 minutes. Set aside.

Pour oil into 8-quart saucepan. And onion, sauté until translucent. Add garlic and sauté until garlic is lightly brown. Add coarsely chopped tomatoes and tomato sauce, wine, basil, oregano, bay leaves, salt and pepper. Cover and cook about 30 minutes. Add calamari and peas. When calamari and peas are tender, remove from heat, remove bay leaves. Cooking times vary depending on size and toughness of calamari. Test with fork when calamari is easily pierced, it is done.

Cook spaghetti in large kettle of boiling salted water until al dente, then drain. Arrange spaghetti on serving platter. Ladle sauce over it and sprinkle chopped parsley on top.

Add a bit of water or broth if too dry. Stir in remaining butter and the cheese.

Note: Can substitute converted rice in place of arborio rice, if necessary.

Bell peppers

By Paul Bensen and Evander Preston

Bell peppers are one of the most versatile vegetables. They can star as a main course or play a great supporting role in salads, soups, casseroles and vegetable dishes. Cut in bite-size pieces, they make one of the best crudites. Also known as sweet peppers, they are available any time of year in almost every supermarket in the country.

They are an invaluable ally to cooks in a hurry, because they keep in the refrigerator for over a week, may be frozen without blanching and can add a quick touch of color to almost any dinner.

Though green bell peppers are the ones most commonly sold in this country, the more mature, vine-ripened yellow and red peppers have become widely available in recent years. These vine-ripened peppers have a sweeter, subtler taste than the immature green ones, and are especially good in chicken, seafood, lamb and veal dishes.

Bell peppers are native to the Americas, and were one of the first vegetables that early explorers took back to Europe for cultivation there. They quickly became a staple in the Mediterranean countries, and by the 19th century were commonly available throughout Europe.

Members of the Capsicum family, sweet peppers are high in vitamin A and C content, and are widely believed to have anti-bacterial properties. Stems and seeds should always be removed and discarded before peppers are added to recipes.

Roasting bell peppers gives them a very different, delicious flavor, and makes them easy to peel. Just place them under a preheated broiler, about 4 inches from the source of heat, turning them every 5 minutes, until the skin is blistered and beginning to char (15 to 20 minutes). Peppers can be roasted a day ahead, then left in a paper bag in the refrigerator until you're ready to cook them.

Our recipes for today include an easy and distinctive first course, Roasted Bell Peppers with Feta Cheese, and an unusual seafood entree, Bell Peppers with Seafood and Herbs. Both are especially good when made with red bell peppers.

ROASTED BELL PEPPERS WITH FETA CHEESE

BELL PEPPERS WITH SEAFOOD AND HERBS

Do-ahead steps:

1. Cook peppers.

2. Make bread crumbs.

3. Grate cheese.

4. Chop celery and scallions, and reserve in plastic bags.

PREPARATION/COOKING TIME: 30 MINUTES

4 bell peppers (red, if available)

3 tbsps. olive oil

½ cup minced scallions (including half the greens)

1 tsp. minced garlic

½ cup minced fresh parsley

2 stalks celery, chopped

¼ tsp. dried basil

½ cup dry white wine

1 lb. shrimp, peeled, deveined and cut in ½-inch pieces

4 ozs. scallops, cut in ½-inch pieces (if scallops are not available, substitute an zen), picked over, and shredded

1 cup freshly made bread crumbs

½ cup grated Swiss cheese

3-4 ozs. Prosciutto, finely chopped (optional)

¼ tsp. salt

½ tsp. freshly ground black pepper, or to taste

Cut tops off peppers and reserve.

Rinse out pepper shells, removing seeds and ribs. Cook pepper shells in boiling water with a bit of salt and olive oil for 6 to 8 minutes, until they begin to soften.

Remove from water and drain.

Meanwhile, remove stems from reserved pepper tops and finely chop tops. In large, heavy frying pan, heat olive oil over medium heat and add pepper tops. Sauté 1 minute and add scallions, garlic, parsley, celery and basil. Continue to sauté until garlic and scallions soften and just begin to brown.

Stir in wine and add shrimp, scallops and crabmeat and cook, stirring, until shrimp are pink and firm — about 2 minutes.

Pour mixture into heat-proof bowl, add bread crumbs, cheese, Prosciutto (optional), salt and pepper and mix together well.

Stuff pepper shells with mixture, place them in baking dish with ¼ inch of water and bake in preheated 350 F oven for 20 minutes.

Serves 4.

instead of buttermilk, add 1 packet freeze-dried culture, available in health food markets.)

Stir well, cover, and let mixture ferment at room temperature (70 F) until clabbered. Stir well until smooth and refrigerate up to five days.

When baking, you may substitute regular milk for buttermilk by adding 1 tablespoon white vinegar or lemon juice to 1 cup whole milk, or blend the milk with 1½ teaspoons cream of tartar. This sour milk mixture is to be used for baking only — you wouldn't want to drink it. (Don't say I didn't warn you!)

Real buttermilk's natural acidity enhances the leavening action of yeast and baking soda, resulting in baked goods with superior texture. See for yourself with the following recipes:

BUTTERMILK BRAN MUFFINS

3 cups all-bran cereal

1 cup boiling water

2 cups buttermilk

1 cup vegetable oil

2 eggs, lightly beaten

¼ cup honey

2½ cups all-purpose flour

1 cup sugar

2 tps. baking soda

½ tsp. each ground cinnamon and nutmeg

½ tsp. salt

Place cereal in large mixing bowl and pour boiling water over top, stirring to blend. Let stand until cool. Stir in buttermilk, vegetable oil, eggs and honey, blending well.

In separate bowl combine flour, sugar, baking soda, spices and salt. Add to bran mixture, stirring just until blended. Cover tightly and refrigerate.

To bake, spoon refrigerated batter (without stirring) into paper cup-lined microwave cupcake pan or 6-ounce glass custard cups. Fill each cup only half full. (Cover and return remaining batter to refrigerator.) If using custard cups, arrange in circle in oven.

Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) 3 to 4 minutes for 6 muffins, 2 to 2½ minutes for 4 muffins, 1 to 1½ minutes for 2 muffins, and 45 seconds to 1 minute for 1 muffin.

When done, muffins will spring back when gently pressed with finger. Remove muffins immediately to cooling rack and let stand at least 2 minutes before serving.

(Note: Recipe for Buttermilk Bran Muffins makes enough batter for three dozen muffins. Refrigerate batter up to three weeks, and use whenever you want a quick batch of light, tasty muffins.)

CAROLINA CORNBREAD

1½ cups yellow cornmeal

½ cup all-purpose flour

1 tbsp. sugar

1 tsp. each baking powder

and baking soda

½ tsp. salt

1 cup buttermilk

1 egg, lightly beaten

2 tbsps. vegetable oil

Paprika

In medium-size mixing bowl combine cornmeal, flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir with fork to blend.

In separate bowl combine buttermilk, egg and vegetable oil, beating briefly with wire whisk to blend. Add to dry ingredients all at once, stirring just until blended.

Turn mixture into ungreased 8x8-inch glass baking pan. Sprinkle top very lightly with paprika.

Microwave 5 to 6 minutes on HIGH (100 percent power), or until bread springs back when gently pressed. Wet spots will disappear upon standing.

Let stand, uncovered, 3 to 4 minutes, before serving.

Makes 1 8x8-inch loaf cornbread.

RAISIN SPICE CAKE

1 cup granulated sugar

½ cup brown sugar

½ cup butter or margarine,

at room temperature

1 egg

1 tbsp. dark molasses

2 cups all-purpose flour

¼ cup wheat germ

2 tps. ground cinnamon

1 tsp. each ground cloves

and ground nutmeg

1 tsp. baking powder

½ tsp. salt

1½ cups buttermilk

1 cup raisins

2 tbsps. flour

Powered sugar

In large mixing bowl cream sugars with butter until fluffy. Beat in egg and molasses.

In separate mixing bowl combine flour, wheat germ, spices, baking powder and salt. Add, a little at a time, to creamed mixture, alternating with buttermilk. Beat well, until smooth.

Toss raisins with 2 tablespoons flour and stir into batter.

Turn batter into lightly greased or oiled 10-cup microwave-safe bundt pan. Microwave, uncovered, at HIGH (100 percent power) 15 to 18 minutes. Cake should begin to pull away from sides of pan.

Let cake remain in pan 10 minutes before inverting onto serving plate. Dust lightly with sifted powdered sugar.

Serves 8 to 10.

Bake it with buttermilk

By Desiree Vives

The special, tangy flavor makes buttermilk a favorite drink for many, and it's wonderful when blended into creamy salad dressings.

Traditionally, buttermilk was what remained when the butterfat had been removed from milk or cream during churning. Today, the buttermilk you buy in the store is made from pasteurized skim milk. Lactic bacteria are added to the milk, and it is left at room temperature to clabber (coagulate), giving it a heavier consistency.

To this cultured milk, added cream and flecks of butter may be blended in to give that unique buttermilk look and flavor.

Buttermilk is easier to digest than the regular skim milk from which it is made, and it retains all of the milk's nutritional value.

Store buttermilk in the refrigerator no longer than five days.

You can make your own buttermilk at home! Combine 1 quart (70 to 80 F) skim milk with ½ cup (70 F) purchased buttermilk (for starter), and ¼ teaspoon salt. (Or,

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q I have a problem with mold. Under my bay window in our bedroom are wooden drawers for storage. Unfortunately, I cannot use them due to mold growth which penetrates anything I put in there.

The drawers have been varnished, and in an attempt to rid the growth of mold, I have aired them out for days in the hot summer. I have even used a solution of Clorox on them, but nothing seems to rid it of the mold.

Living in the San Joaquin Valley (of California), I would think this would be easy to control with our dry summers, but nothing so far has worked. I would be grateful for any help with this problem.

T.A.B.

A Whenever mildew or mold is present there is a moisture problem. This can be caused by an external moisture source or too much moisture trapped inside the house.

First check the area around the foundation of your home. Be sure that all drainage is away from the foundation including water from watering of plants.

If your home is built on a foundation with a crawl space, your moisture problem could be coming from beneath the house. Studies have shown that capillary rise occurs in nearly all crawl spaces beneath a home where the soil is clay or silt. Moisture may be present even though the ground in the crawl space may seem dry or dusty.

To remedy this moisture problem, you should cover the area with 4 mil polyethylene film or 55-pound rolled roofing. Be sure any seams overlap and are taped or weighted down along the seam. The entire cover should be weighted down with heavy rock or brick.

Be sure there is cross ventilation within the crawl space, since stagnated and humid air under a structure encourages development of fungus and mold. Before the effectiveness of the ground cover was known, large ventilation openings were needed to permit escape of moisture. With good ground cover, however, much less ventilation is required.

If you find the crawl space moisture is not creating the problem, the basic reason for trouble may simply be too much moisture trapped inside the house. You have to get rid of it one way or another. Use an exhaust fan in one or more areas where the moisture is produced — such as the kitchen and/or the bathroom, or perhaps the laundry room.

Sometimes just opening a window a couple of inches when cooking or directly after a shower will help. Or you can get window ventilators or even small vents that are installed in the side of a house.

In short, your job is to see that the moist air is permitted to escape. If it has a way to get out, it won't condense on cool surfaces. An alternative is to use a dehumidifier, which will trap moist air.

Small low-voltage heat rods are sold at marine hardware stores for use on boats. These can be placed in closets or in the drawer cavity to help keep closed areas dry. Even a light bulb is an effective heat source to dry out such closed places.

Several commercial products are also available such as Dry Out, which is in the form of pellets which absorb the excessive moisture. Jet Chemical in San Diego manufactures Dry Out, and you can write to them at 4651 Saratoga Ave., San Diego, CA 92107.

Prior to using a dehumidifier be sure to again clean the drawers and the entire area with a mildew cleaner available at supermarkets (it contains household bleach that kills the mildew fungus). Let dry thoroughly and air out to rid the area of the musty odor.

Mainly for Seniors

By Leonard J. Hansen

I have a question or two and I hope you'll help me find the answers.

Before sitting at the typewriter and the blank sheets of paper awaiting the words for this column I was interviewed, as I have been many times before this, by a national business magazine. The reporter's questions asked many of the same questions which have now become routine — most based on the dumb assumption that because someone reaches some magic age — of 55, 60 or 65 — he or she is to fit a mold along with other like-age contemporaries.

"What do they do with their time? Don't they all really want to be younger in years? How can they live on fixed incomes?"

The questions continued, all based on the mistaken assumption that the mature years are a time of aches, pains, loneliness, sadness, poverty, emptiness and other feelings that are dire or drear.

The reporter had requested 20 minutes to get the answers she wanted and expected, but the interview took two hours when I realized the challenge of smashing the dumb stereotypical images that far too many people still carry about older adults.

I introduced you, the mature adult reader, to her, telling of your success as individuals. You have lived, worked, competed and survived for years, in times of depression, inflation, wars and even famines. You have worked most of your years at lower pay scales but have managed to buy homes, provide for children and the community and still put money away for your future. You have come through wars and other international conflicts, you did not run to Canada, you bought Victory Bonds, War Bonds and Saving Bonds and went to work to protect this nation.

Your volunteerism and community activity were news to the reporter. She had not considered that mature adults are the most active volunteers in the United States, and that if you all withdrew your personal and financial involvement there is hardly a charitable cause that would survive.

"Who pays the taxes to put your children through school?" I asked.

The reporter did a double-take when I gave the facts that adults age 60-plus are the only demographic group that pays more in taxes than you take out in government services. You are paying to put the reporter's children through school, in essence. You are funding the libraries, the police department and even the welfare department which funds people and families under age 65 in the main.

"Who are the key members of your Neighborhood Watch program?" I asked.

"Older adults who dedicate their time to be concerned about their own property and the property of others," she replied.

She was starting to learn about you.

"But, don't they all want to be younger?" she asked. "I'm 31 but I wish I was 25."

The reporter had not considered that you have already survived the ups-and-downs of those younger years and had built your accomplishment.

"Is there something wrong with being mature? What is wrong about being 31?" I asked.

Why must we assume some failure or lack of acceptance because 31 is older than 25 or 55 is older than 31? Each age has its time in our lives — yet a chronological age in no way determines how active we will be as individuals.

The reporter did not have her answer. It would have been simpler had I been able to tell her that you all ate Cream of Wheat for breakfast, took naps in the afternoon, watched six hours of television in your rocking chairs and then took your Valium as you made your way down the sanitized corridors of the rest home to your bed. But that answer would have been a sham, a fraud as surely as the myth that fostered the question.

The reporter asked what you wanted to be called as a group, "did you mind being called senior citizens?"

I told her the story of the fine-retired journalist, M.C. Small — his nickname is "Maggie" — who authored a monthly column called "Small's World" for one of my publications.

At a meeting he was asked, "Maggie, aren't you offended by being called a senior citizen?"

Maggie, then 74, responded, "The question is not in the name of title. The question is in the value of the discount."

TWEEN 12 & 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.

Dr. Wallace: I was one of the millions of teenagers who watched in horror as the space shuttle Challenger exploded. I know I'm only one human being but I'd like to do something to help the children of the crew members who lost their lives in space. Do you know of any fund that has been started? If not, I'd like to get one started. — John.

John: A trust fund for the 11 children of the seven crew members killed in the shuttle disaster already has been established. Contributions can be sent to Space Shuttle Children's Fund, c/o American Security Bank, Box 0150, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Dr. Wallace: I'm not a real good athlete, but I try. I went out for the football team and I went out for the basketball team, but both times the coaches "cut" me from the squads because of a lack of talent.

How am I ever going to get better if I can't practice and improve my skills? Do you think coaches should cut (drop) players who lack advanced ability? — Tom Tom: Basketball teams must drop unskilled players mainly because of a limited practice area and the fact that only five players constitute a starting team. Not so for football. Teams start 11 players on offense and 11 more on defense and practice in the great outdoors large enough to grow wheat or corn. Football coaches should never cut any player unless for disciplinary reasons.

Dr. Wallace: I attend a large Catholic high school and my favorite cousin is enrolled at a public school. We are always debating who gets the better education. Have there been any studies lately that can prove one of us correct?

Her main arguments are that the teachers at her school are better educated and that the students have better supplies and equipment.

I maintain that our teachers care more about their students and encourage them to reach their potential. — Jill Jill: A 1984 reading study conducted by the National Assessment of Educational Programs, and released by the Catholic Education Association, shows that Catholic school students have significantly higher reading proficiency in all grades.

The study of 60,000 students (6,000 were attending Catholic schools) also found that Catholic school students spend slightly less time watching television, receive more foreign language and science instruction, read more school-related materials and do more homework.

A researcher in the study cautions that it is possible that Catholic school students are more affluent, better prepared academically and more motivated than those in public schools, so it really can't be said that the Catholic school students' higher levels of achievement are caused by the Catholic schools.

Personally, I put much more faith in the desire of the student and the involvement and guidance of his or her parents than the type of institution attended when it comes to superior education.

Harvard, Stanford and Knox College do not "produce" superior students. Superior students "give" these great learning institutions excellent reputations.

Dr. Wallace: I don't smoke, drink or take drugs of any kind. At least, I didn't until I attended a party last week. Curiosity got the best of me and I tried a couple drags on a marijuana cigarette and drank a bottle of beer.

I honestly didn't enjoy either of these "vices," I just wanted to experience the taste and effect of alcohol and pot. The taste of the beer was bitter, an unpleasant adventure. I did get high on the pot (it lasted about 30 minutes) but it is something I'll never try again. I didn't like the idea that I was not completely in control of my body and my mind.

I am 17 and very close to my parents who trust me very much. I'm also very religious. Now I have a guilty conscience and don't know what to do about it. Should I tell my parents about my party "sins"? Will that make this guilt go away? — Tina

Tina: Telling your parents will do little but upset them and make them reconsider the trust they have in you. The important element is that "it is something I'll never try again."

Use your religion as the vehicle to relieve your guilt. A meaningful prayer should do wonders.

Good records reduce tax-time anxiety

Some people have no problem when it comes to knowing what records to keep for income tax time. They have all the appropriate canceled checks and sales receipts — but may not have them organized enough to be useful. It's tough to find just the check you need when they've all been stuffed into one huge box throughout the year.

Others of us suffer from a basic lack of information about tax laws and common deductions.

In both instances, wage earners could end up paying more income tax than necessary. A partial solution is to use the services of a professional tax preparer.

A good tax preparer always should be capable of finding more authorized deductions than a taxpayer could on his own, according to Ross N. Longfield, vice president and director of Beneficial Tax Centers Inc.

Whether you plan to use a tax preparer or do the work yourself, the best way to fill out forms quickly and to your maximum benefit is by keeping good records throughout the year, according to Charles Simms, manager of tax planning and administration for R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc.

"If you've kept good records throughout the year, you not only have to have a clear picture of what to expect, you also have eliminated much of the tension that seems to come with the task," Simms said.

"Keeping all such records in a meaningful system will satisfy the IRS — especially if you are called for an audit — and will simplify the job of filing your forms," he said.

Simms offered several suggestions for organizing tax records and preparing tax forms:

- Order publications from the IRS that give current legal requirements for record keeping on automobile expenses, contributions, employee business expenses, income from tips, etc.

- Purchase a file with individual pockets or folders. Label each by the deductions and credits that the IRS recognizes. Throughout the year, put all receipts into this file.

- In a spiral notebook, label pages by the same deduction and credit categories. Each month when the bank statement is balanced, jot down on the appropriate pages the number and date of the check, the person or office to whom it was paid and the amount.

- At the end of the year, add to the check record any cash amounts for which you have a file receipt. Total each page to determine the deduction and credits you may claim.

- Before you file the complete tax returns, make three copies of all forms and attachments. Parts of one copy may be used for filing with state returns because some states accept federal forms in place of state forms. A second copy will be your permanent record in case of audit. The last copy can be used for corrections you may have to file.

Proper record keeping offers additional benefits as well, Simms said. "You will know whether or not you should invest some funds in an individual retirement account or some other tax sheltering program to save money on your taxes," he said.

"Also, you will know ahead of time if you are going to be eligible for a refund so you can file as early as possible to get your money."

A financial plan involves setting goals and then finding a satisfactory way to achieve those goals. It usually involves investments, but one of the most important initial investments you can make is with your time.

First, think about what goals you would like to achieve. While they should be somewhat specific, they need not all be headed in the same direction.

Next, invest some time in selecting your C.P.A. as a financial planner. In addition to having well-rounded experience with the financial community, your financial planner should be objective. Objectivity is important and becomes apparent as the C.P.A. coordinates your assets to achieve your goals.

What is a good investment for one person may not necessarily be a good investment for someone else; and the job of the financial planner is that of matching the appropriate means to achieve the desired results.

PIGGY BANK PROFITS

Teaching children to manage money

By Janet Gordon

When it comes to educating children, money is a primary consideration. Sure, parents have to shell out mounds of the stuff to pay for their children's education. But money also is a major educational concern because children have to learn how to manage finances.

Parents must realize that children, as soon-to-be adults, will have money of their own someday. And whether they end up rich or poor, laborer or executive, married or single, they will have to know how to use it properly or suffer the consequences.

How do they learn?

"Children should not be taught, but given everyday experience in handling money," said Dr. Thomas Gordon, a clinical psychologist. "The main thing is to involve children, at a very early age, in having money and managing it themselves."

Sounds like the old allowance game. But that game has different rules depending on which expert's advice you decide to follow.

There basically are three methods of disbursing funds to children: doling out money upon request as needs arise, giving a regular salary allowance with few or no strings attached or giving an allowance tied to specific chores.

Some experts claim that tying money to housework, while it may teach money management, undermines the creation of domestic responsibility.

"I'm against paying children to take out the garbage," said Dr. Dorothy Hewes, professor of child development at San Diego State University. "They should happily help sustain the family."

"I like to think chores are the responsibility of every member of the family," Gordon said. "They should be divided up by group decision and everyone expected to pull his own weight because everyone enjoys the home and needs to maintain it."

Both Gordon and Hewes believe, however, that children can earn extra money for duties performed around the house above and beyond the usual tasks.

According to an article in The Christian Science Monitor, most experts agree with Hewes and Gordon that an allowance be given with no strings attached. Most parents, however, ignore the experts and tie the allowance to specific chores, the article said.

These parents liken chores at home to the real jobs their children will have later and apply the logic that if the job isn't done, there will be no paycheck.

And some experts agree with them.

"Some parents make the mistake of giving their children a spending allowance without expecting the children to do anything in return," said Dr. Robert Leone, director of the U.S. International University Psychological Clinics in San Diego. "A spending allowance may only give them the idea that money is always just going to come their way, that it will just fall into their laps. Well, that's not the way of the world. In the real world you do 'x' amount of work and you get 'x' amount of money in return," he said.

Regardless of how the money is parceled out, most experts agree that for a child to learn money management, parents have to let go of the purse strings and let the child spend the money any way he wishes.

Of course, when the amount of the allowance is decided upon, parents should stipulate how part of the allowance should be spent. The parent and child together should decide what the allowance covers and which expenses the parents will continue to pay for. For example, is the child expected to purchase his clothes out of the allowance? If Mark takes piano lessons, will that cost be included in his allowance? Is the price of a weekly roller skating trip or movie outing with friends to come out of the allowance?

When a child helps decide his allowance by listing his needs and ranking them in order of importance, he learns that income first should cover needs and that since money is limited, he'll have to save a portion of his allowance for any special purchases.

It is important, however, that a child not have to account for every expenditure. If parents tell their kids how to spend — or save — the entire allowance, it reduces the opportunity for the children to learn, Gordon said.

Children probably will use some of their allowance to buy flimsy toys and snacks. But they also will discover that if they really want to buy something special, they'll have to sacrifice snacks and save that money instead.

"I think children have to learn money management by letting them make mistakes," Hewes said. "If they buy a plastic truck and the wheels fall off, next time they'll probably look at the wheels before they buy. But, however they choose to spend their money, you have to respect their decisions," she said.

The inevitable question comes up — what do you do when the child blows her $5 allowance on video games and needs 25 cents to buy a folder for school?

Hewes said children should have two choices upon running out of cash — dip into savings or borrow from future allowances. That can help them learn the importance of saving and using money wisely. If they have to dig into their savings for a bicycle to pay for necessities like a folder, they may be more conscientious in their day-to-day spending.

Finally, many experts hold to the adage that actions speak louder than words.

"Children will follow the financial style of the family," Hewes said. "If the family talks about saving money, the children see that. Whatever the circumstances, they have to be able to say, 'This is the way we do things in my family. This is what my family believes in, and resist peer pressure.'"

Jewelry and wine investing pays off

In the staid investment market of real estate offerings, stocks, bonds, IRAs and gold bars, entertaining investments that are sound money-makers are gaining popularity.

Inventive ventures that are both investment-wise and interesting still can be found. Antique jewelry, rare books, comic books, jewelry and even vintages may be good ways of efficiently managing your assets and indulging your collecting passion at the same time.

Two of the most popular investments are also two with the longest tradition — wine and jewelry.

Contrary to popular belief, diamonds are not a girl's best friend if the girl is a serious investor. Unless a person really knows the value of rare gems and how they appreciate on the market, he may end up with an investment that's hard to liquidate for even half its value. To determine the value, an assessment of the gemstone grade and the right kind of appraisals are necessary. To get his money's worth, an investor must have both market and insurance quotes with certificates to validate the gemstone value.

According to a story in The Wall Street Journal, the Gemological Institute of America says it is crucial to decide on the right strategy before investing and selling jewelry.

"Realize what you can obtain up front from the jewelry," said Thomas Yonelunas. "You can be talking about pennies — or thousands. If it's valuable, go the distance."

Going the distance means finding the right buyer, and many buyers refuse to purchase jewelry from individuals, preferring wholesale sources instead. Consider auction houses such as Christie's East, where buyers and sellers are charged 10 percent commission on pieces sold for more than $3,000. For pieces worth less than $3,000, the buyer is charged 10 percent commission and the seller is charged 15 percent.

Consignment is another good way to sell a jewelry investment for close to its worth. Most jewelers won't buy used jewelry, but may let it be displayed. Insist that the store insure the item; get a contract that sets the commission for the jeweler and length of display. Make sure the contract includes a description of the piece. Consigned pieces commonly are sold within three weeks with payment immediately upon sale.

Antique shops are good sources for sale as well as purchase of investment jewelry. These shops can pay up to 40 percent or 50 percent of the jewelry's value, and thanks to Madonna and the current nostalgia craze, jewelry either 100 years old or from vogue eras such as the '40s or '50s is very collectible — and a good investment. Bakelite jewelry, glass-bead jewelry, rhinestones intricately set in silver as well as anything art deco or art nouveau will appreciate if picked up inexpensively at a garage sale or small antiques boutique.

Jewelers do advise against investing in the big four — diamonds, rubies, emeralds and sapphires — because although sentimentally attractive, they are difficult to resell. Jewelers recommend these precious gems only if they are set in watches such as Gucci, Piaget, Cartier or Rolex. With or without the gems, such watches are some of today's best jewelry investments.

If vintage jewelry is a good investment, then vintage wine is equally interesting and profitable. Wine shops often offer special discounts on wines that just are entering the market. Purchased by the case, these wines often increase in value as they age, creating a profit for the investor.

Jordan Vineyards Cabernet Sauvignon, for example, was very reasonable in 1978 and 1979 when it premiered. Today, you rarely see a bottle on the shelves, and it has quadrupled in value.

In 1981, a hushed crowd heard $23,000 bid at an auction, then $24,000. The item? Not a rare 1899 bottle of French red, but a case of 1979 California Cabernet Sauvignon from an experimental venture of Robert Mondavi and Baron Philippe de Rothschild. An 1844 bottle of Chateau Lafite sold for $5,000.

To distinguish an investment wine from an ordinary wine, consider these three characteristics: Will it improve with age? Is it a well-rated vintage? Does the wine come from a respected winery and wine-producing region? Journals and wine store owners are excellent sources for determining whether the 1974 California Cabernet Sauvignon purchased at $3.99 a bottle in 1979 will retail at $25 to $115 a bottle in 1985.

Gourmet, Vintage Magazine and Wine World, as well as Michael Broadbent's The Great Vintage Wine Book, are must-haves for serious wine investors.

Some people prefer to work through a wine merchant who will offer an advance on a particular wine prior to its release from the winery. Purchasing through wine futures means that 12 to 24 months later the investor receives his wine and hopes it eventually is worth what was predicted. One example is the Alexis Lichine 1959 Bordeaux, sold through the futures market in 1959 at $3.99 a bottle and retailing in 1983 at $200 a bottle.

Another investing option is the stocks of wine companies owned by such big names as Seagram's, Coca-Cola or Beatrice Foods. But you can't drink your investment in wine stocks on a special occasion — or, for that matter, dress up your little black dress with stock in a rare gem mine.

The intrigue of wine and jewelry investments is that if you spend your money wisely, you can enjoy the luxury daily or sell it smartly on the market on a rainy day. The choice is yours.

Gold layer bonded

Do you know what's meant by an ad that says "gold-filled"? Gold filling is a process by which a layer of at least 10-karat gold has been mechanically bonded to a base metal. This layer must constitute at least one-twentieth of the total weight of the metal in the piece. — CNS

Tips for collecting art as investment

By Janet Satter

"I could go out to four or five shops right now and buy art and make $500 to $1,000."

Harold Samuels says there are opportunities to discover good art buys just about everywhere and anyone can turn an immediate profit, which he says he can do in one day. There's not a great mystique to buying art. In fact, he's "trying to demystify, take the baloney" out of the subject.

For success, he repeats over and over, it's necessary to follow certain rules. He has a track record to back up his rules. An art dealer with his wife, Peggy, for 30 years (and before that a corporate attorney), now he devotes most of his time to writing, which includes his book "Everyone's Guide To Buying Art."

Samuels says there are nine keys to collecting or investing in art:

— Develop "touch." Acquire knowledge by reading. Samuels suggests beginning with American art history as a foundation for collecting art: "It's still undervalued on the market." Then get out and look at art.

"If you want to keep your hands clean, go to the high-level galleries and auction houses. But to really learn, look around in junk shops, less-expensive antique shops, flea markets, anywhere you might find art. The burden is on you to educate yourself.

"When we started out, we had no money," Samuels said. "We had to work our way in. We couldn't afford to buy a picture and take a chance on it."

Getting five times the return on a picture is what they planned on — and got. "You can do that in art, but you have to be willing to spend the time. Hold out for the real thing."

— Specialization. "One ought to specialize in what pleases him." Narrow down the scope to a subject, a time period, a type of artist, style. The narrower the scope, the better the chances of gaining expertise more quickly — and more profitably.

But don't choose an area because it seems to be profitable, choose it because it appeals to you, it's important to you. "It is no good if you do not love them (the artworks you buy)."

Think about the paintings, enjoy learning about them, buying them. "It's also possible to make money and love what you do."

Samuels considers American paintings probably the best area for someone in America. On the other hand, he consistently finds German paintings here for a dealer in Germany, who in turn finds American paintings there for him.

With a narrow specialization, one will quickly get to know the other collectors and dealers in the field. To select a specialization, look at art history books, art magazines, museums, see what appeals to you and, perhaps, seek advice from curators, dealers, auctioneers or advance collectors when you're making that choice. Find out everything you can about your specialty.

— Personal limits. Know yourself and stick to your own physical, emotional and budgetary limitations. However, Samuels repeatedly made the point that one can start from ground zero. "There still are a bunch of paintings out there."

— The professionalism of the artist. Know the artist who signed the work. That artist should be listed in reference or source books. For works of living artists, look into what artworks show at what galleries, read art magazines, check on what associations they belong to and find out if they are in "Who's Who In American Art."

— Physical condition of the art. — Appraisal and price. Appraisals may be closer to the value of an artwork than the price asked. Appraisers should be specialists in a specific area and independent professionals, preferably not connected with auction houses or dealers.

— Auctions. "Buyers should realize that auctions dispose of sellers' mistakes as well as art of importance." "Buyer beware" is Samuels' rule.

— Dealers. Samuels feels strongly that a dealer should give a buyer a guarantee of condition, signature and authenticity, plus specify price and terms and any right of return. He writes in his book, "The ideal dealer should be a moral and mature expert who has been in the art business long enough to be able to serve as preselector, pathfinder and professor." Get recommendations from museums.

— Selling. "You don't learn everything you should know about buying until you sell." Have a program for selling, thus continually upgrade your art collection. However, don't wait for an emergency to sell because art is not a very liquid investment.

Compulsive gamblers lose $20,000 a year

Compulsive gamblers — the United States has an estimated 1.7 million of them — are typically male, age 35 to 40, competitive and athletic, with high-energy personalities, writes psychologist Thomas Truss in the APA Monitor, the American Psychological Association magazine.

And they're big losers. Truss says each drops about $20,000 a year and many end up as embezzlers and bad-check writers. — CNS

$425,000 for half dime

Women investors pursue the 'American Dream'

Single, married or divorced women today are juggling not just household finances but also their personal finances with more savvy than ever before.

The number of women investors are on the rise as they slowly but surely gain access to job markets and high-priced salaries — formerly the kingdom of men. But that means they also must learn to deal with the world of finance — a world of credit cards, real estate investments, small-business loans and IRAs, a world fraught with double standards that often require the brains of a banker and the patience of a saint to negotiate.

The world of investment also is fraught with worry. According to Working Woman magazine, a study of affluent, well-educated women finds that one out of two worries about ending up destitute. Today, one out of five women 65 and over actually does live in poverty. Intelligent investment, however, can reduce both the possibility and the worry of this occurring.

There is a whole new market of advice for the woman investor today. Magazines, such as Working Woman and Savvy, offer monthly advice columns and tips. Banks, savings and loans and other money managers offer seminars about such topics as reading stock-market reports, investment from A to Z and beginning real estate investing.

An increasingly popular move for both men and women, is to rely on financial planners. According to a recent study by the Palo Alto, Calif.-based SRI International, financial planning has become one of the fastest growing professional fields in the United States.

"The financial world is getting more complicated," said Robert Crossland, a tax and estate planning attorney and member of the research team at SRI International. "People cannot rely on the government. They have to plan for themselves."

Four out of 10 women, according to the Working Woman survey, turn to their parents, friends or relatives for advice. Only one in 10 listed a stockbroker. Investment pros — whether stockbrokers, financial planners or bankers — are a woman investor's new best friends.

According to these advisers, another good friend for every investor is an individual retirement account, IRAs — and Keogh and 401(k) plans if you're a working woman — not only plan for future needs but also offer tax savings. More and more women are teaming up with a friend and setting deadlines for opening and contributing to an IRA.

Investors' clubs also are an answer for women who are afraid to get started in nest-egg building.

As women enter the corporate job market, they also receive the opportunity to take advantage of corporate-sponsored investment programs such as deferred compensation, profit sharing and thrift programs. Automatic investment deposits in mutual funds or savings accounts save time and allow an investor or his money manager to take advantage of the corporation's labor.

Women looking for stock investments may want to encourage their brokers to look at companies that are about to go public. Private companies going public often perform better in the stock market than established companies and, for the new woman investor, offer ground-level entry with a potentially big payoff.

For women who already have made an investment in businesses of their own, there is a new fairy godmother to help them raise additional investment capital. The Venture Capital Network of Durham, N.H., is a non-profit, computerized referral service that helps attract investors to businesses. Entrepreneurs pay $100 for a six-month listing on a data base that is combed regularly by more than 320 investor groups. To date, this network has provided more than 500 prescreened introductions for 129 entrepreneurs.

Getting back to the beginner investor, however, following are some basic rules from the newest bible of women and money, "How To Avoid Getting Ripped Off: Essential But Hard-To-Find Consumer Facts For Women," by Carol L. Clark:

- Plan a budget for at least three months in advance to keep cash flow in control.

- Save 10 percent of your monthly income, keeping it in a safe, liquid account that earns interest and is accessible.

- Look carefully at your debts and be sure they do not exceed 15 percent of your take-home pay. That includes both car payments and mortgages.

- Reconcile your bank statement each month. Investing requires a thorough knowledge of your monthly statement and its fluctuations.

Single, married or divorced, women today are juggling not just household finances but also their personal finances with more savvy than ever before.

The number of women investors are on the rise as they slowly but surely gain access to job markets and high-priced salaries — formerly the kingdom of men. But that means they also must learn to deal with the world of finance — a world of credit cards, real estate investments, small-business loans and IRAs, a world fraught with double standards that often require the brains of a banker and the patience of a saint to negotiate.

The world of investment also is fraught with worry. According to Working Woman magazine, a study of affluent, well-educated women finds that one out of two worries about ending up destitute. Today, one out of five women 65 and over actually does live in poverty. Intelligent investment, however, can reduce both the possibility and the worry of this occurring.

There is a whole new market of advice for the woman investor today. Magazines, such as Working Woman and Savvy, offer monthly advice columns and tips. Banks, savings and loans and other money managers offer seminars about such topics as reading stock-market reports, investment from A to Z and beginning real estate investing.

An increasingly popular move, for both men and women, is to rely on financial planners. According to a recent study by the Palo Alto, Calif.-based SRI International, financial planning has become one of the fastest growing professional fields in the United States.

"The financial world is getting more complicated," said Robert Crossland, a tax and estate planning attorney and member of the research team at SRI International. "People cannot rely on the government. They have to plan for themselves."

Four out of 10 women, according to the Working Woman survey, turn to their parents, friends or relatives for advice. Only one in 10 listed a stockbroker. Investment pros — whether stockbrokers, financial planners or bankers — are a woman investor's new best friends.

According to these advisers, another good friend for every investor is an individual retirement account, IRAs — and Keogh and 401(k) plans if you're a working woman — not only plan for future needs but also offer tax savings. More and more women are teaming up with a friend and setting deadlines for opening and contributing to an IRA.

Investors' clubs also are an answer for women who are afraid to get started in nest-egg building.

As women enter the corporate job market, they also receive the opportunity to take advantage of corporate-sponsored investment programs such as deferred compensation, profit sharing and thrift programs. Automatic investment deposits in mutual funds or savings accounts save time and allow an investor or his money manager to take advantage of the corporation's labor.

Home is where the profit is

For the majority of us, investing in real estate begins — and ends — at home.

Some 55 million Americans own their homes, and for millions of others this purchase remains an important goal. Owning a home still is the cornerstone of the American Dream.

It's also been very profitable.

During the inflationary years of the late 1970s and early 1980s, real estate investments posed returns of 25 percent and more in a single year. Individuals saw the value of their houses increase astronomically in just a short time.

Sanity has returned to the real estate market in recent years. Spiraling price increases have subsided, so it's not likely an investor will make a fortune overnight in real estate. However, real estate remains an investment opportunity that can generate high returns over a long term for the patient and careful investor.

Investment opportunities also exist in high-quality commercial properties like shopping malls and office buildings. While banks and insurance companies finance many of these projects, there are opportunities for the individual investor.

Limited partnerships are one way into these big deals, but the minimum share usually is high — $25,000 or more. Even if an investor has the capital, he may find the deal is structured more for its write-offs than real estate gains. And liquidity — the ability to transfer ownership and get the original investment out — can be difficult, especially if the properties are somewhat speculative.

An alternative to limited partnerships is the real estate investment trust. Designed for the small investor, this trust pools funds for participation in real estate ownership or financing. They were popular in the early 1970s, until a downturn in the economy threw many of them — and their investors — for big losses.

The problem was that the trusts invested in risky development properties and construction loans that didn't work out when the market turned flat. In some cases, they made mortgage loans to developments in weak locations. The stores and offices remained vacant and there were no lease payments to repay the mortgages and provide interest to the shareholders.

Today, the real estate investment trust industry, as a whole, is looking more carefully at the types of properties being purchased, and interest in trusts is making a strong comeback.

In 1984, some $3 billion was raised from real estate investment trust offerings, about four times the amount raised in 1983. Many of these trusts trade on the major stock exchanges at prices affordable to the small investor. And they usually offer good annual returns because, by law, they must distribute at least 95 percent of their net income to owners.

Sounds good, right? Well, some of them are and some aren't. So how does an investor know which trust is right for him?

"The small investor should take his cue from what the larger institutions look for when considering real estate investments," said Jonathan Paris of the real estate group at Salomon Bros. Inc., a New York investment banking firm. Salomon Bros. was underwriter for EQK Realty Investors I, a trust that trades on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The most important consideration in evaluating a real estate investment trust is specified properties," he said. "If the properties aren't clearly identified, you wind up investing in a manager's ability to pick out the right properties rather than in the real estate itself."

Paris also favors trusts that invest solely in equity, not mortgage loans. "And, the properties should be diversified both geographically and by type. They shouldn't all be office buildings in one city."

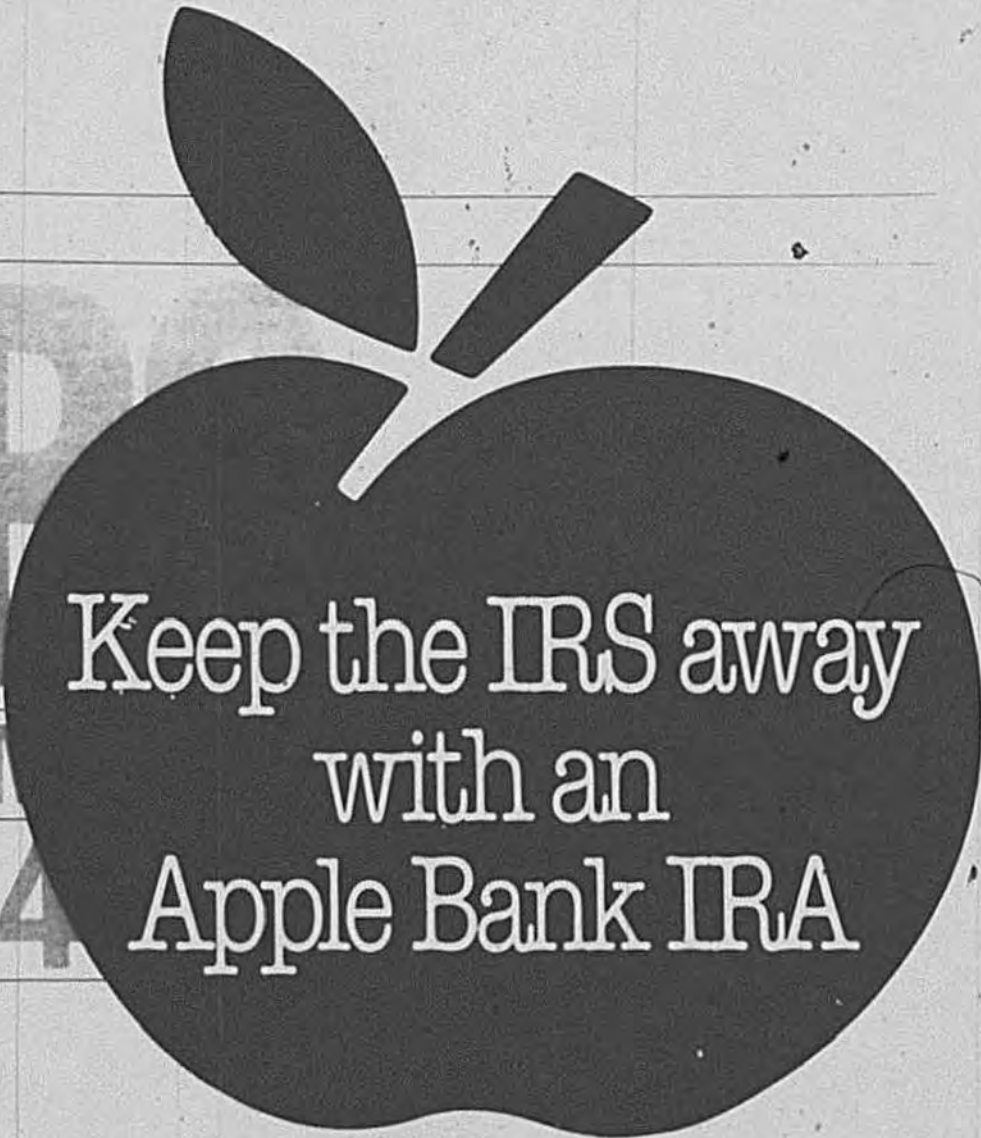

Paris says the key things to avoid in trusts are a lack of liquidity, "blind pools" where the investor doesn't know what his investment is buying, and open-end funds where more shares can be sold at any time, thereby diluting the interests of the original shareholders.

A final factor Paris considers important is for the trust to have a finite life — a fixed period of time after which it must be sold. "This means management can't hold onto the properties forever. When the market is right, they must sell them and distribute the proceeds to investors."

Finite life or not, a real estate investment trust investor, like any real estate buyer, must have patience. The trusts are not designed for a quick trading profit. But for the individual investor willing to look beyond his own back yard, they may offer one of the best opportunities to maximize returns.

THE AMERICAN DREAM

Estate planning

To the serious investor and his heirs, it's almost as crucial to protect financial assets as it is to build them. A will, therefore, is an important part of overall financial strategy. It allows a property owner to decide how his assets will be managed and passed on after his death.

When there is no will, state law decides distribution of property.

A will lets a person choose his beneficiaries and designate how his estate is to be divided. It enables him to choose the executor of the estate — the person or institution who sees that the will is carried out. And it is a means by which a person can name who will be the legal guardian of his children in the event both parents die.

It also allows the person to express desires for such issues as the funeral, organ donation or selling the family business.

Since a will outlines such specific and important information, it should be reviewed annually.

"Annual reviews are important because life, family and asset circumstances are changing," said Robert B. Nelson, chairman of the Personal Planning Section of the Cleveland-based national law firm of Jones, Day, Reavis and Pogue.

"Tax and estate laws are changing annually, sometimes semiannually. The only way to be sure to avoid costly mistakes is to seek expert advice regularly."

There are several questions a person must ask himself in preparing a will, according to Stephan

Leimberg, a professor of taxation and estate planning.

Does my spouse have a will? If so, is it coordinated with my will?

Do I trust the person named as primary executor? Did I name backups in case the person I named is unwilling or unable to serve?

Have I selected a person with business, investment and money management skills? Does the person I selected have enough time to devote to proper estate administration? Does he get along with my beneficiaries?

Did I ask the guardians named to raise my children if they are willing to do so? Would they raise the children as I would like? Can they afford to raise the children?

Aside from preparing for the management of estate after death, a person should make preparations for estate management in case he becomes incompetent or incapable, according to Nelson. A power of attorney gives another person, such as a spouse or child, the power to transact business for the property owner. Without this power of attorney, "it may become necessary for a court to appoint a guardian. This can be an expensive and cumbersome process," Nelson said.

All legal documents referring to estate planning should be kept in a safe, convenient place such as a lawyer's or accountant's office. According to the Merrill Lynch Inc. booklet "You and Your Money," a safe-deposit box may be sealed at time of death.

USED CARS

Minimizing risks of buying, selling

By Janet Gordon

Whether you don't have enough cash to buy a new car, or whether you want to sell your old car to get enough cash to buy a new one, buying and selling used cars is a part of the American way of life.

But with used cars, a consumer runs a number of risks — whether he's buying or selling. When buying, a person runs the risk of buying someone else's lemon or a stolen vehicle. When selling, a person risks getting a fair price or having a lawsuit filed if paperwork is not handled correctly.

The best way to avoid these scenarios is to do as much research on the car as possible before buying or selling.

Following are tips from the Automotive Information Council.

To determine the appropriate price, check newspaper ads for vehicles similar to the one you are trying to buy or sell. Keep the condition of the car in mind — a consumer will not pay top dollar for a car with abnormally high mileage or in need of major repairs. Remember, too, that people selling used cars are in competition with used car dealers who have reconditioned their vehicles and offer a warranty.

If attempting to sell a car you're still making payments on, you must get the title or a release from the loan agency.

If buying, don't buy a car that doesn't have all the proper paperwork. Check the car's Vehicle Identification Number with the VIN listed on the title.

If the paperwork looks right, request a test drive. Check to make sure that all lights, doors and windows work. Check the tires for wear and proper inflation. Ask if the seller has a record of car maintenance required over the past years.

If selling, go along on a test drive with a potential buyer or take some kind of security deposit. Request a certified check or cash as payment and don't let the buyer have the car or title until you receive payment.

When buying, avoid a deal if the seller absolutely demands cash. Always obtain a receipt for the sale, which both parties have signed. If selling, be sure to keep a copy of the receipt for yourself. The receipt should state the year, make and model, serial number of the car and the price paid. Indicate whether the car is sold "as is" or with some kind of guarantee.

Most state vehicle registrations must be transferred to the new owner. Also remember to cancel — or buy — insurance coverage on the car.

Pay raise less important now

For today's smaller and more affluent two-wage-earner families, salary increases are less important than they used to be, a new study shows. Such families are more concerned with paid leisure time, fewer working hours, child care and related employer services, according to the study by the American Council of Life Insurance.

Single copies of the study "The Changing Work Place: Perceptions/Reality" are available free from Trend Analysis Program, American Council of Life Insurance, 1850 K St. N.W., Washington, DC 20006-2284. — CNS

U.S. 'cornered' gold

The United States at one time controlled most of the world's monetary gold. It's estimated that the U.S. gold reserve in 1944 of more than $26 billion was over three-fourths of the world's monetary gold supply at that time. — CNS

BIDDING BONUSES

Research antique value
 before the auction

By Gary Krino

The antique auction circuit can be as exhilarating as seeing Paris for the first time or as horrendous as mistaking a sexy lingerie store for your grandmother's favorite retail store while chauffeuring her on a shopping tour.

Antique auctions can offer some good buys and some not-so-good buys. What it boils down to is: You'd better know what you're doing once the auctioneer starts his machine-gun chatter about Chippendale this and Hepplewhite that.

And please keep your hands at your side if you're not bidding. Something as seemingly innocent as raising your hand to scratch your nose could be construed as a bid by the auctioneer, and you'll end up being the not-so-happy owner of, say, a French armoire that looks more like some schlock discount house reproduction than something from Marie Antoinette's bedroom.

The keys to playing an antique auction right are knowing what you're after before you start to bid, knowing what you're willing to shell out and then sticking to that figure.

Once you know what you want and what you can afford, the next step is to find a catalog that describes the items that will go on the block. It will give you valuable information about the pieces, including such important facts as payment arrangements, when the items must be removed from the premises and who's responsible for delivering them.

Get to the auction early so you'll have time to give the item a good once-over. Check the condition of anything you might want to bid on and look for marks of authenticity — a signature, date or mark that validates the age or the maker.

Realize that the rarer a piece is, the more you should expect to pay for it. If the piece happens to include fine silver or brass trims or stained or beveled glass, it'll make a difference in price, too.

If you come across a piece you like but it's in need of repair, figure in the repair costs before you decide what you're willing to pay. And don't bid on any item you haven't thoroughly inspected. You might not be able to see flaws or broken pieces from a seat halfway back in the auction crowd.

Plan to spend several hours or even a whole day at an auction. Cutting yourself short of time might mean that you'll have to leave before the item you want comes up for consideration.

And don't assume that just because there are four chairs in a set, you are bidding on the whole set. Get your multiples straight or else you might bid what you think is a fair price for the set and go home with only one chair.

If you've checked antique shops and priced what you're interested in before going to the auction, know that what you should pay at the auction is about two-thirds of the price you saw in antique shops.

And don't get antsy and over-anxious when something you want comes up for bid. Such shenanigans could tip off the auctioneer, who then might engineer bids to take advantage of your I-gotta-have-it attitude, and you'll end up paying more than you should have.

Unpack beer cans, baseball cards

If you've got a 1976 Pete Rose baseball card or — wow! — a 1953 Mickey Mantle card, you've got an investment.

Likewise, you have an investment if you have a first edition book by William Faulkner.

Or a set of Little Lulu comic books.

Or a 1965 Mustang.

Or a cone-shaped Schlitz beer can.

So says Alan Crittenden, head of Crittenden Research Inc. in Novato, Calif. He edits a consumer investment newsletter and has edited "The Almanac of Investments."

The Almanac goes far beyond stocks and bonds and real estate. It goes into the closet, the bookshelf, the garage. In other words, there may be some stuff around that consumers hadn't considered in the investment category. The criteria that makes miscellany an investment usually is based on its artistic or historic merit, Crittenden suggested. Rarity is another factor. Such as:

— Baseball cards. When he was a kid, Crittenden collected baseball cards, but later, "my mother threw my collection away, like a lot of mothers did. That's why the cards are valuable today." He added up the worth of those lost cards and came up with $3,000. Particularly valued are those of the great players in their early years. The 1953 Mickey Mantle card, for example, now is worth between $100 and $200. The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City now has a set of baseball cards, said Crittenden, and other museums are collecting them, too.

— Comic books. The best ones to have are those from the Golden Age, the late '30s, '40s and '50s, such as Little Lulu, Donald Duck and Planet (science fiction). They are desirable because of their illustrators, such as Will Eisner and Carl Barks, artists working at drawing comics to support themselves and their art, Crittenden said. He has heard of Barks' oil paintings selling for $40,000. The best place to sell comics is the big comic convention — Com-Con — held annually in San Diego.

— Automobiles. Recently during a radio show, when Crittenden said that a 1965 Mustang was worth about $6,000, the interviewer lamented that she had sold hers the day before for $1,500. Some cars from the 1950s, such as Thunderbirds, Edsels or Corvairs, have appreciated in value.

— Books. Some good investments are American authors. Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald and William Faulkner. Some books that cost a small amount 20 to 25 years ago now are worth hundreds. To illustrate his point, Crittenden brought along "The Mansion" by William Faulkner, which he bought for $25. The book originally sold for $45. An "investment" book should be both a first edition and a first printing. A second printing halves the value, he said.

— Beer cans. The cone-top Schlitz beer can that appeared on the scene in 1935 now is worth about $150. During World War II, there were drab olive green Schlitz cans for the troops. "I am sure all those soldiers threw them away. There are so few, they're worth more," Crittenden said. There are other beers and other cans, and an organization called Beer Can Collectors of America, which has established five grading categories, from mint condition to "hopeless."

— Records. The 1950s and 1960s are popular now. Crittenden mentioned in particular Elvis Presley, the Beatles or Beach Boys records. Records as investments have to be in mint condition, virtually unplayed and in the original album cover. It's "perfect or nothing." And, the almanac cautions, there are many counterfeit and bootleg records around.

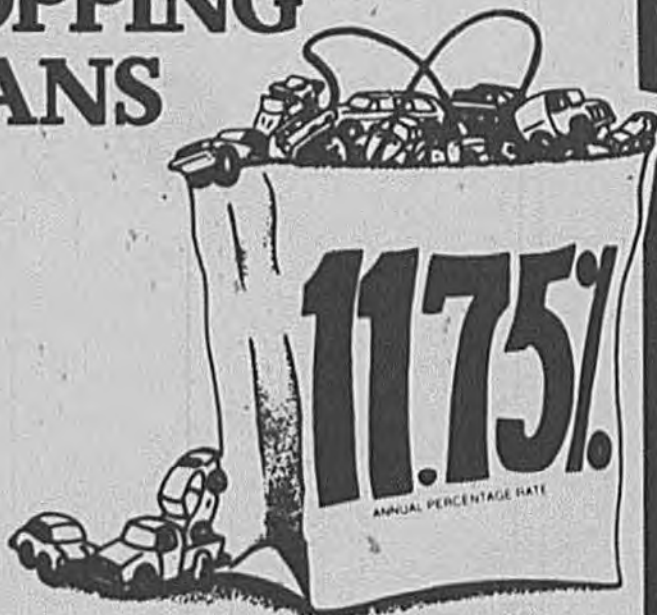

There are many other investment areas, Crittenden said, including autographs, Waterford crystal, wine and antique Chinese ceramics. The right era and the right ceramic could be worth half a million dollars or more. But those are really long shots. Few people have a forgotten Ming on the mantel.

SEASONAL TREASURES

Watch annual sales for super savings

By Eric Jude

How many times have you purchased something only to find it on sale the next month - or week?

If your purchase was a blouse or a toy, it probably was only a disappointment, not a devastating blow, to pay the higher price. But with major purchases such as cars, appliances, stereo equipment or home furnishings, waiting a month or two for a sale can make for a huge financial boon.

So how do you know when a sale will be? Everybody's Money magazine, a quarterly consumer magazine published by the Credit Union National Association, has figured it all out. Its staff monitored sales trends and developed the following bargain hunter's calendar.

It lists, month by month, products typically on sale. Of course, not every store in all areas will hold sales at the same time, but many follow the traditional sale cycle. Watch for newspaper ads and promotional fliers to identify local customs.

January. Appliances, books, carpet, china and glassware, furniture, furs, housewares, lingerie, resort wear, stereo equipment, shoes, post-Christmas sales on cards, gifts, toys.

February. Air conditioners, humidifiers, art supplies, draperies and curtains, furniture, housewares, lamps, stereo equipment, storm windows, used cars.

March. Boys' and girls' shoes, garden supplies, hosiery, housewares, infants' wear, laundry equipment, luggage, winter coats, winter sports equipment.

April. Painting and spring cleaning supplies, outdoor furniture, post-Easter clothing and fabric sales.

May. Handbags, linens, lingerie, sportswear, tires, television.

June. Bedding, fabric, frozen foods, lumber and building materials, sportswear, televisions.

July. Air conditioners, clothing, cologne and toiletries, handbags, home appliances, stereo equipment, summer sports equipment.

August. Carpeting and rugs, coats, fans, furniture, furs, gardening equipment, housewares, paints, tires, back-to-school specials.

September. Car batteries, cars, china and glassware, fabric, gardening equipment, hardware, housewares, lamps, paints.

October. Cars, china and glassware, fall/winter clothing, fishing equipment, lingerie and hosiery, silverware.

November. Blankets and quilts, appliances, lingerie, shoes, used cars, water heaters.

December. Blankets and quilts, children's clothing, used cars.

Shopping for a bank yields maximum return

You may think you know all you should know about your bank.

You probably don't. And you are not alone.

A bank is the place where some of us keep money so we can write checks to pay bills. It is a place where we finance our cars. And it is a place where we sometimes save for retirement and other things.

But there is much more. And your use of a bank will vary depending on your job or profession.

You should shop for banks the way you shop for merchandise. Following is a list of considerations you might want to keep in mind when shopping for a bank.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT SIZE

Catherine Stribling, in her book "Getting The Most From Your Bank," writes that bank size is important.

For the average consumer, a large institution may have more convenient locations and services than a small community bank.

For the professional and small business person, a small bank has a built-in advantage. Being small means each account is a highly valued asset, and at Village Community Bank & Trust, for example, you can expect more personal attention than, say, you would at World Bank of Conglomerates Inc., where the loss of an account might go unnoticed.

So a doctor and neighborhood merchant might find they are big business at a small bank.

Also, it is easier to get to know small bank officers because there is less turnover. Large banks with branches scattered about are forever moving officers.

Larger banks often train officers on the job; however, small banks often must rely on people already experienced.

Experience is important because the inexperienced officer may be going by the book. Instead of trying to make a loan, he or she may be concentrating on reasons not to grant a loan.

SERVICES OFFERED

Beyond size and interrelationships, bank services are important. And the larger banks may have the advantage, depending on your needs.

Some offer branches throughout the city and region. Some have automatic tellers where you can get cash around the clock. And some have international connections.

If you are a traveler, availability of branches as you move about is important. If you are a lawyer who spends much time in New York on business, you may want a Big Apple account to nibble at, in addition to the one at home.

An elderly man who must get about with a walker, on the other hand, may open an account at the bank across the street from his apartment just for convenience, which is, perhaps, the most important feature to him.

When you are deciding on a bank, you should sit down and list what you need. Ask yourself:

→ Will I be borrowing for an addition on my home?

→ Will I need money to expand my business?

→ What special services will my bank offer, such as safe-deposit boxes? Does it have automatic tellers? Drive-up windows?

→ What are the fees for maintaining a checking account?

→ Does it charge for services like notary public or accounting?

→ Does it have special discounts for senior citizens? Meeting rooms? Adequate parking?

→ Is the automatic teller a walk-up or drive-up? Some people feel more secure in their cars.

→ What kind of savings accounts and certificates are available and do I like the way they handle my questions about them?

GETTING TO KNOW YOUR BANKER

Knowing bank officers makes doing business easier. If you establish a good financial reputation with a bank, an officer can bend the general rules in your favor.

Getting a bank's attention is one thing — knowing what you are doing is another.

When you want a bank loan, you first should determine how much money you need, what you will do with it, how you will pay it back and what you have as an asset you can borrow on, like the equity in your home.

While you may have a steady job, a banker knows you could lose it, and he will be looking at your assets as a backup.

For an idea of what the bank wants to know about you as a consumer, you need go no further than a loan application. It will want to know your source of income, where you live and for how long, whether you are renting or buying your home, how many dependents you have, other sources of income, debts due and how they are being paid off.

Moreover, if you have a bad mark on your credit, don't try to hide it. Be ready to explain. For example, you refused to pay a furniture store until it repaired a broken spring on the sofa.

Failure to report a demerit will kill the loan application automatically when the lender finds out.

The bank will wonder what else the applicant has hidden.

SAFEGUARDING YOUR FUNDS

Banks are not all goodness. Stribling said most crimes committed at a bank are inside jobs. Some people yield to the temptation of having all that money around, so you should safeguard your transactions:

→ Always get and examine receipts for all deposits. If you are depositing or receiving cash, count it and make certain receipts are accurate.

→ Be certain deposits are noted and initialed by the teller.

→ Examine your monthly statement and immediately question anything you don't understand.

For a much more detailed account of banking and how it serves consumers, you can read Stribling's book, published by Ballantine. Of course, local bankers, big or small, also would be happy to fill you in.

 the contest, simply send a small

 the photo returned, please write the name and address on the back.

Q. Our family's busy schedule means that the five of us eat at different times and fairly casually.

We have a small area off the kitchen that would be perfect for a built-in banquette and table, but my husband says he hates banquettes because everyone has to move to let one person out.

Any ideas? — K.H.

A. One home owner solved the "scooting" drawbacks of banquettes with the clever solution pictured here. After suffering the same irritations that your husband fears, she decided to cut the table in half. This greatly improved access and enabled diners to come and go without disrupting others.

When she entertains or the family eats together for a served meal, she has a leaf that slips in place between the two tables, re-creating the single large table surface she had originally.

Q. Our small, dark entry sports a foil wallpaper in a large pattern that we hate. Furthermore, it conflicts with the blue and white wall covering we have used in the adjacent living room, which is on view through a large doorless opening.

Should we try to find a new wallpaper pattern in blue and white to make the entry more compatible? — G.S.

A. Since entries are the introduction to your home, they should draw you in, set the tone for your castle, and encourage you to move to other spaces. Entries should not stop you cold or tempt you to flee.

Selection of a different wall covering may not be the best solution for a small, dark entry. Consider instead painting it white, since you've used blue and white in the adjacent living room. The entry will appear both larger and brighter and your eye and natural path will be drawn to the more important and congenial living room space.

A single piece of art in the entry, one that repeats the colors of the living room, can provide a tasteful focus to the space without overwhelming it.

Q. I like to change the colors from time to time in my bedroom.

My favorite is white, combined with one other color.

I have to buy new draperies and a bedspread. How could I establish a white background and then change the color easily? — K.M.

A. Make or buy a white crocheted bedspread, one of those frothy confections that simply top your sheets and blankets. Put your color into your sheets, blanket, pillows and dust ruffle. You could buy a set in dusty rose for one season, in pale yellow for another, and light green for a third choice.

White walls, white draperies and an exposed wood floor would be the perfect background. Add inexpensive cotton woven rugs in your favorite color of the season.

Five years ago my first grandchild John appeared, followed later by his little sister Jennifer.

Here are John and Jennifer today, ages 6 and 4 years old and to me they are more beautiful and more precious. I just love them. Mom and Dad are Gene and Janet Martonik of New Hyde Park. This made me a happy Grandma.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Despite the fact that I went to a resort last weekend and watched people ski and ice skate, I must say that winter is almost over. In fact, as I'm writing these words the temperature has climbed into the high 50's.

Spring will arrive on March 21, just one week away. It will be nice to see the leaves come back on the trees and hear the robins chirp again. It will also be nice to spend more time out of doors instead of being cooped up by cold and snow.

Goodbye, winter! Hello, spring!

Your impatient friend,

Aunt Tilly

P.S. This week's coloring contest winners are Chip Deger and James Casey. Congratulations!

How serious is 'windsucking'?

Q. We recently purchased a 20-year-old quarter horse mare. We would like to breed her and raise a foal.

Our neighbor, who seems to know a lot about horses, told us that the mare needs suturing because she is a windsucker. What is a windsucker and how serious is the condition? Is suturing a surgical procedure? We do not want to spend a lot of money on the mare.

A. The scientific name for "windsucking" is pneumovagina. Pneumovagina is simply the aspiration of air into the posterior part of the genital tract of the mare. The air that enters the genital tract during windsucking causes irritation of the vaginal vault and predisposes the mare to serious genital tract infections.

Pneumovagina is caused by a conformation that includes a flat croup, elevated tail head, sunken anus, and small, underdeveloped vulvar lips.

It is also caused by lacerations and stretching or tearing of the vulvar lips at the time of foaling. The vulvas of mares with pneumovagina are often on a horizontal plane rather than the normal vertical plane.

Pneumovagina is most commonly seen in old, thin mares. In long-standing cases, there are distinct gurgling, sucking sounds and expulsive blowing sounds at the time of urination, defecation, and during hard, strenuous work.

Windsucking is most commonly noticed while the mare is in estrus. During estrus, or heat, the mare's genital tract is relaxed due to the influence of increased estrogen levels.

The vulvar lips of all mares with pneumovagina should be partially sutured closed. If a mare is thought to be a windsucker, her vulvar lips should be sutured closed. The top two-thirds of the vulvar lips in windsucking mares is sutured. The lower one-third is left open so that the mare can urinate and be bred.

The vulvas of many sutured mares must be opened prior to being bred naturally by a stallion. Most sutured mares can be bred by artificial insemination without opening their vulvar lips. Once a mare is sutured, she should be kept sutured at all times except while being bred and while foaling. Mares that are due to foal and are sutured should be opened approximately two weeks prior to the expected foaling. If left sutured, foaling mares often tear themselves or suffer severe foaling problems.

You should present your mare to a veterinarian for a thorough breeding soundness examination. At that time your veterinarian can determine if your mare would benefit from suturing her vulva. The suturing technique is done with the aid of local anesthesia. The technique causes the mare very little pain or discomfort. Vulvar suturing can usually be accomplished on the farm. In other words, you would not have to transport your mare to the veterinary clinic.

Pneumovagina is a serious condition of the genital tract of breeding mares. It can be easily corrected by a simple surgical procedure.
