Looking pretty good for its 92 years is the Old Hicksville Courthouse, bright with its new paint job and window renovations. Since 1969 the home of the Gregory Museum, Long Island Earth Science Center, the building had a long previous history as Hicksville "town hall," as a polling place for local district elections and as town and Nassau County civil court. The landmark is listed in the Federal Register of Historic Buildings. Since July, it has been the object of Town of Oyster Bay Intergovernmental Affairs Dept. Community Development Project. The project, just about completed extensive renovation, structural strengthening, and preservation.

1,200 Periodicals For School Libraries

As members of the Nassau School Library System (NSLS), libraries at Burns Avenue and Dutch Lane elementary schools, Hicksville Junior High School and Hicksville Senior High School can take advantage of a recently compiled list of 1,200 magazines held by 250 Long Island school libraries.

Using this computer-generated list, librarians can find out which of their colleagues has a periodical they need. When a student asks for such a magazine, it can be borrowed using the inter-library loan system already in place through NSLS, or an article can be photocopied and sent.

"This is the first time such a catalog has been brought together on a large scale or accomplished by use of a computer," says NSLS Coordinator Carol Kroll. An earlier cooperative list was produced on a typewriter and included periodicals from only 66 schools.

Each of the 183 NSLS member libraries has received a paper copy of the list and those who contributed to the database received a free microfiche version.

School librarians are likely to change their approach to periodical ordering as a result of having the new combined list. They will be able to coordinate selections with other districts and have more titles available for users.

Funding for the production and publication of this union list - in both microfiche and printed form - was provided through a grant from the Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA), distributed by the New York State Library. The Long Island Library Resources Council (LILRC) coordinated the project under the direction of Rhonda Buttacavoli.

The Nassau School Library System was created in 1985 and now has members in 50 local school districts and 17 private schools. The system is state-funded, and membership is open to any qualified school library.

This Issue

This second issue in February includes three sections. The first is the main news, with all the local area news and photos. The second section is the annual Health Care Edition which has become a popular service to readers over the years. It contains many ads from local health care services plus editorial information that the whole family will find interesting. It is one of the 15 special editions given, at no extra cost to subscribers, each year. The third section is the regular Discovery Magazine with columns and features for every member of the family plus classified ads that are as interesting as local news stories.

Man Burned Cleaning Machine

The Arson Squad reports the details of a serious burn victim that occurred in Syosset at 2:33 p.m. February 4.

Edwin Yerks, 26, graphic artist, of 75 Division St., Holtsville, an employee of National Video Clearing House, 100 Lafayette Rd., Syosset, was cleaning the rollers of a machine when a spark apparently ignited the solvent.

While attempting to put the fire out he suffered facial burns, burns to his chest and legs. He was admitted to the Nassau County Medical Center, East Meadow in serious condition with second and third degree burns.

The damage to the business was minimal. Det. Miller of the Arson Squad and Fire Marshal Holmes are investigating.

Thespians Appear In Comedy

Martin Perry, Hicksville thespian, will direct "Lovers and Other Strangers," award winning comedy to be presented by the Universal Players 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, February 20, 21, 27, 28 and 2:30 p.m. Sunday matinees, February 22 and March 1, at South Nassau Unitarian Playhouse, 228 S. Ocean Ave., Freeport.

Cast members from the Hicksville vicinity include Harold Rubin, Mara McKenna, Robert Kierman, Angel Stokey, Charles Addison, Ruth Brennan, Diane Deleso, Vinnie Merkle, Len Perlmutter and Dotty Monahan. For information, please call 822-4260 or 223-5646.

Two Students Chosen For Choral Honors

Talented High School vocalists Gina Aiello and John Hawkins have been selected for the All-Easten Chorus, and they will join the group for a performance in Baltimore, scheduled for March. The two young singers have already been named to the All-County and All-State Choruses before earning this new distinction.

John is Vice President of the school chapter of the National Honor Society and President of the Thespian Society, a theater arts group. He also serves as Vice President of Students Against Abused Substances and Students Against Driving Drunk. An Honor Roll student, Gina is also a frequent performer in school plays.

member of the Madrigal Singers and the Modern Music Masters. With all these activities, including performances in school plays, John is also a fine student who earned a place on the Principal's List.

Gina is the Vice President of the Thespian Society and holds membership in the Madrigal Singers and the Modern Music Masters. She is also active in Students Against Abused Substances and Students Against Driving Drunk. An Honor Roll student, Gina is also a frequent performer in school plays.

Eleven Chosen For Mock Trial

Eleven students in the High School enrichment program are preparing for the Nassau County Bar Association Mock Trial Competition in which they will compete in a civil trial as lawyers and witnesses against students from other county high schools. The first round will be conducted with challengers from Wheatley High School in February.

Ms. Marie Flocari, an attorney associated with the Mineola law firm of Hession, Halpern, and Bekoff, has volunteered her services to assist our students in the preparation for the competition. Students involved include seniors Lisa Lancer and Scott O'Callaghan, juniors David Ching, Karen Glusak, Tom Graepel, David LaSpaluta, Sheila Raza, Carol Victor, Bob Walsh, and sophomore Tom Reilly.

Computer Lab Opens At Willet

In January, Willet Avenue School's computer laboratory became operational. All children in Grades One through Six spend one forty minute session each week learning new skills on the computer. Programs dealing with Keyboarding, Math, Language, Social Studies, and Science are utilized by classroom teachers during the computer period. The teachers of fifth Grade have also recently begun teaching the children the rudiments of word processing to prepare them for the State Writing test in May.

The lab is also utilized by the editors of the Willet Avenue Newspaper to compose and edit pieces for the paper. During lunchtime recess, the lab is also open to students so that they can use the various programs in the school. Mr. Dunn, the Principal, hopes to expand the number of programs during the year.

Willet Avenue Computer Aide Diane Rigert assists first graders at their computers.

First grade teacher Sophie Millburn observes Frank Selar and Devang Shah as they work at the computer.

Hicksville:

Then And Now

Today, LILCO quarters have moved onto both sides of Old Country Road and the LIRR gate crossing is just a memory, making way for the elevated tracks that sprung up between 1962-1963. Several of the old homes remain, but the grassy meridian has been dug up to allow left turns into LILCO. The LIRR railroad overhead can now be seen in the distance.

Library Sponsors Adult Ed. Conf.

"Reaching and Teaching the Adult Learner: Preparing for Long Island's Future" is the theme of a day-long conference to be held at the Long Island Marriott on Tuesday, March 24.

"Fast changing conditions are creating new demands and opportunities. Long Island's economic future depends on our ability to help people meet these challenges," says Dorothy Puryear of the Nassau Library System who is chair of the conference. "For the first time, all the major associations of educators who serve adults are collaborating to address the learning needs of Long Islanders."

The keynote speaker will be Ron Gross, author of "The Lifelong Learner" and other books in the field, and editor-at-large of "Adult and Continuing Education Today" magazine. Gross recently keynoted National Adult and Continuing Week, in Washington.

Over twenty of the area's leading experts will cover the following topics: Reaching Out to the Hardest to Reach; The Underprepared Adults on Campus; Technology - Ally of Adult Learning; How Adults Learn in Business and Industry; Exploring Career Options in Serving Adult Learners; and Forging Partnerships Between Business and Education.

A unique Networking Center will enable conferees to explore opportunities in the field, network with fellow-participants and obtain resource materials.

The registration fee, which includes the luncheon, is $25 for members of one of the co-sponsoring organizations, $30 to others.

The co-sponsors of the conference are the American Society for Training and Development (Long Island Chapter); Council for Adult and Experimental Learning, Office of Adult Learning Services of the College Board; Education Information Centers; Nassau Library System; Educational Opportunity Center; Long Island Regional Advisory Council on Higher Education; Nassau Association for Continuing/Community Education; and the Nassau County Library Association.

Tony Mazzurco's Clippers were victorious over the Celtics with a score of 30-5. Peter Mazzurco and Ryan Quinn scored 15 points each to bring their team to a victory. Rick Hoffman's Warriors beat Brian Pinelli's Nets with a score of 22-11. Nick Cassano scored heavily for the Warriors by putting 17 points on the scoreboard himself. Robert Haddad made the balance of the points for the Warriors while it was Tom Morillo who put the 11 points on the scoreboard for the Nets.

The Wild Cats beat the Lions Saturday by a score of 26-12. The total points by Billy Murphy of the Wild Cats would have been enough to win the game as 8 of his shots whooshed through the net. He was followed by his teammate Anthony Panarelli who scored 8 points. The trio of Kristin Baricevic, Robert Ilsey and Joey Michel played excellent defense for the Wild Cats and also contributed 2 points for the team with a basket by Kristin. Danny McGovern of the Lions broke out this week and scored two baskets for the team which was also matched by Gary Lewis and Marty Theis. The strength of Matthew Bruckner and the height of Patrick Scanlon under the net contributed to an excellent fourth quarter by the Lions.

Scott Anderson's pulled achilles tendon forced the other members of John Anderson's 76ers to work harder in a team effort to win the game to stay undefeated. The team was led to victory by the valiant scoring of David Gleason, Tom Carolan, John Cicardo, Chris DeBanardo, and David Dorney. Strong defense for the 76ers was played by Peter Theogitis and Dale Gleason.

Ken Lewis' Pacers slaughtered Ed Passaro's Bullits 32-12 last Friday night and it was Frank DeStafano's Knicks who beat Don Cleary's Lakers to wind the 5th and 6th grade league down for the week.

On Thursday, February 19, at 8 p.m., CYO will hold its monthly meeting in the basement of the old school at St. Ignatius located at E. Nicholai Street, Hicksville. The topics for discussion this month will include the by-laws, sponsorship committee, spring picnic, baseball/softball.

All parents are encouraged to attend the monthly meeting and give CYO officials their input on the above mentioned topics.

Editor's Notebook

This is the time of year when most colleges and universities are acknowledging the accomplishments of their students during the fall semester. If you're a parent of a college-age student you may be wondering how we get to know this information for publication.

Well, some schools have very active public relations departments and poll students about local weekly newspapers in their hometowns. In this case the school sends us the information; sometimes about just one student and in other cases, such as Nassau Community College nearby, listing many local students.

Youngsters don't always want to have their names in print but it certainly is much better to be acknowledged for good deeds rather than bad ones. As your local hometown newspaper we invite you to let us know, in writing, about what's going on with your college bound children. Check out the school - if they don't send to local newspapers, tell them they can. If they don't have a staff to handle the job than you can certainly do it.

We are all aware that there are many problems facing teens in today's society. Where else will they get the pat on the back that they deserve when they do something good? Certainly not in the dailies, not on TV and definitely not in free throwaways. We, here at this newspaper, are interested in promoting the good about our community and with your help we'll achieve this goal. V.P.

Students Visit Museum Of Art

On Tuesday, February 3 Dutch Lane's 6th grade students took a bus ride into the city to visit "The Metropolitan Museum of Art".

The students explored the galleries of Egyptian Art on the main floor, and got to go inside of a pyramid. They also saw "Treasures of Tutankhamun" including a gold Scarab Bangle bracelet and necklaces, a stone sculpture of a hippopotamus named "William", a cosmetic vase in the form of an Ibex, and bronze statues, etc.

The students learned how Egyptian families lived along the Nile River for thousands of years in its warm climate. They called their country Ta-mery which means "beloved land". After seeing the many pictures, models, personal belongings, and statues the students were able to understand the ways of the "Egyptian".

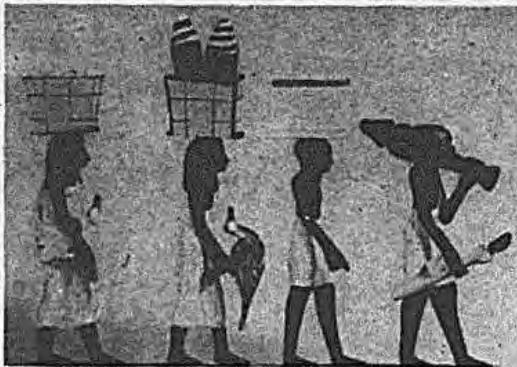

Students on bus ride into city: Dena Grizzaldi, Jenny Ponech, Joy Marchese and Jennifer Relia.

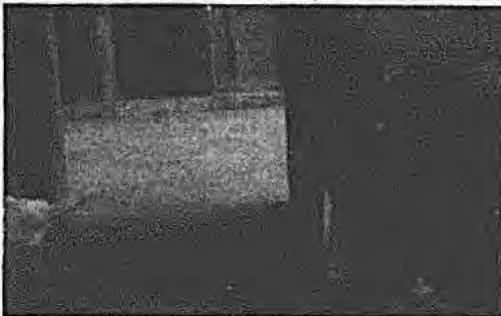

In front of the Museum of Art; Christine Lay, Sherry Lin, Karen Romanelli, Luisa Esobar, Mr. Provost (6th grade teacher) and Eileen Hayes.

Mr. Smith (6th grade teacher) with students Karan Romanelli and Dena Grizzaldi outside the museum.

Students got to see these replicas of "Egyptian Offering Bearers." It was interesting for students to see how Egyptians dressed, wore their hair, used make-up and carried items.

Yevoli Named To Water Comm.

Assemblyman Lewis J. Yevoli (Dem., Old Bethpage) has been appointed by Assembly Speaker Melvin Miller as a member of the prestigious Ways and Means Committee, considered by many to be the most powerful committee in the Assembly. In addition, Yevoli also received an appointment to the Long Island Water Resources Commission. The Assemblyman is currently a ranking member of the Assembly's Environmental Conservation and Local Governments Committees. He also serves on the Commerce, Industry, and Economic Development Committee and on the Legislative Commission on Solid Waste Management.

Upon notification of the two new assignments, Yevoli stated: "I welcome the opportunity to serve as a member of the Ways and Means Committee where all of the state's fiscal bills are reviewed. It is an awesome responsibility and as always, I will give it all my energy. I am looking forward to working on the Long Island Water Resources Commission since the problem of ground water contamination and its effect on the future of our potable water supply is one of the greatest challenges we face in Nassau and Suffolk."

Assemblyman Yevoli, who has won praise from taxpayer groups for his efforts on their behalf, is expected to bring his strong views on limiting government spending to his new post on the Ways and Means Committee. His experience and dedication to preserving Long Island's water, which earned him the 1986 Sierra Club's "Environmentalist of the Year Award", should have a beneficial impact on the Long Island Water Resources Commission.

Input Callers Favor State Law Against LIRR Strikes

Most callers to Input believe that there should be some form of the Taylor law applied to the Long Island Railroad in answer to this question: "Do you think that the LIRR should come under the non-strike provisions of the Taylor Law?"

STATE TAKE OVER

Yes. I think the state should take over the enforcement of laws on the Long Island Railroad. It is silly to still be talking about the Federal Railway Act in connection with a purely local rail facility. The Long Island Railroad is almost completely a commuter line and has very little freight business which would throw it into the national picture. There definitely needs to be a way to make strikes unlawful for the LIRR. J.W.

EXTORTION

The strike was about the worst method of extortion that can be used. The Long Island Railroad and the management of it are working together to make the public so glad that the railroad is again running that they can up commuter fares and give the unions anything they want. If the two had reached agreement without a strike, the management would have to increase the fares to pay for it and then the public would howl.

M.T.

NOT NATIONAL

Considering that the Long Island Railroad is strictly a local service, there is no logical reason for its labor problems to be under the jurisdiction of the Federal Railway Labor Laws. According to our media reports, it would be a simple, and certainly desirable, change for our legislators in Albany to put the railroad under the control of the non-strike provisions of the Taylor Law. In looking at the current salaries of the railway workers, there certainly was no call for them to cause such a massive commuter traffic upheaval. Especially, when under the Taylor Law and without striking, they would most likely end up with the same contract gains.

C.K.

YES TO TAYLOR LAW

I do feel that the Taylor Law should come into effect with the LIRR. This is something that affects hundreds of thousands of people. I, myself, am not a LIRR user but from what I've seen around me, it has put so many people out and it is quite unfair. Many of the railroad people may need more money and they have their rights, but when their rights infringe on so many others, it really doesn't become fair. These things should have been worked out before the contract ended.

R.D.

COURT DECISION

The idea of the Taylor Law and the recent LIRR strike is actually a moot point since the courts have decided that the Federal Railway Labor Act applies. Taylor Act unions have struck, even though not legal. Almost any commuter would feel that the LIRR union should not be allowed to strike given the result of the inconvenience and economic upheaval which is far out of bounds with any gains they may have made for themselves. The real problem here is the political and organizational structure of the Long Island Railroad and its unions. We have here a state mandated monopoly which under usual business laws is probably a restraint of trade. Its unions use the strike threat against commuters as a bargaining tool and its management is accountable to no one. I have several management degrees and I have to question the skills of a labor negotiating team that can't arrive at a contract two years after the due date. No wonder the unions strike. The avoidance of a costly strike is a goal of most profit-oriented companies, but not of the LIRR which has no accountability. Just let the commuters pay. The obvious solution is to disband the LIRR. Let the state maintain the track bed and signal systems. Let's solicit bids to private companies to run the trains. You could have several companies running trains on a single line or multiple lines. And you could have different classes of service ranging from strap-hanger fares to more expensive fares. Presto! The commuter has economic choice and leverage. The management finally becomes accountable to someone and the unions have better bargaining opportunities.

G.R.

THEY OVER-REACHED

I'm no longer a commuter--having retired some years ago, but I suffered during each passing day of the recent LIRR strike just the same. While this action was not a new tactic with the workers, in my opinion this time they over-reached themselves and didn't deserve to be accorded the reasonable restraint of the public and the government. We get excited about hostages being taken in the Middle East but, in this strike, the unions held all of us hostage--the commuters, vendors, businesses of all kinds which depended upon the commuters for their livelihood and profitability and, of course, the public at large. Some managed to get a wind-fall out of the fiasco--buses, subways, hotels, etc.--but, once again, at the expense of the harried commuters. Long Island has forged ahead in recent years but it can ill afford the economic consequences of a take-it-or-leave-it and the-hell-with-the-public pressures of organized labor on the vital services of this important commuter lifeline. And, I won't even go into the details of their demands with exaggerated relevance to the effects of inflation or the requirements and responsibilities of their jobs. Clearly, as an unhappy member of the public, my answer to the question without equivocation is that the LIRR should come under the non-strike provisions of the Taylor Law.

Seasonal Grumblings

By Victoria Lemley

Just about now, seasonal grumblings are setting in. The old Scrooge's "bah humbugs" came around Christmas. Mine come in January, actually closer to February...

...when each day I plan to take down, pack up and put away Christmas trimmings and that day comes and goes but the boughs of holly haven't.

...when visions of boughs of hearts and flowers and Valentine-bearing Santas torment my head.

...when the tree seems to be taking itself down--having lost its will to live, several of its ornaments and most of its needles.

...when most of its needles can be found most often under bare feet.

...when the fallen ornaments once painstakingly replaced on just the right branch now provide batting practice for the cat, a red crocheted Christmas bell in particular.

...when the cat has the bell cornered in the living room, my son is making his way up to the attic with a half-filled box twice his size that belongs in the basement and my daughter is standing on an assortment of quivering shirt boxes about to dive into the tree for the last of the candy canes.

...when my husband is looking for his bathing suit for a business trip to the Bahamas.

...when the Pfernusse are the only Christmas cookies left, the chocolate miniatures are but a memory and the hard candy hasn't been touched.

...when picking up my daughter's room I find three angels that should be with a set of eight in the living room.

...when three angels and four on the end table make seven and all that's under the couch is a red crocheted Christmas bell.

...when what's under the tree (aside from the flattened shirt boxes) doesn't work now or never did, is the wrong size or hasn't a place to call its own as yet and the children want to know how long it is before their birthdays.

...when the sewing machine is incapacitated by unfinished Christmas projects to be completed in February for sure.

February. That's when I diet away the chocolate miniatures (in time for the heart-shaped boxes of chocolates) and return to the attic with the last of the angels (surely it will surface) and the tree skirt overlooked on top of the dryer.

SUPERB SERVICE

Devins is an upbeat restaurant in Garden City. It features superb continental food served by a staff that is attentive to your every need. We took a group of eight people there last week and found that the food was excellent and that the service was remarkably good at a time when many restaurants just let you wait and wait. The restaurant had many people in it, but we were still taken care of with good service. Devins has excellent Italian veal parmigiana and fine fish dishes. We recommend that your readers go there and find out for themselves what a good place this is.

Q. Will you please describe the correct procedure for introducing one couple to another (1) when the couples are approximately the same age, (2) when one couple is older or more distinguished in station than the other? M.J.

A. When the couples are about the same age it doesn't matter whose names are mentioned first.

When one couple is older or more distinguished or perhaps guests in your town you introduce the younger couple.

Q. If your guests completely finish their white wine, down to the last drop, isn't it all right to pour red wine into their same glasses?

H.B.

A. No. Either have separate clean wineglasses on the table for the red or wash the dirty glasses and bring them back to the table.

Q. As a non-drinker, I sometimes feel ill at ease in a restaurant when everyone at the table orders cocktails except me. However, liquor makes me ill. Should I say no to my companions?

A. There is no reason for you to feel uncomfortable or to give reasons why you do not drink. When the cocktail orders are being taken, simply smile and say, "Nothing for me, thank you!" or if you prefer, order ginger ale or Perrier water.

The perfect place for the perfect affair.

This newspaper, and the seven other weekly newspapers associated with it, publishes the last word in restaurant guides and a paid listing of many prominent selected restaurants in this area. While many of them have been rated by the great, and near great food connoisseurs, our readers will have the last word through "Reader Ratings."

Through a special 24 hour phone system, readers will be asked to call in their assessment of each restaurant they visit. Consensus ratings (good or bad) will be published as a continuing part of the guide.

In addition they can make suggestions, compliments or criticisms through the open phone line and messages will be sent through to the restaurant management.

READER RATINGS

Q. Last week we went to a well known restaurant with a party of four people. Each person ordered something different and the result was that the waitress brought the orders out at different times. What happened was that some people had to sit there and let their food get cold while waiting for the others. Some in the party said "go ahead and eat" but no one wanted to do that because it didn't seem right. What should have been done? G.H.

A. What should have been done is that you should have complained to the management. You have mentioned a good restaurant and we are going to send the complaint on to them. The food should all be served at once or as nearly as possible. Otherwise no one is dining together and you might as well have all gone alone. That restaurant will have to get on the ball.

Q. Recently I was a guest at a club luncheon in a restaurant. Accidentally, I overturned my tomato juice. What was the right thing to do? The waiter didn't see the accident immediately. T.L.

A. A waiter seeing such an accident would immediately change the cloth, or if that was impossible at a long table, would spread a clean napkin over the spilled food. As the waiter did not do this because he was busy elsewhere, at a large luncheon you could have spread a napkin over the spot yourself, without undue discussion of the incident. Everyone occasionally has things like this happen.

Q. What is the correct way to eat crackers in soup?
A. Small crackers, such as oyster crackers, may be added to the soup and eaten that way. However, large soda crackers should really not be crumbled into the soup. It is better to keep them on the plate and eat them along with the soup.

DINING GUIDE

SPECIALTIES

The LaMarmite in Williston Park is one of the top restaurants on Long Island according to the ad you have. We will go along with that. We have been going to this restaurant on and off for some time. It is something special and spoils you for the many other "run of the mill" places.

One thing nice about the LaMarmite is that it has several specialties of the house each day and they are genuine specialties. We have been disappointed elsewhere with the specials because they often turn out to be items that were made of leftovers. At LaMarmite, we have to say that the specials are really "special."

Another fine point about LaMarmite is that you are given attentive service from the beginning with the valet car parking to the end of the meal. This is really a first rate restaurant. G.E.

FINE SEAFOOD

Our party of four had dinner at Estoril Granada, on Mineola Boulevard in Mineola. Seafood seems to be their specialty. We asked the waiter for suggestions and he thought we would enjoy Carne Porco Alentejana. This consists of pork and clams in a delicate brown sauce. It was a happy choice. The other couple ordered the Caldeirada, which is the Portuguese version of Bouillabaisse. Our friends heartily endorsed their choice. If you are hankering for something unique and delicious, I think you will enjoy Estoril Granada. We enjoyed the ambience of the restaurant and found the service excellent. G.W.

Q. I have noticed that tips are said to range from 15 to 20 percent of a bill in a restaurant. When you calculate this, do you figure in the sales tax? R.K.

A. No you do not generally figure the sales tax in the tip but a great many people now are doubling the sales tax to quickly arrive at the amount of the tip. With the new increased fraction the tip will then closely approximate a 15 percent gratuity.

Guide to Good Dining

Cooking Corner

By Maureen Clancy

Every meatloaf lover thinks that his or her recipe is the best. However, for those who will consider experimenting with this all-American creation, we offer these recipes.

THE SILVER PALATE'S ITALIAN MEATLOAF

2 pounds ground beef chuck
1 pound sweet Italian sausage, casings removed
1 medium-size yellow onion, chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
3 cups fresh bread crumbs
1 cup chopped fresh Italian parsley
2 tablespoons Italian seasonings
Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
2 eggs, lightly beaten
½ cup tomato juice
½ cup cup dry red wine
2 cups fresh basil leaves
4 ounces sun-dried tomatoes (packed in oil), drained
1 pound smoked mozzarella, thinly sliced

Preheat oven to 375 F. Combine ground beef, sausage, onion, garlic, bread crumbs, parsley, Italian seasonings, and salt and pepper to taste in large bowl. Add eggs, tomato juice and wine and mix thoroughly.

Lay out 1 large sheet of waxed paper or parchment paper. Spread meatloaf mixture out in a 15x12-inch rectangle on waxed paper. Arrange basil leaves over surface. Scatter sun-dried tomatoes over basil and arrange three-fourths of smoked mozzarella on top.

Using waxed paper as an aid and starting from one short side, roll up meat like a jelly roll. Peel back paper as you roll. Place seam side down on a baking sheet lined with aluminum foil.

Bake 1 hour. Place remaining smoked mozzarella over top of loaf and bake until cheese is melted and bubbling, about 10 minutes more. Serve meatloaf hot with fresh tomato sauce, or refrigerate until cold and cut into thin slices like a pate.

Makes 8 to 10 portions

ROQUEFORT MEATLOAF

1 pound ground beef chuck
8 ounces ground pork
8 ounces ground veal
1 medium-size yellow onion, chopped
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
½ cup chopped fresh Italian parsley
¼ cup ketchup
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon dried thyme
Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste
½ cup light cream, scalded

8 slices firm white bread, crusts trimmed, diced
8 ounces Roquefort cheese, crumbled
1 egg, lightly beaten

Combine ground meats, onion, bread crumbs, parsley, ketchup, mustard, 2 eggs, thyme, and salt and pepper to taste. Spread mixture out on large piece of waxed paper or parchment paper into a rectangle about 15x12 inches.

Preheat oven to 375 F.

Pour scalded cream over bread in medium-size bowl and mix well. Add cheese and lightly beat an egg and beat with fork until smooth.

Spread cheese mixture over meat mixture, leaving 1-inch border on all sides. Using waxed paper as an aid and starting from one short side, roll up meat like a jelly roll. Peel back paper as you roll. Place seam side down on a foil-lined baking sheet.

Bake 1 hour. Cut into thick slices and serve immediately.

Makes 6 to 8 portions

MEATLOAF A LA CHINOISE

1 pound ground lean pork
1 pound ground lean beef
2 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
1 cup finely chopped onion
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
½ cup finely chopped, drained water chestnuts
½ cup finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh ginger
½ cup finely chopped scallions
1 cup fine fresh bread crumbs
2 tablespoons soy sauce
½ cup dry sherry
1 egg, lightly beaten
Salt, if desired
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 400 F. Combine pork and beef in mixing bowl.

Heat oil in a saucenpan and add onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, until onion is wilted. Let cool briefly.

To combined meats add onion and garlic mixture, water chestnuts, parsley, ginger, scallions, bread crumbs, soy sauce, wine, egg, salt and pepper to taste. Blend well with hands.

Pack mixture into loaf pan measuring about 9x5x3 inches. Set pan in larger pan of water. Bring to boil on top of stove. Place both pans in oven and bake for 1 hour (internal temperature should be 160 F). Let stand about 15 minutes before slicing.

Makes 8 or more servings.

DINNER MEATLOAF

1 ½ pounds ground beef
½ pound ground pork
¾ cup instant oatmeal
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk
½ cup tomato juice
Onion, minced
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Preheat oven to 350 F.

Mix beef, pork, oatmeal, and eggs. Blend in milk, tomato juice, onion, Worcestershire, and seasonings. Pack firmly into 9x5-inch loaf pan, shaping a rounded top.

Bake 1 ½ hours. Let stand 10 minutes before slicing. Drain off any excess juice at bottom of pan.

Serves 8.

ANN LANDERS' MEATLOAF

1 pound ground beef
½ pound ground veal
½ pound ground pork
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 eggs
½ cups cracker crumbs
½ cup ketchup
½ cup warm water
1 package dry onion soup mix
4 strips bacon
1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce

Preheat oven to 350 F.

Mix meats together by hand in large bowl. Add Worcestershire, eggs, cracker crumbs, ketchup, water and soup mix. Mix. Shape into a loaf in a shallow baking dish. Drape loaf with bacon strips, then pour tomato sauce over loaf.

Bake 1 ½ to 2 hours, or until done to your liking.

Serves 8 to 10.

MEATLOAF WITH PIQUANT MUSHROOM SAUCE

2 pounds ground beef chuck
¾ pound spicy pork sausage or Italian sweet sausage links (casings removed)
1 onion, finely chopped
1 celery rib, finely chopped
1 large garlic clove, minced
½ teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon dried crushed bay leaf
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill
½ cup tomato ketchup
2 eggs
2 slices of white bread, toasted
1 teaspoon salt
Tabasco and freshly ground

pepper

2 cups beef stock, homemade or canned
3 tablespoons tomato ketchup
1 cup finely chopped mushrooms
Watercress for garnish

Preheat oven to 375 F.

Combine chuck, sausage, onion and celery in large mixing bowl and mix lightly with hands. Add garlic, herbs, the ¼ cup ketchup and eggs, and mix again thoroughly. Crumble toast finely over mixture, add salt and Tabasco and pepper to taste, and continue mixing till all ingredients are well-blended.

Pack mixture tightly into a 1 ½ quart loaf dish and bake for 1 ½ hours or till nicely browned on top.

Shortly before loaf is finished baking, bring stock to boil in saucenpan, add the 3 tablespoons ketchup, stir and reduce slightly. Add mushrooms, reduce heat to moderate and cook for about 5 minutes or till sauce is reduced to desired consistency.

To serve, transfer meatloaf to paper towels to drain, then serve with sauce on the side.

Serves 6.

PIERRE FRANEY'S INDIVIDUAL MEATLOAVES

½ pound finely ground lean beef
½ pound finely ground veal
½ pound finely ground lean pork
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
1 cup fine fresh bread crumbs
1 egg, lightly beaten
½ cup finely chopped parsley
¼ cup milk
Salt to taste, if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
½ teaspoon freshly ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon ground allspice
8 teaspoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 425 F.

Put meats in mixing bowl. Melt butter in saucenpan and add onion and garlic. Cook, stirring, until wilted. Add this to meats. Add bread crumbs, egg, parsley, milk, salt, pepper, nutmeg and allspice. Blend well.

Divide mixture into four equal portions. Pack each portion into a 1 ½ cup mold, such as an individual souffle dish. Sprinkle top of each meatloaf with 2 teaspoons of grated cheese.

Place in oven and bake 30 minutes. Run briefly under broiler until browned and nicely glazed. Let loaves cool about 5 minutes before unmolding. Spoon tomato sauce with mushrooms over loaves, and serve. These loaves are excellent when cold and may be used sliced in sandwiches.

Yield: 4 servings.

After Work Gourmet

Veal and cheese in filo pastry

By Paul Bensen

When planning a recent dinner, I decided to experiment with a combination of thinly sliced veal, mushrooms, cheese, lemon juice and wine, wrapped in a light crust of filo pastry. My goal was to create a veal dish that was unusual and festive enough to be the mainstay of a special dinner party, but also quick and simple to prepare.

The veal that I chose was a tenderloin cut into very thin slices, but veal scaloppine, cut into medallions $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch thickness, would also have been fine.

The sauce with which I topped the veal, a blend of mushrooms, shallots, capers, lemon juice and sherry, echoes some of the same flavors of the dish itself, but with a different accent.

Filo pastry is almost impossibly thin and light, and by using several layers you get a crust that flakes apart and almost melts in your mouth. Filo is a central ingredient in Middle Eastern dishes such as spanikopita, a spinach-cheese pie, and is also used in a variety of filled pastries and fruit tarts. You'll find filo pastry in the frozen food section of almost every large supermarket.

Today's recipe is a rich, yet light dish. The textures and flavors of the mushrooms and veal are set off nicely by the filo wrapping, and the dry white wine used to cook the mushrooms and artichoke hearts and the cream sherry in the sauce add two more distinctive flavors.

The first time I prepared this recipe, I served it with baked tomatoes stuffed with a cream cheese, garlic and parsley mixture. A tossed green salad with a light oil and vinegar-based dressing would be another good accompaniment.

VEAL WITH CHEESE IN FILO PASTRY

- 3 tablespoons butter, plus $\frac{1}{4}$ cup melted butter for brushing filo pastry
- 1 pound veal scaloppine, cut in $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch thick medallions (or a veal tenderloin, cut in $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch-thick slices)
- 1 cup thinly sliced mushrooms
- 1 can artichoke hearts, packed in water, drained and quartered
- 2 tablespoons dry white wine
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 8 leaves filo
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

SAUCE:

- 3 tablespoons butter
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup very finely chopped mushrooms
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup minced shallots
- 1 scant tablespoon flour
- 4 tablespoons cream sherry
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons capers
- Salt and pepper to taste

Total preparation/cooking time: 40 minutes

First, make the sauce:

In small saucepan, melt 3 tablespoons butter until bubbling. Add mushrooms and shallots and simmer 5 minutes. Add flour and mix well. Simmer another minute to thicken. Add sherry, lemon juice, capers and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer, stirring, another minute. Remove from heat and set aside.

In a large skillet, melt 3 tablespoons butter over medium-high heat. When very hot, sauté veal, in several batches if necessary, briefly on each side until browned. Set veal aside and, in remaining butter, sauté mushrooms and artichoke hearts until they begin to brown. Add wine, lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste.

Brush melted butter over bottom of 9-inch round (or comparable size) shallow baking dish. Place layers of filo, one at a time, in bottom of pan, overlapping sides. Brush each layer lightly with melted butter before adding next layer.

On top of filo, sprinkle Parmesan and then lay veal pieces over it in one layer. Spread sauce over veal and top with mushroom-artichoke mixture. Fold each layer of filo over top of filling, brushing each layer of pastry with butter, as before (this time, you'll be brushing outside, rather than inside of pastry).

In preheated 400 F oven, bake 20 minutes until filo is golden brown.

CREAMY TATERS 'N' PEAS

- 1 pound small new or red potatoes
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 teaspoon dried dill weed
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon pepper
- $\frac{1}{2}$ cup light cream or half-and-half
- 1 (10-ounce) package frozen peas, defrosted

Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes

Cooking Time: 16 to 22 minutes (plus 3 minutes standing time)

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Scrub potatoes and pierce each several times with a fork. Place 2 layers of paper toweling on oven floor. Arrange potatoes in circle, spoke fashion, on paper towels. Microwave 10 to 12 minutes, turning over and rearranging after 6 minutes, until potatoes are fork-tender. Set aside.

Combine butter and onion in 4-cup glass measure. Microwave 30 to 45 seconds, until butter is melted. Blend in flour, dill, salt and pepper. Blend in cream gradually, stirring constantly. Microwave, uncovered, 3 to 5 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until mixture thickens.

Combine potatoes and peas in 2-quart glass casserole. Pour hot cream sauce over vegetables. Cover and microwave 3 to 4 minutes, stirring gently halfway through cooking time, until mixture is piping hot. Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

BASIC POTATO SOUP

- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup minced onion
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups water
- 3 cups cubed raw potatoes
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon each paprika and freshly ground black pepper

Preparation Time: 5 to 10 minutes

Cooking Time: 18 to 24 minutes

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Combine onion and butter in 2-quart glass casserole. Microwave, uncovered, 2 to 3 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time, until onions are translucent. Stir in water, then add potatoes and salt.

Cover and microwave 12 to 15 minutes, stirring every 5 minutes, until potatoes are tender.

Blend flour with a small amount of milk to make a smooth paste, then blend in remaining milk. Stir into potato mixture with remaining ingredients and microwave 4 to 6 minutes longer, until soup is thickened and heated through. Do not boil. Garnish with additional minced parsley, if desired.

Serves 4.

When baking a large number of potatoes (more than eight), a conventional oven will do the job more efficiently than your microwave. And never try to deep-fry potatoes in a microwave oven, since temperature cannot be controlled and grease may overheat.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q: I recently had one of the new floors installed in the kitchen. It has the appearance of tiles, white with almond grout.

Although I use the floor cleaner recommended by the manufacturer, I notice beige areas on the surface of the floor. I assume these may be traces of asphalt from the driveway tracked in on our shoes. The cleaner will not take these off.

Do you have a solution? — R.N.

A: It is probable that the stains you describe are not caused by dirt and grime, but the result of improper flooring installed over an on-grade floor. On- or below-grade floors require specific types of flooring and special adhesives that prevent moisture from rising up through the flooring from below.

The problem you describe is prevalent when the wrong type of flooring is applied to concrete slabs. If you have a wood floor with a crawl space, the problem may still be caused by moisture from below. In either case, the floor covering you have currently may be permanently damaged requiring removal and replacement. Cleaners would have removed surface stains. These types of stains completely impregnate the vinyl and cannot be removed.

A qualified flooring dealer will be aware of the problem and can recommend proper flooring material for your situation. There are numerous no-wax vinyls that would be suitable.

If the problem is moisture rising from a crawl space below, this will require some corrective steps as recommended for our reader who wrote in with the problem described in the following question.

Q: I saw an article in the newspaper about mildew. I am having a problem in my house on one wall just when it rains. The wall starts mildewing. It starts at the baseboard and travels up the wall.

I have already had my house done by professionals. They applied a sealer and painted it. After a year this moisture problem started again. It is not as bad as before, but it still is a problem.

I called them and they inspected the problem. The man said the moisture is coming from the bottom of the house. I asked him if he could take care of it and he said they don't know how.

I have asked other people but nobody seems to know how to take care of this problem. There must be other people with this problem. I thought you might be able to help me. — L.G.

A: First inspect the ground area around the foundation. Be sure the ground slopes away from the foundation and provides for drainage of rainwater away from the house. You might also inspect the roof gutters and make sure they extend beyond the house and empty where the ground slopes away from the foundation. If you have a crawl space underneath the house, inspect this area for moisture problems.

One method for preventing excessive moisture from this area is to cover the ground with heavy plastic or roofing paper. Be sure to overlap the seams of the material you use to cover the ground. Use bricks to weight down the material along the overlapping seams or use roofing cement. This should prevent moisture from the ground seeping through to the foundation and flooring.

You can also use insulation on the underside of the flooring to help prevent moisture and condensation. In addition, you can use a waterproof sealer applied to the interior side of the exterior walls. Apply a mildew resistant paint over the sealer.

Adequate ventilation is a must. Too much moisture trapped inside the house will add to your problem. You can get window ventilators or even small vents that are installed in the side of the house. In short, your job is to see that moist air is permitted to escape. If it has a way to get out, it won't condense on cool surfaces. Sometimes, just opening windows a crack will solve the problem. An alternative is to use a dehumidifier, which will trap moist air.

Just might be a medical solution. You should not accept the statement by a single doctor that "nothing can be done about it."

Seek another professional medical opinion. Phone the office of your local medical society and ask for two or three referrals. You may explain your symptoms and they can recommend a selection of other doctors.

On exercise, I recommend reading Dr. George Sheehan's fine book, "Dr. Sheehan On Fitness." Under this title it is available in paperback as published as a Fireside Book by Simon and Schuster. It was earlier published in hardcover as "How To Feel Great 24 Hours A Day." Read this for the concept of reasonable exercise, if not for the advanced exercises in running. Your library should have a copy under either of the above titles.

On medication, know that there is potential for side effects on just about all medications. As the medication goes to work to perform its corrective function on one part of the system, it causes an imbalance or effect in another. Medications are accepted for "tolerable" side effects — which means that for the result necessary from the medication, the offsetting side effects are considered acceptable. Each drug has a list of side effects and your doctor or pharmacist can, on request, show you the list for your better understanding. Even similar medications produced by different

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

Mainly for Seniors

By Leonard J. Hansen

When might a prescribed medication be wrong for you? What if the side effects caused you more concern than the original ailment for which you are being treated? Do you stop the medication? Do you seek a new direction?

Q: I am 72, and until one year ago I was feeling very good. Now, I feel light-headed — my doctor says I do not have enough oxygen going to the brain, and nothing can be done about it. I have been taking medications for blood pressure. Can this be caused by being a longtime widow who brought up three children alone? — F.M.

A: Let's tackle the question in three parts: oxygen and light-headedness, medication and side effects and then a new direction.

Oxygen has a critical function in our bodies. From lungs to the blood system and the brain. Exercise — even moderate exercise like a 30-minute walk three or four times a week — can do wonders for blood flow and the effective use of oxygen in the system. The old assumption of just sitting and resting when older can now be identified as a cause or catalyst to physiological problems earlier assumed to be a "part of aging."

If there is a body functional reason why the oxygen is not flowing as it should in your system, there pharmaceutical companies can have differing side effects, specifically because of possible differences in the methods of formulation. If you have side effects that are unacceptable — including light-headedness — from one drug, you might have a different side effect from a similar drug from a different manufacturer.

Problems in side effects are magnified, catalyzed and confused all the more when you take more than one medication at a time. The drugs can interact to produce differing, even conflicting, results and a new set of side effects.

Consider being a "body detective." Learn more about how your body works, the medications you are taking and how possible alterations of lifestyle might benefit your body and its best functioning. Your doctor or pharmacist can give you straight answers if you ask straight questions.

In many cases, you have a new direction open to you. I, for one, would never accept a "nothing can be done about it" statement without getting a second opinion. Perhaps in that particular doctor's field of expertise nothing can be done about it. But there are other disciplines and areas of medical expertise.

I commend your question and your concern. I commend your achievement as a long-time widow having raised three children.

Each one of us today is a product of how we have taken care of our bodies over the years.

TWEEN 12 & 20

By Robert Wallace, Ed.D.

Teen: In a recent article in the Chicago Tribune, a federal study revealed that college women are more likely to smoke cigarettes than college men. The findings suggest that advertising has successfully linked female smoking with glamour and success.

According to psychologist Lloyd Johnston, the major themes in getting young women to smoke are (1) associating smoking with liberation and (2) women should smoke to stay thin. That's why very tall slender models pose with long slender cigarettes.

The study showed that the smoking rate for college females was 18 percent, compared to 10 percent for college males. Smoking is related to grades and school performance, Johnston said, with the smarter kids less likely to start smoking. Results from the 10-year study conducted for the National Institute for Drug Abuse showed that of the high school seniors who did not plan to attend college, 21 percent smoked, while only 6.5 percent of the college-bound smoked. In other words, the great majority of smart teens do not smoke. For those who do — wise up!

Dr. Wallace: I'm going to have a birthday party at my house in three weeks and I'm going to invite 10 boys and 10 girls. I'm going to be a teenager. It will be my 13th birthday.

My mother, father, aunt and uncle are going to chaperone. My problem is that they are going to "mingle" with the crowd. They will be visible the entire time. I don't like that idea. I'd like them to stay in their rooms (my aunt and uncle are spending the night) and be available if a problem arises.

Do you think that I'm being unreasonable? We are all good kids. We don't need four adults spying on us for three (7 o'clock to 10) solid hours. Your advice will be appreciated. — Pat.

Pat: I see no need for four adults to mingle at the party for three hours. Maybe you can talk the adults into staying out of sight but mixing periodically with the guests, just to see how things are going.

Dr. Wallace: I was interested in your statement about high schools having smoking areas on their campuses so students wouldn't smoke in the bathrooms. At our high school we have had a smoking area for nearly 10 years and students (mostly girls) smoke in the rest room anyway.

The reason for this is that some girls don't want to be seen in the smoking areas because kids who smoke there are considered the "lower forms of campus life." Also, since the smoking area is "off limits" during class hours, those students who want a smoke during class ask to go to the bathroom where they light up.

Even with a designated smoking area, sometimes the girls' bathroom is so full of secondhand smoke, one can barely see, much less breathe. Is there any way to solve this problem? — Lynn.

Lynn: As long as cigarettes are sold, there will be a smoking problem in high school bathrooms. One possible solution is to have paid adults (possibly parents) monitor the rest rooms during the lunch break and between classes.

Dr. Wallace: Two weeks ago I fell off my bicycle and broke my arm. I'm 14 and have $600 in the bank. It took me over a year to save it. My parents are not rich but they are not poor, either. What they want me to do is to pay the doctor bills of over $500 (I didn't have to spend the night in the hospital). They said it was my responsibility since they didn't have insurance on me.

I think that my parents are not being fair. It would have been better if I hadn't saved my money. Do you think my parents are right in making me pay? They can afford it. — Bobby Bobby: No. Since they can afford it, they should pay your medical bills.

Dr. Wallace: What's the deal? I'm 6 foot 1, weigh 195 pounds but I've got a bit of a gut and I'm trying to get rid of it.

For eight weeks, I've been doing sit-ups and I'm up to 100 per day. The problem is that I haven't lost an inch around my middle. I thought sit-ups were the remedy for fat guts.

Help! — Timmy

Timmy: Reducing a particular area (spot reducing) is a fallacy. Sit-ups strengthen the stomach muscles but not the stomach fat above it. The best way to lose your stomach fat is to get on a well-balanced, tailor-made diet and to take up an aerobic exercise (jogging, cycling, etc.).

Before you do, it would be wise to have a checkup by your family doctor.

Backyard Gardener

Roses have long history as landscaping favorites

By Patrick Denton

For more than 2,000 years roses have been grown and loved for their very special beauty and fragrance, and rare indeed is the home gardener without this plant in his home landscape.

Apart from the strong attraction of its classic beauty, the rose is a most satisfying plant to grow. Purchased and settled into good soil in an open, sunny spot, most modern roses will bloom from late spring into the autumn.

For most of us, the only really confusing aspect of growing roses lies in choosing from among the perplexing number of varieties available in local garden outlets during fall and spring.

One guideline in choosing a good, reliable rose for our gardens is to select from among the All-America Rose Selections award winners. These roses, while they are certainly not the only really excellent roses on the market, have been tested vigorously under normal home garden conditions in a wide range of climates and have been judged to be both superior and easy to grow.

In fact, the whole idea for selecting exceptional roses for awards was borne out of the confusing numbers of new varieties that began flooding the market in the early part of the century, when plant breeding began to accelerate. In 1938, rose producers and marketers decided to form a non-profit organization with the purpose of testing new rose varieties to determine which of them, if any, could be recommended to the public as exceptional.

Test gardens were established in a wide range of climates to represent the many growing situations over the North American continent, and a program of care for the roses to be tested was set up so that the plants would receive only the care that would normally be provided by a good — but not necessarily an expert — gardener.

During their two-year testing, when the entries are identified only by number, assigned expert judges grade the roses for vigor, pleasing growth habit, disease resistance, foliage quality, flower production, bud and flower form, opening and finishing color, fragrance, stem length and quality and overall value in the home landscape. The scores are then compared with other, similar roses tested at the same time and with the standards already established by the All-America Rose

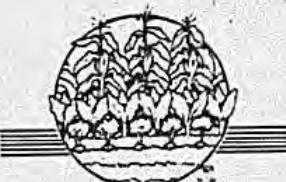

Society for awarding winning status to a rose.

The AARS testing program has encouraged rose breeders to improve the vitality, strength and beauty of roses through the years, and since 1940, the meticulous grading process has served to promote some of the classic roses of all time — Peace, Tropicana, Mr. Lincoln, Double Delight, Queen Elizabeth and Europeana among them.

Of all these all-time favorite roses, probably Peace is the best known and loved — and the most rich in historical significance, as well. Introduced 40 years ago at the end of World War II, the Peace rose was to symbolize the end of the tribulations the war had brought to the world. And at the first meeting of the United Nations in San Francisco, the secretary of the American Rose Society presented each of the heads of the 49 delegations with a single bloom of Peace.

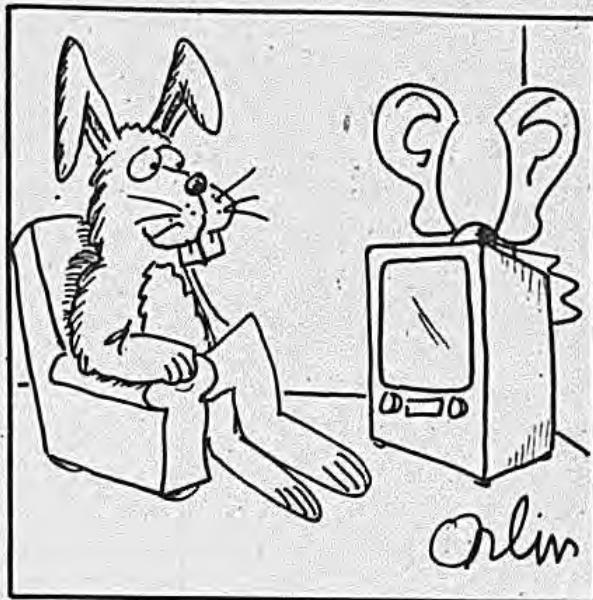

Today, plants of Peace grace the gardens of the United Nations in New York. There, and in our own home gardens, Peace signifies hope for the present and the future in the midst of a troubled world. Its vigor, beauty and resistance to disease are indeed signs of hope and life. Peace grows tall and bushy, with an abundance of glossy, dark green leaves and large, long-lasting flowers. The magnificent ivory buds appear on long, stalwart stems and as they open, the flowers turn a pale golden yellow with a pink blush at the petal edges.

The big news in roses for 1987 is a new selection of shrub roses just introduced by the same family of breeders who produced Peace. More about these, and the 1987 award-winning roses, next week.

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

Quality Or Quantity?

One Sure Way To Get Results!

When you advertise in a subscription newspaper, you get quality readership. You know that EVERY copy of the newspaper has been invited into the home and three to four people will most likely read it.

When you buy quantity, the only thing you might be sure of is that it has been hung on door knobs or thrown on lawns all over the neighborhood.

With our newspapers YOU ONLY PAY FOR COPIES that will be read. It is this quality that produces results. Do not waste money on wasted copies. Advertise here and get results.

Our (not so secret) ingredient

Banish ugly TV stands with storage on wheels

By Sharon Owen Haven

Q: Though we like some of the built-in TV storage ideas we've seen, this solution really won't work for us because we need our TV to roll around the room. On the other hand, the TV stands we've seen are unbelievably ugly.

Do you have any ideas? — L.M.

A: You may have to build your own TV stand or have it custom-made. The Plywood Paneling Council made the stand pictured out of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch plywood covered with the same striped paneling that was used on the walls. It is trimmed with molding and rolls easily on casters.

For access to the storage space, a touch-latch door can be mounted on the front. Or, easier yet, leave the back of the stand open.

In addition, here are a couple of their ideas:

— Simply mount casters on any side table or coffee table that is the appropriate size and use it as a stand.

— Buy a ready-made, press-board cube from an unfinished furniture store, paint it or stain it and add casters. You can store records, books or TV accessories inside.

Remember, whatever you choose, the stand will look best if it matches or coordinates with either the walls, flooring or other furnishings in the room. You would hardly want to trade one eyesore for another.

Q: My older home has an open archway that divides the den and the living room. I got an estimate on French doors that was very high. How else can I close off the archway? — L.B.

A: The arch, of course, is what made the estimate for French doors higher than you expected. The arch, on the other hand, is an appealing design element and it would be a shame to destroy its shape.

One possible solution is to add draperies over the opening, using one of the new arched drapery rods now available. This would close off the opening but permit passage through it. The draperies could be tied back when you wanted to open the area between the two rooms left open.

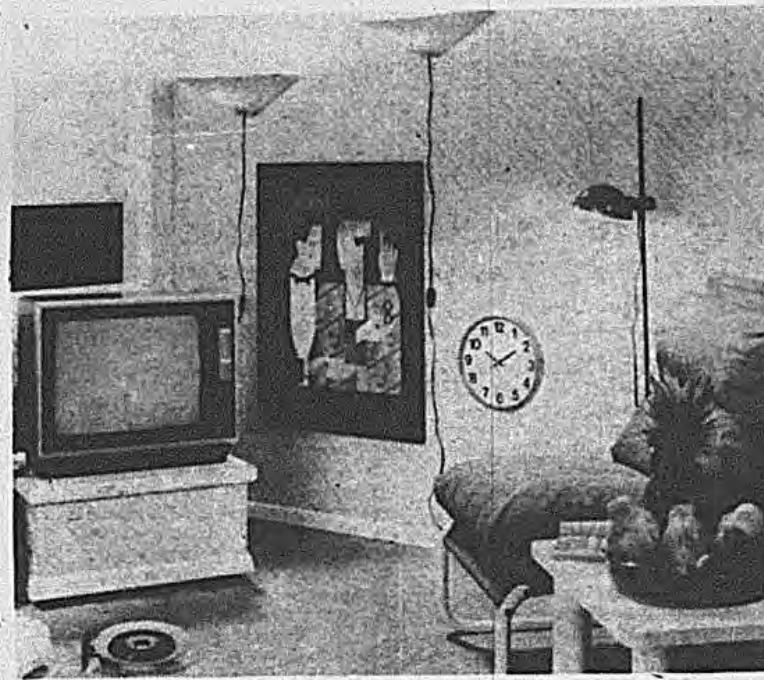

Though any conventional doors would probably run into an expense comparable to the French doors, you might consider a screen. A clever solution I once saw was a Chinese screen mounted on a ceiling track. The screen could be moved to cover the doorway or to grace the wall to the left of it. All with a light touch of the hand. When the doorway was covered, no one knew it was even there.

If you want to close the archway permanently there are more options available. Here are a few:

— Close with arched panel of etched or stained glass.

— Add glass or wood bookshelves horizontally over the opening if the thickness of the wall is at least 8 inches.

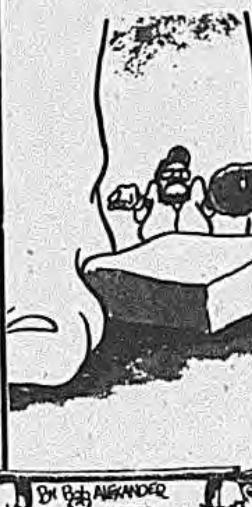

— Or close off one side flush with the wall and use the other (recessed) side to frame a work of art or sculpture.

TV STORAGE — This attractive, low-profile TV stand stores video paraphernalia and rolls where it is needed.

ANTIQUE OR JUNQUE

By James G. McCollam

Petrus Regout Co. made your plate

Q: What can you tell me about my plate that is decorated with a floral arrangement? On the back is printed the following, "P. Regout & Co., Maastricht."

A: Your plate was made by Petrus Regout Co. in Maastricht, Holland. It was made during the first quarter of the 20th century and probably would sell for about $25 in a retail shop.

Q: What can you tell me about Royal Copley figurines? Are they scarce? Where are they made? Would you advise collecting them?

A: Royal Copley pottery was made by Spaulding China Co., in Sebring, Ohio. The company was in business from 1939 to 1960. The figurines are inexpensive.

Q: I have an 11-inch cake plate with handles. It is decorated with hand-painted tulips and has the enclosed mark on the back.

What can you tell me about its origin, vintage and value?

A: R.S. Prussia porcelain was made by the Schlegelmilch Bros. in Tillowitz and Suhl, Germany. Your cake plate was made around 1900 and probably would sell for $275 to $325.

Are worms in dogs contagious?

Q: Our dog's fecal material contains "ricelike" granules. Some of these granules appear to move. Are these worm eggs?

How can we find out if our dog has worms? If our dog has worms, how can we get rid of them? Are worms of dogs contagious for humans?

A: Of course, it is impossible to know without examination of the stool whether the white granules in your dog's stool were worm eggs. You should take a fresh stool sample to your veterinarian for diagnosis. Your veterinarian will be able to tell you if your dog has worms, and, if so, the kinds of worms that your dog is harboring.

The type of signs that you have described are typical of tapeworms. Following examination of the stool sample, your veterinarian can recommend the best treatment for your particular dog. Dogs usually acquire tapeworms from ingesting fleas carrying the infective larvae or by ingesting infected raw meat, fish or discarded animal parts. Whenever a dog ingests an infected flea, the infective larvae develops into adult tapeworms within the dog's intestines.

The adult tapeworm consists of a head with hooks and suckers that attach to the inner lining of the intestine and a body consisting of reproductive segments. The tapeworm obtains nourishment by absorbing nutrients from the intestinal tract directly through the cuticle that covers each body segment. Eggs produced by the adult tapeworm pass out of the dog with its feces and then are eaten by an intermediate host such as a rabbit, rodent or flea. The eggs develop into infective larvae in the intermediate hosts.

Although relatively rare, humans have become infected with tapeworms by ingesting infected fleas. Most dogs with tapeworms do not demonstrate any signs of illness. Usually, tapeworms are not suspected unless the tapeworm segments are noticed clinging to the hair or skin around the anus or in a fresh bowel movement. The white or pinkish-white rectangular tapeworm segments may be seen moving in fresh manure. Some dogs will scoot their rear ends on the floor or ground due to the irritation of tapeworms.

Following diagnosis of tapeworms, your veterinarian can prescribe a safe tapeworm-killing drug that can be administered at home or can administer the medication at the veterinary clinic. Drugs obtained at grocery stores or pet stores usually are not effective against tapeworms.

Because fleas are an intermediate host for tapeworms, every effort should be taken to control fleas on your pets. Dogs should not be allowed to eat raw meats or rodents. Tapeworms can be controlled by good sanitation and flea control. Although tapeworms usually cause the dog very little harm, they should be prevented because of the human health hazard.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

On Saturday of this week we will all be celebrating Valentine's Day. It will be a time to remember those we love with a card or gift. The day was named after a very kind man named Valentine who provided poor young girls with dowries so they could marry. In those times it was the custom for the bride-to-be's parents to provide the future groom's parents with a gift. If the parents were poor they were not able to afford this gift and the couple could not marry.

It is said that St. Valentine would often come to the rescue of poor couples in love in this way. That is why he is remembered as the patron of love, with the heart as his symbol.

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

P.S. This week's coloring contest winners are Virginia Sewell and Doug Ormond.

Apricot Ham Steak

A great idea for leftover ham. Try this recipe when you want a gourmet delight with little preparation time.

1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
whole cloves
1 16-oz. can peeled whole apricots

Remove any fat around the slice of ham. Place in a shallow baking pan. Sprinkle with sugar and stud the sides with cloves.

Drain the apricot juice. Pour 1/3 cup of the juice over the ham.

Bake at 325 degrees for one hour, basting often with the juice in the pan. Arrange the drained apricots on top of the ham and bake 15 minutes longer, or until richly glazed.

THERAPIST ROLODEX

What's new in therapy, finding right counselor

By Eric Jude

If you have a soaring fever, you call the doctor. A few pounds to lose? Visit the nearest dietitian. But when you're plagued with anxieties, panic and worry, whom can you turn to?

Oftentimes, talking with a friend or family member will do. When that's not enough, it might be time to think about getting help from a mental health professional.

To some, the word "therapist" conjures up the image of a man taking copious notes and smoking a pipe while the patient lies on a couch talking about his problems. In reality, the counselor you choose could be a social worker, sex therapist, psychiatric nurse, psychologist, psychiatrist or clergyman, according to Diabetes Forecast magazine. You'll be able to choose from many academic backgrounds, training programs and theoretical orientations.

There are three major categories of psychotherapy, according to "Women and Psychotherapy: A Consumer Handbook":

BEHAVIORAL

The focus is on changing behavior. The therapist will likely give you specific tasks or challenges to accomplish between sessions. Behavioral techniques include assertiveness training, relaxation techniques and behavior modification.

HUMANISTIC

The theory is that how you act in therapy provides one way of examining how you act in life. So, you examine your feelings and needs and your relationship with your therapist.

PSYCHODYNAMIC

Childhood events and unconscious conflicts are seen as the origin of emotional problems. You'll examine those early years and your relationship with your therapist will be viewed as reflecting those experiences.

Experts say the keys to successful therapist/patient encounters are competence and compatibility.

Research has proven that therapy tends to be successful when the patient feels accepted, understood and liked by the therapist.

Checking the competence factor simply requires the consumer to research potential therapists, considering their credentials, training, experience and reputation.

According to American Health magazine, you can find clues to compatibility by actively interviewing the therapists you're considering. Ask a lot of questions to get a sense of what the therapist is like as a person. Consider integrity, ethics and overall manner.

In his pamphlet, "Choosing A Psychotherapist" (Minerva Press, $1.25), Michigan psychologist Steven Charles Fisch offers a checklist of questions to ask yourself after meeting a therapist:

- Did the therapist relate to you sincerely and genuinely?
- Did he or she respond to questions thoughtfully and considerately?
- Did you feel you were being taken seriously and treated with respect?
- Do your instincts say this is a person you can trust, one whose basic skill, experience and sensitivity are comforting?

Of course, you'll have to consider cost when choosing a therapist. You'll find therapists' fees will vary with factors like training, education, geographical location and whether the therapist is in private practice or works as part of a community health agency.

Health insurance can make therapy more affordable and many community mental health agencies charge fees based on your ability to pay. Insurance coverages vary, so read your policy before scheduling that first appointment.

HOSPITAL SAVVY

Checking out wards, ER before you check in

By Steve Hurtado

Going into the hospital isn't something too many people look forward to. Still, the chances are good—that at some time in your life, you'll need to choose a hospital for medical treatment. The time to check out a hospital is before you check into one, and knowing what to look for is critical to making the right choice.

Nobody needs to tell you how complex the health-care system has become in recent years. Outpatient surgery, health maintenance organizations, home health care and other innovations mean choosing a hospital involves more than choosing a building. When you choose a hospital, you want one that offers a complete range of health-care services.

"Look for a hospital that is capable of networking various levels of care," says John King, president and chief executive officer of Evangelical Health Systems in Chicago. "A good hospital should be a full-service hospital, one that can provide the patient with a continuum of care—from outpatient procedures, to inpatient care, to home health care and extended care, if necessary."

A full-service hospital takes the burden of decision-making off the patient, King says. "When you're ill, the last thing you want to do is research the health-care system. A full-service hospital can help guide you through it."

Undoubtedly, your physician has a great deal of influence in your selection of a hospital, but you may not want to rely on his advice alone. Ask your doctor for the names of other physicians on staff at a hospital, then call them for their opinion. Find out how many of them are board-certified in their specialties and how many different specialties are represented.

"The fact is, physicians want to be affiliated with the best hospitals," King says. "Finding out the hospital where local doctors practice gives you a good idea which facilities they feel are best."

To qualify for treating Medicare patients, hospitals must be accredited by the Joint Commission for the Accreditation of Hospitals. Accreditation is an important indicator of a hospital's quality, but you should demand more.

"Many other organizations, such as the American Heart Association, evaluate specific hospital programs and services," King says. "Most good hospitals see these certifications and display them proudly."

He suggests a simple walk-through of a hospital's lobby, noting the various accreditation certificates the hospital has received.

Everyone is concerned about the rising costs of health care. Probably no one is more concerned than health-care providers. Unfortunately, cost information provides little insight to a hospital's quality. It is almost impossible to compare costs for procedures or room rates, because so many variables make them difficult to validate.

King recommends that would-be patients find out the number of HMOs and preferred provider organizations that have contracts with a hospital. As financial middlemen between consumers and hospitals, these organizations look for the best prices for health-care services. A hospital with attractive pricing and quality care will probably be successful in garnering a number of these contracts.

All hospitals are not created equal. Still, the choice is not so much a matter of "good vs. bad" as it is choosing between "better" and "best." Naturally, you want the best for you and your family.

"Consumers have much more health information available to them," King says. "And they are expected to ask questions. The best hospitals will be very eager to help you make the right choice."

Finding the best may take some looking, but in the end your family's health will be better for it.

Spring-cleaning regimen for your medicine cabinet

By Eric Jade

If you're up to your elbows in medicine bottles, consider undergoing a new type of chest X-ray, one that looks inside the medicine chest.

Keith W. Sehnert, M.D., author of "How To Be Your Own Doctor (Sometimes)," believes medicine chests tell more about health practices and attitudes than 10 Gallup Polls, according to an article in Rodale's "Body Bulletin."

Sehnert says a well-stocked medicine cabinet could save rushed trips to the doctor, since many minor problems will run their course without consequence if given a little tender loving care.

Here's his three-step plan for putting together a ready-for-anything chest.

SPRING-CLEANING

Most people tidy their basements, attics and garages at least once a year, and should do the same with the medicine cabinet. Start your spring-cleaning by dividing the present contents of your medicine cabinet into two piles — one for prescription medications, the other for over-the-counter products. Then, question prescription drugs with the following:

- Is the name of the drug on the label?
- Are the instructions clear?
- Is the date less than 18 months old?
- If a liquid, does it look the same as it did when first acquired?
- Do you still suffer from the condition for which the medication was prescribed?

Anything that gets a "no" should be thrown away (garbage disposal, toilet or sink — not in the garbage can).

For non-prescription drugs, ask:

- Has the medication exceeded its expiration date?
- If there is none, does the medicine still look and smell like it did when first purchased?

Throw any medicines away that don't pass the test.

PROPER STORAGE OF WHAT REMAINS

Here's how to store the remaining medications:

- Check each medication for special instructions like refrigeration.

• Check the label of each medication to make sure it's firmly attached, and tape it on if not.

• Return all medications in an orderly fashion, positioning those that get the most use within easiest reach.

• Attach a list of emergency phone numbers to post inside your medicine-cabinet door.

• Most medications hold up best when stored away from moisture and heat, Sehnert says. If your bathroom is frequently as steamy as a sauna, you might want to move your medicines to another location.

By Gregg Howard

Many would-be exercisers walk away from jogging, aerobic dance and other sports that would benefit them physically. And many of them have their doctors' blessings.

That's because they've found their niches in the world of exercise by putting their best feet forward ... literally. They're walking their way to better physical condition and having fun along the way.

People once walked only when necessary, especially since the invention of the car. Thanks to the fitness revolution, one can now spot walkers at any hour of the day, whether it's a couple of business executives getting some exercise during their lunch hour or a group of "mall walkers" striding the long corridors before the stores open.

Many are walking because it can provide the benefits of more strenuous sports, say running or aerobic dance, with virtually none of the risks. Among the potential benefits are increased muscle tone, weight loss and improved cardiovascular and respiratory fitness.

A person can burn just as many calories walking a mile as running one because he's moving the same mass over the same distance. Walking burns calories at the rate of 300 to 400 per hour.

Walking fits into the most hectic schedules, yet can be an enjoyable leisure activity when a person has a few extra hours.

Some people use lunch hours and breaks for walks, others walk for transportation to and from work. Many walkers frequent school or club tracks or malls every day to get their established number of laps.

Walking is a solo or team sport. Partners and members of walking clubs motivate each other on uninviting mornings and make walking a time for socializing.

Walking is also a great way to get out and see new places, whether it's a new neighborhood, park or stretch of the beach. Some even take "walking vacations" where they see scenic territory.

Unlike many other sports, there's no need for different clothing, a shower, a court reservation or club membership when walking.

A good pair of walking shoes is a must. Experienced walkers and medical experts usually agree a moderate heel lift (five-eights to 1-inch), a good tread and solid heel support are essential, according to an article in Working Woman magazine. Some say running shoes will do the trick, others say walking shoes are best. Usually made of leather or nylon, walking shoes have somewhat stiffer soles and stronger heel supports than aerobic exercise shoes to enhance walkers' heel-to-toe rolls.

The motions of walking come naturally, of course, but there are a few points to keep in mind for a safe, effective workout.

A person's normal stride is probably the way he should walk for exercise ... he should just be sure to land on the heels and roll the foot forward onto the toe and use good posture, says the Working Woman article. To increase the workout, a person can try swinging arms, lengthening the stride and taking deep, regulated breaths.

Cooling down afterward is a good idea because it increases flexibility and helps stretch out muscles.

Experts suggest walking 20 to 30 minutes three to five days a week. Don't overdo it at the beginning — start off by walking only comfortably fast and work gradually toward a speed of about .4 mph.

Those who are walking away from strenuous exercise have no reason for guilt as long as they're striding into a new routine for fitness.

Effective equipment enhances bicycle workout

By Monica Perez

You may have noticed the roads are getting more crowded these days, mainly over in the bike lane areas. And those funny, tight Bermuda-length shorts are popping up everywhere, on and off bicycles.

Bicycling is finally coming of age. In the 1980s, the fitness-conscious have become convinced that biking is a way to maintain health, and they're hitting the road to prove it.

Part of the appeal of bicycling is that, like running, it's as social a sport as you choose it to be. It can be done in the fresh air and sunshine, it burns a lot of calories and gives its participants a good aerobic workout. Unlike running, cycling places only minor stress on the muscular-skeletal system.

Cycling demands more equipment than just a pair of running shoes, but the investment may just be one you'll want to consider. Good equipment can make the difference between an enjoyable workout or a grueling experience that will never be repeated.

The first thing a new biker needs is, of course, a bike. While there are many different types of bicycles available — trail bikes, beach cruisers and racing bikes — most riders choose the multi-gear touring bicycles when they intend to travel more than a few miles from their homes on paved roads, yet aren't quite game for the racing circuit.

The number of gears on these bikes allows the rider to select the one that keeps him pedaling at the most effective level; not too fast so the pedals spin without propelling the bike forward, but not so slowly that knees ache with the effort.

Now for the gear that sets serious bikers apart.

A helmet is an essential. Bicycling magazine says if everyone who rides a bike would wear a quality hardshell helmet, there would be nowhere near the 1,000 cycling-related fatalities in the U.S. each year (an approximate number for 1984).

The helmet should fit comfortably and completely cover the head without impairing vision, according to an article in American Health magazine.

Those stiff-soled cycling shoes with the little ventilation holes also serve an important purpose. Cycling shoes are stiff and solid, built with little flexibility so all the power of pedaling goes into the stroke.

Cleated racing shoes can't be beat for riding, but the soles are slippery and prone to cracking, making them difficult to walk in.

Touring shoes are a compromise for the cyclist who likes to ride for an hour, then walk around. They have no cleats and are softer than stiff cycling shoes, yet firmer than regular sports shoes.

Gloves may seem like just another extra to spend money on, but those padded-leather cycling gloves, the ones with the fingers cut half off, minimize the steady road vibration that often numbs the hands on long rides.

Cycling clothing has never been as popular as it is today. Once reserved strictly for the racers, bicycling shorts are showing up in designer collections and department stores as fashion apparel.

When selecting shorts, the number one priority should be comfort, according to American Health. Cycling shorts are long and tight to protect the legs from chafing against the crossbar and cut down on wind resistance. They also have a padded chamois crotch to wick away sweat and make riding more comfortable.

Osteopath Explains Meaning Of Profession

By Patricia J. Ausman, D.O.

When I moved to Long Island from Pennsylvania, I was amazed to find that very few people knew about osteopathic medicine. I grew up in an area where D.O.s (Doctors of Osteopathy) and M.D.s (Medical Doctors) worked together without any problems. I am also an osteopathic physician.

Osteopathic medicine was conceived in the late nineteenth century by a medical doctor who was dissatisfied with the medical treatments available at that time. The profession has grown considerable since its beginnings. D.O.s (Doctors of Osteopathy) are the major primary physicians in many areas of the United States.

To better explain what osteopathic medicine is, let's discuss the training of an osteopathic medical student. In order to be accepted into an osteopathic medical school, a student must have been graduated from an accredited undergraduate college. He or she must have taken and passed all of the required premedical courses. He or she must have passed the Medical College Admissions Test (MCAT's) with good grades. The student is then interviewed by the admissions board of the osteopathic medical colleges to which he or she has applied.

Once accepted to an osteopathic medical school, the student begins four years of concentrated studies to become an osteopathic physician. The topics studied are almost identical to those studied in regular medical schools - e.g. anatomy, biochemistry, pathology, microbiology, pharmacology, medicine, surgery, obstetrics/gynecology, pediatrics, and radiology. In addition to these subjects, osteopathic medical students study the relationship of the bones, muscles, and joints to each other and to the rest of the body. This includes training in manipulative therapy. The first two years are spent in the classroom and the last two years are spent in hospitals and doctors' offices.

After graduation, D.O.s complete a 12 month rotating internship before going on for further training or into practice. A rotating internship involves practical training in all of the specialties of medicine and surgery.

In order to practice medicine in any state or territory of the United States, osteopathic physicians must meet that state's licensing requirements. This usually involves an examination similar to that taken by M.D.s.

Throughout the United States, D.O.s and M.D.s have the same practice rights and limitations. Their professional obligations are similar; frequently, they participate in the same medical societies.

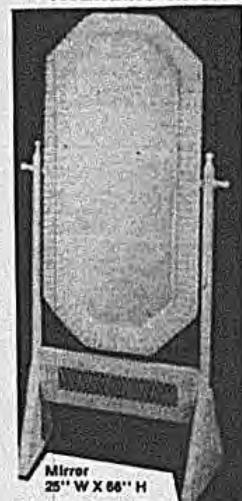

Hopefully, this brief description of Osteopathic physicians will unravel the mystery of osteopathy for Long Islanders.

Curried Turkey with Water Chestnuts

After the holidays, use leftover turkey in this deliciously different mild curry dish. Grand for entertaining.

1/4 cup oil	3 tbsp. flour
1 bunch green onions	1 tsp. curry powder

2 cups water chestnuts, thinly sliced	1/4 cup pimento
2 cups diced, cooked, turkey or chicken	1 cup drained pineapple tidbits

Slice green onions and celery diagonally, about 1/2 inch thick. Heat oil in a skillet and sauté onions, celery and peppers until slightly browned. Add almonds, water chestnuts and cooked turkey. Mix well with flour, paprika, curry powder and basil. Sauté lightly, stirring constantly, until well blended.

Mix in broth, pimento and pineapple. Cover and let steam briefly. Season with pepper. Serve on rice. A good accompaniment is Cranberry Chutney.

Menopause

The good news about menopause is that it no longer carries the negative, upsetting connotations of the past. An educated woman can choose good health during this phase of her life, retain her vitality, and minimize the unpleasant physical and emotional symptoms.

Contemporary women have powerful weapons to combat some of the symptoms of midlife change. Physical and emotional signs of your body's changes include the famous hot flash, intermittent periods of chills and perspiration, mood swings, vaginal dryness, insomnia, osteoporosis, and nervousness. But you can take positive steps to insure your continued good health.

Nutritional supplements, hormonal replacement therapy, and appropriate weight bearing exercises can alleviate symptoms of menopause. Combined with a regular examination by a caring physician with whom you can establish a frank, open dialogue, your opportunities to lead a full, healthy life are unlimited.

This medical news is being brought to you as a community service by the Long Island Women's Health Care Group. We're a dedicated group of obstetrician-gynecologists who treat each patient as an individual.
