SAFETY ON THE RAILS

The year 1935 was noteworthy in many respects, for important events, and after for one negative, which is worthy of attention. It is announced that, during that span of 12 months, not a single passenger was killed in an accident on a railroad train in this country. The chalman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, in noting this fact, says that he believes it to be the first time in history that the railroads of America have achieved a perfect record in this respect, and he asks that this be contrasted with the "slaughter on the high-war," calling attention to the fact, as stated by the National Safety Council, that 36,400 persons died in motor whicle accidents during the year. vehicle accidents during the year.

Certainly a great change for the better has been effected in railroad operation, as regards the safety of passengers. Better rails, better cars, better signals, better management, all have served to this end. A railroad collision is now a comparative rarity. The grade crossings remain, however, for the maintenance of which the railroads are to a great degree responsible. Deaths at such points of intersection between rail and highway traffic still occur, and they will continue to cost heavily in terms of human life so long as these places remain. It may be hoped that within a few years this menace will be removed enlirely.

With this commendable record of a year without, a fatality on a train, it may be that the railroads will make an effective bid for patronage as spainst the individual units that speed over the highways, contesting for right of way with the private transportation vehicles. A public demand for the establishment of separate highways for multiple transportation, for both passengers and freight, is now heard and that demand will grow insistent. The railroads, required to maintain their own rights of way, would be justified in joining in the plea of the motorists that the bus lines, which have now become competitors of both the rails and the motor cars, provide their separate travel lanes, where life will be safer and where this new form of mass transportation may become as secure and dependable as have the railroads.

CUTTING OFF THE GAS

Efforts of sober-thinking citizens in the United States to check the growing number of automobile accidents involving drunken drivers have in the past lended mainly in itwo directions. Law officials have tried to instill in drivers the fear of heavy penalties for the offense, and certain publications have attempted to fill them with the fear of inevitable and maining accidents. Both of these measures apply after the driver is at the wheel and going places.

From Denver, however, comes the news that an oil company is trying to stop the dronken driver, while he is at the wheel to be sure, but before he gets anywhere. The company has forbidden its employes in its 17 filling stations to sell gasoline to drunken drivers, upon pain of immediate dismissal.

This sounds like practical thinking in regard to an appalling situation. It will be objected that the decision of the oil company does not reach that dangerous menace—the driver under the influence of drink but not technically drunk. But, nonetheless, it is a step in the right direction, and, when a business concern is willing to forego private gain for the good of the community. It is time for commendatory note-taking.

For several years, reductions in night rates ranging from about 10% to more than 40% have been in effect on most station-to-station calls for which the day rate is more than 35%. Now there will also be a reduction in person-to-person rates after 7 P.M. to those points where there is now a station-to-station reduction. The reductions range from about 9% to more than 30% on calls for which the present rate is more than 50%.

2. STARTING SUNDAY . . . (Jan. 19 and every Sunday thereafter), REDUCED NIGHT RATES IN EFFECT ALL DAY SUNDAY! Effective next Sunday, the low rates in operation for long distance tele-phoning after 7 P.M. will apply all day Sanday. This extension of night rates to all day Sunday will include both station-to-statica and person-to-person calls to most points. It means that you can enjoy "bargain" rates from 7 P.M. Saturday until 4:30 A.M. Monday.

AGAIN—the sixth time in the past ten years—savings on long distance telephone-calls are amounced. Now you can make person-to-person as well as station-to-station calls to most points at reduced rates after 7 P.M., and these same bargain rates will also be in effect.
