Conscious of the fact that much indignation has been aroused because of the disposition, but determined to see it through just the same, Supervisor Harry Tappan yesterday said he regretted the whole affair, but felt that the Town's manifest duty lay in the courts it had followed.

"We have been waiting and waiting for Mayo to move out," Justice Paul Bonynge of the Supreme Court, whose decisions frequently approach classical elegance, wrote an eloquent but dissenting decision in a case involving the mist of a set of false teeth Tuesday when, sitting in the Appellate Term, he was outvoted by Justice James C. Crosey and Justice McGrate who sustained a $500 award to the patient.

Indeed, they added $25 costs to the verdict, which had been returned by the Municipal Court in favor of Mrs. Belah Hickman, of 3707 Seventy-sixth Street, Brooklyn, in her suit against Dr. Harold Kennedy, of 429 Madison Avenue.

According to the record of the case, Mrs. Hickman went to Dr. Kennedy in 1929 for a set of false teeth. She paid him $200 for them, but he failed to deliver them until after two years had elapsed.

Presented to the bill, along with the patient's complaint, was a letter, caused her to "burst into tears," greatly unerving her.

Dr. Kennedy took the case to the Appellate Term, but lost, despite the following emphatic dissent by Justice Bonynge:

"Possibly the plaintiff's own testimony that the dentures did not fit was sufficient to establish a very weak prima facie case, although even this is doubtful in the absence of any showing that she had prior experience with false teeth. A man may testify that his shoes do not wear many pairs. If an Australian bushman outfitted with footwear for the first time were heard to utter complaints a court would receive them with wholesome reservations.

Mayor Denies Exodus From Centre Island

Evening Journal Story Arouses Ire Of Residents

Centre Island estate owners at first merely irritated by reports that they were planning a wholesale exodus because of high taxation, are now up in arms against a story appearing under the name of Max Buch in the New York Evening Journal last Friday.

The Buch story has "For Sale" signs "sprouting from the arbutus colonies" which listed this millionaire colony, pictures Centre Island residents as complaining particularly about taxes in the Town of Oyster Bay and quotes Village Clerk Daniel Moore as saying that Oyster Bay gives residents of Centre Island nothing.

The Evening Journal's story goes on to say that a similar account which appeared recently in the Daily Mirror—"The Mirror story, conservative in comparison, confined the "exodus" to a few families. Mayor Franklin Remington refuted it in the Enterprise-Pilot last week.

Mayor Remington and Village Clerk Moore are both indignant with the Evening Journal story. Mayor Remington denies its truth while Moore declares that he did not make any of the statements attributed to him.

I know of no planned exodus from Centre Island on account of taxes or any other reason," Mayor Remington stated. "Two estates are for sale by reason of the fact that the owners have died or do not live here any more, but these estates have been on the market for the past three years. With these two exceptions the residents of Centre Island, as far as I know, are as happy and contented as these depressing times can enable anybody to be."

Cankermorns New Threat To Long Island Foliage

The fall and spring cankerworm threads when disturbed. The caterpillars are known also as inch worms, measuring worms, and geometrids, so-called because of their peculiar manner of locomotion.

Although the female of the fall cankerworm lays her eggs in the fall, and the moth of the spring cankerworm lays eggs in the spring, the eggs of both species hatch early in May, as soon as warm weather forces the leaves out. The caterpillars mature in late May and early June. There is only one brood.

Further detailed information regarding the control of the cankerworm may be had by contacting the Farm Bureau office, Court House, Mineola.

Arsenate of lead sprayed on trees is the most satisfactory way of protecting the foliage from the pest. A mixture of 3 pounds of arsenate of lead to 100 gallons of water is recommended for large areas to be protected. For small plantings, use one ounce of arsenate of lead to two gallons of water.

The fall cankerworm and the spring cankerworm are smooth green, or brownish striped looper, which spin down on slender sticks.

Noted Golfers Tee Off Today

John Dawson To Take Bobby Jones' Place In Foursome

Taking the place of Bobby Jones, who is ill with appendicitis, John Dawson will pair with Joyce Wethered today to oppose Mrs. Glenna Collet Vane and Gene Sarazen in a golf exhibition at the Women's National Club in Glen Head this afternoon.

The course over which the foursome will play is 355.914 yards long with a women's par of 77 and a men's par of 69. More than 4,000 persons are expected to witness the exhibition.

This will be Miss Wethered's first match in the United States. She arrived from England Monday on the Bremen and is staying with Rosalie Knapp, former Women's Club champion.

Do you know that the all-round knife-pleated skirt, which rarely leaves us, will be much in evidence this Spring and Summer? It is rumored that even the sun won't see Madam's lower vertebrae this year, that back are to be somewhat higher in the more expensive daytime dresses and that a jacket or cape of one of the abers will be worn.

Pelham Barber, 63, Walks Into Deep Hole Near Aquatic Club

Unable to swim and weighed down by a 50-pound bag of clams, Angelo Chinnini, 62, of 955 Fifth Avenue, Pelham, was drowned in Oyster Bay harbor about 200 feet from the Bayville Aquatic Club Sunday afternoon when he walked into a deep hole in his search for bivalves...

Chinnini, a barber, had been clamming for some time before his weekend excursion ended in tragedy. William Cobby Jr., an employe on the Cutting estate in Wheatsley Hills, heard people shouting and looking in the direction they were pointing he saw Chinnini struggling to keep himself afloat about 25 feet offshore. He immediately jumped into the water but as he swam towards Chinnini he saw the man go down. To the meantime, Edward P. Carr of Bayville manned a rowboat and pulled to the place at which Chinnini had last been seen. When he found he found Cobby diving after the man but without success. Together they dragged and soon succeeded in finding the body. Dr. John P. Donohue was summoned but Chinnini was dead. Augustus Morey of Oyster Bay acted as coroner. Chinnini's body was sent to Mount Vernon. Detective Richard Ballard of the second squad, Nassau County police, conducted an investigation.

BAYSHORE THEATRE
Among his many distinctions, George Arliss can number that of having introduced the screen public to the most colorful characters than any other actor. His latest characterization in the title role of the lavish film "Cardinal Richelieu" which comes to the popular Bayshore Theatre Saturday June 1 and plays through Tuesday June 4, brings this distinguished artist's loss of vivid portraits of famous men to his "Life of the State" previous success, "The House of Rothschild", "Cardinal Richelieu", centers his drama around a great historic controversy depicting the stormy times of King Louis XIII of France when church and state were contending for power and the great political prelate, Richelieu was the power.

Bank Act Government's Short Cut To People's Purse, Nassau Man Says

Business Leader Gives A, B, C Of New Deal Measure

In an exclusive interview with a reporter of the Township Press a few days ago, a North Shore resident, who is familiar with banking and with banking legislation, frankly discussed the proposed Federal Banking Bill of 1935 and explained some of its provisions.

In order to make sure that his opinions, which are personal, would not be taken as those of the organization he represents, he asked us to withhold his name. He felt sure, however, they are generally in agreement with best business and banking thought on the matter.

He began by plunging at once into a technical discussion of the main feature of the bill and its effect upon the Federal Reserve System. "Hold on," your correspondent cried, "you will get me as confused as some of the other things I read in the papers about this act have."

"That's a large order," he said, "but here goes." The Federal Reserve in a Nutshell The money of United States citizens is in cash and bank deposits, but bank deposits are, by far, the greater part. Roughly, there are five billion dollars in bank deposits. This is our money and my money.

"Much the greater part of these deposits are in banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System. These banks, so-called 'member banks,' are organized either under State or Federal laws. But their characteristics as State or National banks are merged by their participation in the Federal Reserve System. That is, they are primarily 'member' banks rather than State or Federal banks."

"These member banks are members because they own stock in one of the 12 Federal Reserve banks. These Federal Reserve banks are 'bankers' banks, and all of their stock is owned by the 'member' banks. Perhaps the simplest and primary function of the 12 Federal Reserve banks is to keep the reserves of the 'member' banks. A reserve is the amount of cash which a bank must keep as a protection against deposit withdrawals and is approximately 10 per cent of the amount deposited; so 10 per cent of the billions now on deposit with member banks is kept with the Federal Reserve banks. This is required by law."

"Superimposed upon the Federal Reserve bank is a uniting body known as the Federal Reserve Board. This board consists of eight members. Six of the members of the Federal Reserve Board are appointed by the President for a term of years, and two are ex-officio members, namely, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency. At the head of the board is a man known as the governor, who is appointed by the President. Second, during the recent

President, and stays in office only as long as the President wishes. So the three most important and controlling members are merely representatives of the President. This board has certain very definite powers, but they are not so large as to control the system—nor were they ever intended to be.

"So you can see that, with this system and with a few changes in the law, the Federal Reserve Board, responsive to the wishes of the President, would be in a position to dominate the 12 Federal Reserve banks, and through the 12 Federal Reserve banks the thousands of 'member' banks, and through the thousands of 'member' banks your money."

"So that's the Federal Reserve System," said your reporter. "I think I understand. Will you tell me what the new act proposes to do to it?"

"The government," he said, "has been spending and is now spending a great deal of money. In the past few years it has raised this through borrowings, i. e., selling its bonds. The best single place the government has found to borrow is the banks of the country, where your money is and my money is. This has been so for various reasons, but we need only mention one or two. First, the banks have been glad to put some of their money into government bonds because they have been regarded as safe, and in the past have yielded a pretty good return. Second, during the recent crisis, not only enlightened self-interest, but patriotism, has led the banks to so invest. But supposing the huge government deficits continue? Supposing the yield on the bonds, which has been reduced in the past few months, is further reduced, and it becomes almost negligible? And supposing the depression is really ending, so patriotism no longer requires the banks to contribute? Or even suppose a large number of the banks decided that the most patriotic thing that they could do is to put an end to government extravagance by refusing to lend additional funds to the government by purchasing government bonds? These suppositions are all real possibilities; and if matters continue as they are it might not be long before many of the banks would say something like this: 'No, we will not buy any more government bonds. We have already put enough into bonds which are supported only by a deficit. The debt might easily become too big to pay. And furthermore, we have only encouraged the government to be more and more extravagant.'

"Such a situation can only be visualized by the powers-that-be with considerable apprehension, because their plans involve a spending spree, and a spending spree generally means that more and more money must be borrowed.

"In this we find one of the real reasons for the Banking Bill of 1935. The government wants to make sure that the purchase of the country—your money and mine—is under its control and can be easily clipped into."

"Manipulating Our Money" "Well, they give the Federal Reserve Board a lot more powers. It is not necessary to enumerate them all, but merely to specify three: (1) They say that the governor of each one of the 12 Federal Reserve banks shall be of their choosing. This gives the board a tighter grip upon the 12 banks. (2) They say the Federal Reserve Board can instruct each one of the 12 Reserve banks to buy government bonds. This further tightens the grip. (3) And to make sure of their control over the 'member' banks, they say the Federal Reserve Board can tell the 'member' banks the amount of reserves they must maintain. Assuming, today, that the 'member' banks are required to keep for each $1,000 on deposit with them $100 by way of reserves in the Federal Reserve bank, if the bill becomes law, the Federal Reserve Board can, through the power to lower rates or raise this reserve requirement, compel the 'member' banks to go along with almost any reasonable scheme of buying government bonds."

"Do you mean," the reporter asked, "that all the government has to do to sell more government bonds is to tell the Federal Reserve Board to direct the 12 Federal Reserve banks to buy more bonds?"

"Yes; and they could also persuade the 'member' banks to buy more bonds by suggesting undesirable changes in the reserve requirements if they refused."

"I can't emphasize too strongly," concluded this wise and experienced banker, "that just a few words enacted into law and an extravagant government is given complete access to your purse and mine, and don't forget where the borrower controls the lender there is no inducement for the borrower to indulge in anything other than extravagance."

"I am sorry if all this has been complicated, but it is a difficult subject to simplify into a few words, and if I seem to exaggerate I can only tell you that the act is no less dangerous in its possibilities than I have described it as being and it will affect those of us who have money and those of us who have not—and the poorest person in the land will suffer from it. It opens the door to unrestrained spending—and we all know only too well what the government can do in spending even when it is supposedly surrounded with restraints."

The second new eighteen-hole golf course in Bethpage State Park, Partridge, was opened to the public on Decoration Day. This course will be known as the Red Course. The new Red Course will be even more popular with the public than the recently opened Blue Course. It has the same attractive feature of holes offering an alternate play in cash and bank deposits, but bank deposits are, by far, the greater part. Roughly, there are five billion dollars in bank deposits. This is our money and my money.

"Much the greater part of these deposits are in banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System. These banks, so-called 'member banks,' are organized either under State or Federal laws. But their characteristics as State or National banks are merged by their participation in the Federal Reserve System. That is, they are primarily 'member' banks rather than State or Federal banks."

"These member banks are members because they own stock in one of the 12 Federal Reserve banks. These Federal Reserve banks are 'bankers' banks, and all of their stock is owned by the 'member' banks. Perhaps the simplest and primary function of the 12 Federal Reserve banks is to keep the reserves of the 'member' banks. A reserve is the amount of cash which a bank must keep as a protection against deposit withdrawals and is approximately 10 per cent of the amount deposited; so 10 per cent of the billions now on deposit with member banks is kept with the Federal Reserve banks. This is required by law."

"Superimposed upon the Federal Reserve bank is a uniting body known as the Federal Reserve Board. This board consists of eight members. Six of the members of the Federal Reserve Board are appointed by the President for a term of years, and two are ex-officio members, namely, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency. At the head of the board is a man known as the governor, who is appointed by the President. Second, during the recent crisis, not only enlightened self-interest, but patriotism, has led the banks to so invest. But supposing the huge government deficits continue? Supposing the yield on the bonds, which has been reduced in the past few months, is further reduced, and it becomes almost negligible? And supposing the depression is really ending, so patriotism no longer requires the banks to contribute? Or even suppose a large number of the banks decided that the most patriotic thing that they could do is to put an end to government extravagance by refusing to lend additional funds to the government by purchasing government bonds? These suppositions are all real possibilities; and if matters continue as they are it might not be long before many of the banks would say something like this: 'No, we will not buy any more government bonds. We have already put enough into bonds which are supported only by a deficit. The debt might easily become too big to pay. And furthermore, we have only encouraged the government to be more and more extravagant.'

"Such a situation can only be visualized by the powers-that-be with considerable apprehension, because their plans involve a spending spree, and a spending spree generally means that more and more money must be borrowed.

"In this we find one of the real reasons for the Banking Bill of 1935. The government wants to make sure that the purchase of the country—your money and mine—is under its control and can be easily clipped into."
