Gibson Claims 36,000 Killed In Nation's Worst Automobile Year

Death Toll Eight Per Cent Greater Than In 1931, Second Most Destructive Year On Record

The worst automobile accident casualty toll ever experienced in the United States was recorded last year when 36,000 persons were killed and nearly a million injured as a result of 832,000 personal injury collisions on streets and highways.

Although practically two-thirds of the accidents involved driving errors, pedestrians paid the highest price in the loss of life as shown by the death of nearly 16,000, or 44 per cent of the total fatalities.

Detailed statistics giving the circumstances of the accidents as tabulated by the Travelers Insurance Company in its annual analysis show that the country's adverse experience was not due solely to an increase in the use of motor vehicles. Deaths gained 16 per cent as against an increase in registrations of 5 and 6 per cent in 1934 and 6 per cent in 1935.

Too much speed for time and place is cited as the dominant factor in the greater seriousness of automobile accidents last year. As an example of the extreme hazard produced by driving too fast, the rate of death per accident because of exceeding the speed limit was 49 per cent worse last year than the average of all accidents involving driving errors.

Available records for the year show that 316 per cent of the drivers in accidents were declared to have been under the influence of intoxicants as against 243 per cent in 1933, an increase of 2.96 per cent in 1934, an increase of 4.95 per cent.

Five out of every eight pedestrians killed, according to statistics, were involved in accidents while crossing streets in the middle of the block crossing intersections against signals or diagonally, way by way into streets from behind parked cars, or while walking along rural highways.

The rate of death per accident was 51.4 per cent worse during the hours of darkness than during the hours of daylight. On the basis of the night time volume of traffic, which is only a fifth of all traffic, the rate of death during darkness was several hundred per cent greater than in daylight.

During the four rush hours of the evenings, from 5 to 9 o'clock, deaths exceeded the record of the four rush hours of 6 to 10 in the mornings by 239 per cent. The hour just before midnight was the most dangerous, as the rate of death per accident for that hour was the highest, 35 per cent greater than the average for all hours combined. The hour between 10 and 11 a. m. was the least hazardous, as the rate of death per accident was the lowest, almost 33 per cent under the average.

Excluding such factors as exposure to traffic hazards and millions driven, the fatal accident experience of men drivers for the year was 34 per cent greater than for women.

With the exception of drivers past 65 years of age, where the fatal accident experience involves the greater probability of an accident proving serious, the accident record of drivers under 18 years of age was the worst of any age classification. Under that age the fatal accident record was 65 per cent greater than the average, and between 18 and 24 years, it was 27 per cent greater.

Between 25 and 34 years, the ratio of such drivers in fatal accidents was 11 per cent better than the average.

As an indication that drivers by careful operation can prevent many accidents, the fatal accident record in rainy weather and when snow was falling was better last year than the average for all accidents combined. In clear weather however, the ratio of fatal accidents to total accidents under such conditions was worse than the average. On wet, snowy and icy road surfaces the fatal accident experience was better than on dry road surfaces, thus supporting the contention that many drivers are put off their guard by apparently safe conditions.

A most serious aspect of the automobile accident problem that has been in evidence a number of years and which continued to be bad last year was the great number of fatal accidents during periods of dusk and darkness. During the year there was not a single one of the 12 normal hours of darkness in which the rate of death per accident was less than during daytime hours.

From 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., the normal daytime hours, there were 459,510 automobile accidents in which 15,096 persons were killed, but from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m., the normal hours of darkness, there were 42,490 accidents in which 20,969 persons were killed.

The rate of death per accident was 51.4 per cent worse during the hours of darkness than during the hours of daylight. On the basis of the night time volume of traffic, which is only a fifth of all traffic, the rate of death during darkness was several hundred per cent greater than in daylight.

County To Oppose New Queens Wells

The Board of Supervisors will fight the recent applications of New York City concerns to sink a large number of wells in Queens County, near the Nassau County borders, it was indicated yesterday.

Addressing the meeting Surrogate Howell amplified his views, asserting that no matter what sort of a charter might be evolved, its proponents would run into unexpected difficulties, especially when it came to eliminating special districts.

It is pointed out, however, that the members of the commission are not active, generally speaking, politically, and that they can afford

Murder of Abel and Curse of Cain.—Cain was a tiller of the land, but Abel was a keeper of sheep. Both brought offerings to the Lord, Cain the fruit of the ground and Abel the firstlings of his flock, their sacrifices being shown in the right background of this picture. According to Gen. 4:4-5, the Lord approved of Abel's offering, but disapproved of Cain's offering. Jealousy sprang up in Cain's heart toward his brother Abel, and he rose up against Abel and killed him, the scene recorded in Gen. 4: 8. He was graphically portrayed in the left foreground of this picture. God cursed Cain and the Bible's first murderer became a wanderer upon the face of the earth. ### Traffic Survey Shows Drop In County School Accidents

One of the strongest arguments in favor of the continuance of the safety work by the traffic survey in Nassau County, seen in the reduction of accidents to school children in the districts reached by the safety crusade conducted last year. This reduction is all the more commendable, since actual figures in Nassau County and the rest of the United States generally increased. Tabulation of the accident figures has just been completed, together with a check-up on the school survey made in 1932-33.

Results of the safety work of the traffic survey show almost without exception reduction of accidents in districts where safety recommendations were put into effect, and an increase in accidents in districts where these recommendations of the traffic survey were not carried out.

In commenting on the results obtained, J. W. Fisher, director of the traffic survey, said: "While the survey deserves great credit for the improvement of conditions recommended in this school survey and the work of the safety crusade, the actual carrying out of our recommendations was necessarily left to the school and village authorities, and we wish to take this opportunity to thank them for their splendid co-operation. The survey has no authority to insist on steps being taken to eliminate accidents hazards, but its recommendations have been well received and where carried out have proved their value. The survey gave more than 100 safety lectures to schools and Parent-Teacher Associations, which were very well received. The Automobile Club of New York has also done splendid work in some communities and the police departments in several localities have given effective safety talks in the class rooms."

Figures compiled by the traffic survey showed that among children 5 to 19 years of age, there were 262 injured and 8 killed while walking or playing in the roadway. In 1933 there were 383 injured and 12 killed. The greatest reduction, however, took place in those districts where the safety recommendations were carried out.

Of the larger school districts, Hicksville and Hempstead have

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

FROM the practical point of view it is as important to care for one's wardrobe as it is to select it correctly. A handsome article of apparel will soon lose its freshness and its beauty if it is carelessly handled, or not put away as it should be. Also it should be worn as best it is. In the care of the apparel should also be included the consideration of the clothes during the time of wearing it.

Now that late costumes are so much in evidence, it is well to know that they must be put away right, for them to be taken out when worn. They must be put away without being laid in a box and be folded out, dirty shaken and dried and ironed, like new.

Black keeps its place in formal colors for spring as is shown by this advance model evening gown to be taken out when worn. It is of shimmering material. The shoulders are wide showing from the knees down and the black tulle jacket with a ruffle at the shoulders.

Accessories like small bouquet. The woman who has to get through an entire season with one evening gown—now there's a problem for you. But it can be an amusing problem if the woman is sufficiently clever and ingenious.

Full Skirts on Evening Gowns. The little girl love of fancy-dress costumes more or less latent in most of our period evening gowns. As opposed to the slim, tailored, continental formal gown there is a distinctly full-skirted costume, a gracefully reminiscent of the day of pomp and splendor but modified to the taste of the present day.

The North Shore Hostess

By GERTRUDE MAYER

Do you remember away, way back when we toiled along country roads at the devastating speed of twenty miles an hour and pretty nearly all the sign boards read "don't drive in a rut"? It was a good sign for bad roads and did a great deal for the fellow who came afterwards.

One North Shore hostess serves a hot mixed grill dinner on the pancake griddle. Of course it goes without saying that the griddle has a high shine on it. The process and arrangement is as follows. First of all, lightly grease griddle. In the very center place thick lamb chops, one per person, arrange five little sausages around chops and then a circle of large peeled mushrooms brushed with melted butter.

Now many of us, responsible, for the three main a day, think much further than beef roast, lamb stew or steak with the inevitable mashed potatoes and gravy and a green vegetable. And as a consequence of our usual thinking of one can use such a phrase in this section our dinner tables are dull and lack the sparkle of variety. So go ahead, get out of the rut, polish up your imagination at the same time, you are polishing up your aluminum wear and give the family a One-Dish-Meat.

Another especially popular dinner is "spaghetti Milanese". Allow one pound of raw beef for every four persons, combine it with soft beef crumbs, seasonings, an egg yolk, a dash of celery salt and meat. Throw a lump of butter in a deep sauce-that seem constantly waiting for such chances, and the result is a cold. Furnace heat is one of the big reasons why the air in our houses is dryer than it was in the days of our forefathers when they had to do most of their heating of water in open kettles on top of the stove or over fires. But it is not necessary to have dry air with furnace heat. Pans of water can be placed on top of radiators or in the pans intended for that purpose in hot air furnaces. If you are subject to frequent winter colds, then give close attention to the humidity in your house.

The New Spring Hat Coiffure

NEW YORK . . . At the annual meeting of Beauticians held at the Plaza last week, the above coiffure was explained as being the new forward movement in hair dress, necessary in wearing the new Spring hat.

Remember as a boy going with my father past a very pretentious house. It was a long time before I realized that the house was not so big as it seemed. It was a long time before I realized that the house was not so big as it seemed. It was a long time before I realized that the house was not so big as it seemed.

Then we went into a house on whose windows the frost was so thick that there were only spots of blank glass. But it can always see in my mind that big cheerful kitchen with the teakettle singing on the wood-burning stove. The children, not allowed to go out yet, were roasting chestnuts and making a fire.

People who live in houses in which the air is too dry are almost always ailing. If you will notice the next time you go out on a wintry day how many of your neighbors have too dry air, and then think over what you know about their health, you will find, I believe, that they are apt to be rheumatic and they are bothered with a good many head aches.

Peasant Influence in Modern Dress

With a massive silver belt, give that "different" look which assures a new-this-season styling. The dress on the standing figure to the right also features the very new and smart booped bodice, but in a more conservative way. It is fashioned of a handsome tulle-colored crepe. There is a bit of smocking slightly suggesting a yoke which gives the required house-faded-in at the wrist in traditional peasant fashion.
