Students Honored

Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Angelo A. Dellgatti, left, and Town Councilman Leonard Kunzig, second from left, present certificates for Outstanding Academic Achievement to Lauren Arcuri and Peter Tang of Bethpage High School. The Supervisor initiated the program to honor students from high schools throughout the Town for their academic accomplishments. The students were selected according to criteria established by their school's administration. Assistant Principal Dr. John McCarthy was on hand to help honor the students.

This Issue

This issue is complete in three sections.

The first section contains all of the local news and photos for the week.

The second part is a special Springtime Issue with related editorial content and local advertising. This edition is just one of special sections included at no extra cost to subscribers.

The third section is Discovery Magazine which contains something for the entire family - columns, restaurants, features. Discovery is a regular feature magazine of this newspaper.

Sept. Deadline For Photo Contest

The Town of Oyster Bay Dept. of Parks is accepting entries in the Supervisor's "Discover Oyster Bay" Amateur Photo Contest and will continue to do so until September 10, 1991.

"This amateur event allows photographers of all ages to try their hand at capturing Spring and Summer in Oyster Bay," said Councilman Douglas J. Hynes. "The creative shutter bug has almost endless opportunities to photograph the beauty of our Town's natural wonders at any of our parks and beaches."

Councilman Hynes added that the contest rules require that all photographs be taken between April 1 and Labor Day 1991 and that the general theme is to depict Spring and Summer play and recreation in Oyster Bay. Each contestant may submit only one photograph which can be either black and white or in color and all participants will receive certificates of achievement.

To enter the Supervisor's "Discover Oyster Bay" amateur photo contest, send entries to "Play in Oyster Bay," Dept. of Parks, 977 Hicksville Rd., Massapequa, N.Y. 11758. Each contestant must include his/her name, address, age and telephone number in ink on the back of the photograph. Please do not send original slides or negatives. Only designated award winners will be asked to supply original negatives or transparencies. Submitted photographs become the property of the Town of Oyster Bay and will not be returned.

15 Restrictions On Doctor's Office

Fifteen restrictive covenants have been placed on a change of zone which will allow for the use of a residence in Plainview as a doctor's office, according to Oyster Bay Town Councilman Tom Hogan.

"The applicants, Surendra G. and Mrdula S. Shah, were seeking a change of zone from "D" residence district to use the residential district to use the premises as a medical doctor's office on the first level and to maintain a one bedroom apartment on the second level," Councilman Hogan noted. "The property is located at 528 Old Country Road in Plainview."

In granting the change of zone, the Board stipulated that the professional use be limited to not more than two non-medical or secretarial personnel and not more than one doctor; that the hours of operation for all office use be limited to weekdays between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. and that no off-street parking will be provided on the northerly portion of the subject premises. In addition, the upper level will be limited to one single bedroom apartment and the basement will be limited to storage use with no improvements for any additional use. With regard to the maintenance of the property, it must be kept free of litter and debris at all times. The exterior of the building and parking area must be kept in a clean and safe condition. Shrubbery and landscaping shall be maintained, outdoor lighting shall be extinguished by 11 p.m., debris, garbage and refuse shall be stored in covered containers and that one sign shall be installed displaying the type of practice performed at the subject premises and no variance for signage shall be sought.

Councilman Hogan noted that no building permit or certificate of occupancy will be issued until a site plan has been submitted to, and approved by, the Town Board. The plan must be to scale and show all access and egress; the location, layout and striping of all parking areas; the location of all fences, signs, landscaping, and refuse containers; the interior layout of the premises; and any other information deemed pertinent by the Dept. of Planning and Development.

Councilman Hogan noted that a public hearing on the subject was held on February 5.

Zone Change Request Denied

A request for a change of zone in Plainview to construct an addition to be used for an optometric practice was denied by the Oyster Bay Town Board, according to Town Councilman Thomas L. Clark.

"The applicants, Samuel and Bernice Arbutal, were seeking a change of zone from 'D' residential to 'R-O' residence-office district to construct a 1,600 square foot, one-story addition to the premises for use as an optometric office," Councilman Clark stated. "The property is located on the west side of Manetto Hill Road at the intersection of Country Drive, also known as 54 Country Drive, Plainview."

In denying the application, the Town Board found that the applicant failed to provide adequate justifications to substantiate a change of zone; that the parcel, as zoned, enjoys significant value as a residential property and that the change of zone, if granted, would adversely influence the flow of traffic as well as jeopardize the safety of drivers and pedestrians. In addition, the Board found that failure to deny the application would result in an appreciable reduction in the market value of properties in the area, and that the character and nature of such an office use would not be compatible with the character and nature of land uses in the area.

Councilman Clark noted that a public hearing on the request for change of zone was held on Tuesday, February 5, 1991.

Honorable Mention awards were announced for Monica Alexandria, Elizabeth Fichtner, Cathy Hora, Jennifer Yost, and Connie Young. Robert Rombach was presented with an award of merit. Honor plaques were presented on stage to Lisa Latzo and Guy Carloni.

Mr. Dave Bouton is their teacher.

Editor's Notebook

The N.Y. Board of Regents has announced what it calls "A new compact for learning," goals to be achieved by the State's schools by the year 2000. We wish the Regents well - they have an uphill fight. Here are the "Compact's" eight objectives:

- All children will come to school ready to learn.
- All children will read and write by the time they are eight years old.
- At least 90 percent of all young people will earn a high school diploma by age 21.
- All high school graduates will be prepared for college, work, or both.
- All high school graduates will demonstrate proficiency in English and another language; in mathematics, the natural sciences, and technology; in history and other social sciences; and in the arts and other humanities. (Standards of proficiency will be developed by appropriate parties for approval by the Regents.)
- All students who do not earn a high school diploma will acquire the skills and knowledge needed for employment and effective citizenship.
- All students will demonstrate commitment to the core values of our democratic society and knowledge of the history and culture of the major groups which comprise American society and the world.
- Students of both genders and all socioeconomic and racial/ethnic backgrounds will show similar achievement on State assessment measures.

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to thank everyone who worked for my election to the School Board, especially the members of the Concerned Citizens of Hickville. These wonderful people worked tirelessly and with true dedication to elect people who will represent the entire Hickville Community. The people have spoken. There is a clear mandate to close schools and to put our house in order financially. I sincerely hope that the seated board members will listen to the voters, put any personal agendas aside and work for the best interests of the children and the community. I want to put the past behind us and work harmoniously with all members of the Board for quality education for our children at a cost the taxpayers of Hickville can afford.

I assure you, I will listen with respect to anyone appearing before the Board and do my very best to resolve school district problems.

My warmest thanks to all the people who voted for me and for the A Team.

Lamb K. Of C. In Memorial Parade

Many members from the Joseph F. Lamb Council No. 5723 Knights of Columbus, Plainview/Hicksville, were on hand on Monday, May 27, and formed one of the leading groups in the Plainview Memorial Day Parade.

The Council, led by Grand Knight Josef Ort, had a station wagon pulling a special horse cart, which contained all kinds of balloons featuring the K of C insignia. Three clowns in the persons of brother-knight Richard Layh, his 5-year-old son Philip, and Maryanne Andruzzi (wife of brother knight Robert Andruzzi) gave out 1,000 balloons to the many onlookers along the line of the march.

The color corp from the 4th degree Bishop Water P. Kellenberg D.D. Assembly Knights of Columbus led the Joe Lamb Council in the parade. The color corp is commanded by Commodore Joseph Ehlert (P.G.K. from Joe Lamb Council).

The parade itself had many different groups and featured veterans from "Desert Storm." The parade, which took place under a beautiful sunny sky, had a line of march - east on Old Country Road and then into Washington Avenue and ended at the Plainview/Old Bethpage Community Park.

Ceremonies took place at the park at 11 a.m. and many dignitaries were on hand to give brief speeches.

There was a very large committee required to coordinate this very successful parade. Representing the Joe Lamb KofC. were: P.G.K. John Lombardi and P.G.K. Tony Iannuzzi.

In addition to the presence of the Joe Lamb Council were the members of the Joseph F. Lamb Council No. 5723 - Columbiettes. This group of very active women are led by President Lorraine McMurtry. They have always been very active in the community and have always supported the efforts of the Joe Lamb Kof C.

On a different note - the Joe Lamb June Knight of the Month is not just one member, but three: Richard Layh, Patrick Anello and Warren Blair. All are new members and since joining our Council have been very active. Congratulations to all three!

Kunzig Nominated For Councilman

In one of his proudest moments, Theodore Roosevelt Republican Club Executive Leader George Yochmann, at last Thursday's Convention of the Town of Oyster Bay Committee, stood before his fellow Committeemen and Committee-women, and nominated Leonard Kunzig for Councilman.

Kunzig was appointed to the Town Board to fill the unexpired term of John Verdito who became Town Attorney. "I'm extremely proud to designate Lenny Kunzig," said Yochmann, "not only because he is from Bethpage but because he will be good for all the people of the Town of Oyster Bay. Lenny has worked in Town government for 10 years and he brings that experience to the Town Board."

As Executive Assistant to the Supervisor, Kunzig was responsible for overseeing the planning and building of the Town of Oyster Bay's very successful Golf Course. Before his appointment to the Town Board, he was Deputy Commissioner of Parks. "I'm very proud and honored to be part of the Delligatti Team," Kunzig exclaimed. "We will continue to work very hard to keep the Town of Oyster Bay a great place to 'Live, work and play.'"

Also nominated at the convention were: Receiver of Taxes, Gary Musiello; Town Clerk, Carl Marcellino; Councilman Tom Clark; and Councilwoman, Ann Ocker.

Local Grad Has Photo Exhibit

Rick Miller, a Plainview native and graduate of John F. Kennedy H. S., will present "Faces in the Crowd: Views of New Yorkers," a series of photographs taken on the streets of New York City, at the Plainview/Old Bethpage Public Library from July 1-31.

Mr. Miller has been photographing the street life of New York City for nearly a decade. He is also an accomplished nature and wildlife photographer whose pictures have appeared in newspapers and magazines in the U.S. and abroad.

"New York contains so much steel, glass and concrete that we occasionally forget the people who give the city its vitality and character," Miller says. "I try to capture that energy in my photographs."

The 29 black and white images range from the ordinary to the bizarre, "but that represents life in New York City," Miller observes.

The Plainview/Old Bethpage Public Library is located at 999 Old Country Road. Its hours of operation are: Monday-Friday, 9-9; Saturday, 9:30-5:30 and Sunday, 1-9.

Hickville Triumph In Semis

The Hicksville Hawks, travelling soccer team, continued their undefeated season, improving their overall record to 16 wins, no losses, no ties, via a 2-0 victory, over Garden City, at the latter's field, on June 1, in the Semi-Finals of the N.Y.S. Cup Tournament and captured first place, in their L. I. Junior Soccer League Division, via a 5-1 pasting of Rockville Centre, at the latter's field, on June 2.

Both games featured a total team effort, with Hawk domination in both the defensive and offensive zones, led by the great play of goalkeeper Danny Bell. The first half was all Hicksville, but the great play of the Garden City goalie thwarted all offensive efforts, leading to a 0-0 halftime score. However, Hicksville never let up and it paid off in the second half. Both of Saturday's goals were set up by sequential carries, upfield, and pinpoint passes on the part of Andre Parris, to Tommy Basaranlar, at the game's 63 minutes mark, and Chris Jendras, at the game's 78 minutes mark.

On Sunday, at the game's 5 minute mark, a Brian Harkins throw in, from the sideline, went directly into the box, where a handball, by a Rockville Centre defender, set up a David Baumritter penalty shot, which was stopped by the Rockville Centre goalie, but David converted the rebound. At the game's 23 minute mark, David converted a rebound of an Earl Dennis shot. Rockville Centre then came back to make it 2-1, at the 24 minute mark, Mike Longo set up Rob Persaud at the 39 minutes mark for a 3-1 halftime lead. In the second half, Kevin Koehn was set up by Brian Harkins at the 63 minutes mark and three minutes later, Koehn returned the favor, setting up Harkins.

The balance of the players were: Eric Blicker, Stephen Fox, Rich Kutschau, Danny Longo and Brian Rooney, all of whom contributed mightily to the weekend sweep. Congratulations to the Hawks, Coach John Fitzgerald, Asst. Coach Pat McHugh, Manager Brian Koehn and sponsor, Sports Medicine Rehabilitation of Manhasset. Special congratulations are in order to goalkeeper Dmitry Drouin, who was away for the weekend, trying out for the U.S. junior, National Team. All involved wish the Hawks good luck on Saturday, June 8, in the State Cup Finals, against HBC, at Farmingdale College, and on Sunday, June 9, in the Chase Cup Tournament Semi-Finals, at Brentwood, against Newfield.

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Do you think that Senator Edward Kennedy's career was badly hurt by the case against William Kennedy Smith?

Kennedy

Input Callers Don't Favor Special Trade With China

Most callers to Input do not believe we should extend extra trade to China in answer to this question: "Do you think we should extend favored trade status to China as requested by Pres. Bush? Here are some of the answers:

NOT GOOD IDEA

No, I cannot see how we can go to war in the Persian Gulf and then after it is over decide that we want to make a friend out of China. There is no democracy in China and the Tianamin Square massacre was on the order of one of the biggest murder sprees in recent history. We should not help China. G.F.

NOT DEMOCRATIC

China should be given a few helps but it should not be on the same level as countries that have a democratic system or at least some rights for citizens. China kills anyone who disagrees with its government. We should not be helping them. J.G.

BUILDING COMPETITION

Why should we be building up trade with more foreign countries to come in with their products and take work from American workers? We do not need this type of trade. If China wants to buy from us and it has the money then we should have trade. If not, let's not be foolish and extend credit only to have them steal our markets and spread outrageous dictatorship. H.G.

NO THANKS

I do not understand why Pres. Bush is stumping for China and Russia to benefit from trade agreements. These two countries are trying desperately to maintain communism even when it has been proved to be a poor system. The people who are slaves to these governments will not thank us. D.C.

NO FORCE

It seems that one second we are championing freedom and fighting Arab leaders and the next we are looking for ways to help dictatorships to maintain their holds over the people. We should not help China until they change their way of forcing people to adhere to their principle or be shot. L.K.

LONG RANGE VIEW

Pres. Bush is taking a long range view with China. He knows that the Chinese have a long way to go before the country will be anything but a dictatorship. But he wants to make strides forward so that they realize that our system is the better one and that they will want to change. We should proceed but very slowly. N.H.

NO TRADE

It does seem difficult to understand why Pres. Bush wants to help China. We believed they were turning away from a dictatorship when the students massed last year. The response was unacceptable for us. How can we support a country that will shoot its citizens when they say things against the government. They are not presently worth trading with or helping in any way. V.F.

ONLY WITH CONDITIONS

Quite frankly, I hardly feel qualified to discuss the favorable and unfavorable factors involved in granting China "most favored nation trade status." It does guarantee the best available tariff rates and is not normally granted to Communist countries considered in violation of human rights. Assuming that were our rigid policy throughout the world, there seems to be no reason to abandon the policy in this case except for the size of China in population and, of course its buying power. In these areas, they can wield great influence politically, socially and economically and while as a national policy, they have made it clear that they have no intention of abandoning their current form of government, even they can't ignore the changes going on in the world all around them. Even in China itself, I note that a city named Shenzhen has developed itself as a model for Chinese progress and they have even promoted stock market development in an effort to prove that a capitalist economy can thrive under a socialist government. Actually, I don't see how our President, despite his excellent personal relation with them, could go all out and grant M.F.N. status to China without loading it with a flock of conditions. Obviously, we want to get along with China and I believe that the rest of the world feels the same way but we simply can't make a carte blanche agreement until we begin to see some improvement in the attitude displayed in Tianamen Square. P.G.S.

PAST ISSUES

The alarming escalation of costs for American medical care is a serious problem with no easy solution. Government sponsored health care on a low basis for those with no coverage could be helpful if the present payment system is replaced by limiting the choice of doctors and hospitals to be used, treatment practices and payments could be negotiated. More emphasis should be placed on preventative care and holistic medicine. Nothing is more important than maintaining good health. That is everyone's right. C.P.

Adopt A Pet

By Edith Foy

"ADOPT A PET" is a headline we frequently see in the papers - an earnest plea to animal lovers to save the life of one destined for destruction. Since my home has been the haven for a couple of cats and dogs over the years, I feel I have paid my dues as an animal owner, but these pleas make me recall some of the experiences I had with our last dog - some pleasures and some frustrations.

To wit:

I had just had the unhappy experience of having our first dog - a sweet, loving, obedient animal - put to sleep due to her terminal illness, and was off on a vacation. Because of my feelings of sadness and the fact that I really didn't want to cope, so soon, with training another dog and taking on its care and maintenance, I decided not to replace her for a while.

Shortly after my vacation ended two weeks later, my teenaged daughter announced that she r-e-a-l-l-y would like to have another dog. Although I wasn't yet ready for it, off we went to Bide-A-Wee and selected a feisty little puppy who looked up at us from the cage with soulful, pleading eyes saying she belonged to us.

That first night we settled her warmly in the kitchen with papers on the floor and the door closed, and we went to bed. Before long, the whining started and I got up to try to comfort her, which meant sitting with her cradled on my lap until she fell asleep. This continued intermittently during that night and a few more nights that followed until she adjusted to her new surroundings and new owners, and I sort of regretted having changed my mind about having another dog. I went to work each day and didn't need sleepless nights. However, at the same time, as I was cuddling her I said to myself: "I really love this little thing!"

She was very, very cute. As time went on, my daughter taught her some tricks and we sometimes had her perform for guests - probably much to their dismay. After all, WE thought she was cute and smart, but did they? Sort of like looking at another's vacation pictures on the screen. She did the regular "sit," "shake hands," "stay," "lie down," "beg," "come," "heel." We would also put a treat on her paws and tell her to "stay," and she would look up at us and wait for us to indicate that it was okay for her to eat it. Oh, she was so smart!

My son and daughter used to play "Monkey (dog) in the Middle" with her. As soon as they'd get a ball and play catch with each other, she'd get in the middle and try to catch the ball, jumping almost up to the ceiling and twisting herself around in mid-air for the return throw. Sometimes, she caught the ball but promptly gave it back so she could play some more. In the meantime, I watched - amused by her antics.

But she developed some tricks of her own which were not so cute. She learned how to open the screen doors by repeatedly manipulating the latches, and then would run out of the house. At those times, she did NOT respond to the "come" command. This was frustrating since the doors had been locked and she was smart enough to take advantage of times when we were in other parts of the house. After she got tired of her freedom, we would find her calmly and peacefully sitting on the steps, enjoying watching the children at their outdoor play and waiting for us to open the door for her to come in.

The house-breaking routine was marked by some times of non-success, which came as no surprise. Newspapers were spread out on the floor but she would find the uncovered spaces and relieve herself. This led to some comic relief - I remember my daughter and me chasing her around the table trying to catch her so that we could teach her that this was not what the "How To" books promised. But she won - she managed to elude us and, by the time we did catch her, one of us had cleaned up the area and there was no evidence left to chide her about. If people had seen us chasing her around the table, they would have thought we were the ones who needed incarceration!

But cute she was. One day, we came home to find all my daughter's shoes from her upstairs bedroom littered over the living room floor. She had managed to open the kitchen-door, go upstairs, and bring down the shoes. We really had to laugh when we pictured her making numerous trips up the stairs, each time coming down with one shoe. That must have kept her busy for quite a while! Since no damage had been done to the shoes, we were able to accept it and think it was funny.

I laughingly used to say she walked like a seaport - her rear end jiggling from side to side.

She knew the sound of our cars. When we drove into the garage, there was no sound from her - just a hearty "welcome" when we opened the door and entered the house. But let a strange-sounding car pull into the driveway or park in front of the house and, zingo, would she let the world know that her territory was being encroached upon. We felt comfortable with her protective instincts.

She was our doorbell. We didn't have to worry if the bell was out-of-order or if we didn't hear a knock on the door. We did hear her barking, though, letting us know that we had a visitor, perhaps only a door-to-door salesman.

She noticed things. One time we bought a new lamp, entered the house by another door and set it up. When we released her from the kitchen, she was interested in only one thing - the new lamp, staring up at it with suspicious eyes. I, a widow, and my daughter, who had begun dating, exclaimed: "She's better than a husband - she NOTICES!"

She loved riding in the car, but also experienced some nervousness. When the car was moving, she settled down and enjoyed the scenery. But when the car stopped, she got restless and wanted out. We got some tranquilizing pills from the vet, which to a large extent solved the problem.

In spite of some difficult times she put us through, she was very affectionate and our hearts melted. She loved to have her belly rubbed and would lie on her back for as long as we were willing to stroke her underside.

Eventually, she slept all night, controlled her bodily functions, calmed down, respected our belongings, and became a loving, important part of our lives. When it became necessary to put her, also, to sleep, it was devastating for me. With infinite trust in me, she let me lead her on the leash to her doom and I'll never forget my sobs after I handed her over to the vet to accomplish her destruction. She had been a source of mostly pleasure, devotion, affection, and humor, and had filled our lives with the dedication that an animal can provide. A lot of bother? Certainly - but the rewards were worth every inconvenience, every puddle on the floor, every need for discipline, every frustration and loss of sleep in the beginning. Seldom do we find such blind affection in humans.

All in all, I feel that our household was enriched by the heart-warming presence of our pets. So when you see a plea for adoption and you:

- are willing to exercise some patience;
- have a need to give and receive tenderness;
- appreciate a sense of protection and security;
- get a kick out of childlike playfulness;
- have a sense of humor;
- like to cuddle furry little things;
- like some company in an otherwise empty house.

I say "GO FOR IT!"

Q. I have noticed that tips are said to range from 15 to 20 percent of a bill in a restaurant. When you calculate this, do you figure in the sales tax?
R.K. A. No you do not generally figure the sales tax in the tip but a great many people now are doubling the sales tax to quickly arrive at the amount of the tip. With the new increased fraction the tip will then closely approximate a 15 percent gratuity.

Q. We're having a christening party for our first baby. Someone said we should have a "christening cake." What's that?
A. Ask a specialty baker to make one for you — a white cake with white icing — perhaps with your baby's initials and birthdate contained in the icing design. Traditionally, the mother and father cut the first piece and share it, as they did with their wedding cake. A newborn obviously can't share in the christening cake, but if your baby is several months old, you should give him or her a taste of the first piece! After all, it's his first party.

FINE SEAFOOD
Our party of four had dinner at Estoril Granada, on Mineola Boulevard in Mineola. Seafood seems to be their specialty. We asked the waiter for suggestions and he thought we would enjoy Carne Porco Alentejana. This consists of pork and clams in a delicate brown sauce. "It was a happy choice. The other couple ordered the Caldeirada, which is the Portuguese version of Bouillabaisse. Our friends heartily endorsed their choice. If you are hankering for something unique and delicious, I think you will enjoy Estoril Granada. We enjoyed the ambiance of the restaurant and found the service excellent. G.W.

Q. The other night I dropped my butter knife while dining at a neighborhood restaurant. Should I have picked it up myself or asked the waiter to do so?

A. If it was convenient, you could have retrieved the knife yourself and asked for a replacement. It would also not have been wrong for you to ask the waiter to pick it up. Either way is correct.

Q. Is it normal restaurant procedure for a waiter or waitress to say "will this be on the dinner or a la carte?" before taking one's order in a moderate restaurant? I had a very embarrassing experience recently because a waitress didn't ask this information. Over the years, I have always been asked this question and never been in trouble. All the better restaurants in the city seem to do this. Thank you.

J.

A. You are right. The waitress should tell you of the possibilities on the menu and she should inform you of how she is carrying it on her ticket.

Q. I seem to remember that years ago salads always came to the table with the entree. But now they are served in advance of the main course. Why did this change occur?

A. Salads are now customarily served before the entree in order to provide the hungry diner with something to eat while his mail course is being prepared.

With today's emphasis on nutrition, salads are treated with much more respect than they once were. They are regarded not just as accompaniments to meals, but as important courses in their own right.

Q. Recently I attended an elegant wedding and I noticed that the champagne was served in a tulip shaped glass rather than the traditional broad brimmed type. Is this something new?

A. It is a fairly new idea. The theory now is that a tulip shaped glass preserves the effervescence (bubbles) of champagne longer than a wide brimmed glass.

A. If I am dining out with a large group and do not feel like a cocktail, am I really obliged to order one so as not to put a damper on the party?

A. Absolutely not and this applies to all size groups. No one should ever order an alcoholic drink to please others. If you wish, you may order a soft drink or mineral water, but this is purely optional.

STEAK LOBSTER
Barrister's in Mineola is a new clean restaurant that always seems to be a nice place to go. We have been there several times and always found that the Barrister took care of us well. On Thursday we had the surf and turf dinner which gives you just enough steak and a half lobster so that you can enjoy the best of two worlds.
In addition to the main entree they have a nice salad bar at the Barrister which allows you to eat as much of that fare as you wish. And the main course is served with potato and vegetable.
We think that a $10 price for a meal like we had is one of the best buys on L.I. and it is at a nice restaurant to boot. G.R.

SPECIALTIES
The LaMarmite in Williston Park is one of the top restaurants on Long Island according to the ad you have. We will go along with that. We have been going to this restaurant on and off for some time. It is something special and spoils you for the many other "run of the mill" places.
One thing nice about the LaMarmite is that it has several specialties of the house each day and they are genuine specialties. We have been disappointed elsewhere with the specials because they often turn out to be items that were made of leftovers. At LaMarmite, we have to say that the specials are really "special."
Another fine point about LaMarmite is that you are given attentive service from the beginning with the valet car parking to the end of the meal. This is really a first rate restaurant. G.E.

Q. I have noticed that tips are said to range from 15 to 20 percent of a bill in a restaurant. When you calculate this, do you figure in the sales tax?
R.K.
A. No you do not generally figure the sales tax in the tip but a great many people now are doubling the sales tax to quickly arrive at the amount of the tip. With the new increased fraction the tip will then closely approximate a 15 percent gratuity.

This newspaper, and the seven other weekly newspapers associated with it, publishes the last word in restaurant guides and a paid listing of many prominent selected restaurants in this area. While many of them have been rated by the great, and near great food connoisseurs, our readers will have the last word through "Reader Ratings."

Through a special 24 hour phone system, readers will be asked to call in their assessment of each restaurant they visit. Consensus ratings (good or bad) will be published as a continuing part of the guide.

In addition they can make suggestions, compliments or criticisms through the open phone line and messages will be sent through to the restaurant management.

Q. I have been invited to a formal restaurant dinner later in the year. However, I am also on a strict diet for medical reasons. Do you think I should mention that to my hostess?

A. By all means, tell her. If she selects the menu for her guests she will take your special diet into account. However, my own opinion is that where restaurant dinners are arranged it is better to allow guests to make their own food selections.

FINE FOOD

This week we went to the Arbor Inn a week after our anniversary which we wanted to celebrate last week. They gave us great service and great food on Thursday. The decor of the Arbor Inn, the piano at the bar and the fine food is worth going to at any time. In addition to the food the people are very friendly at the Arbor Inn. We recommend it and especially if you are going to celebrate something.

J and L.S.

Q. Who is served first at table and when is the proper time to begin eating?

A. The hostess is not served first unless she is the only lady at the table or is alone with her husband and children. If Grandmother or even a young girl guest is present the dishes are first presented to her after inspection by the hostess. When the hostess is serving from in front of her place, with or without the aid of a servant, she is served next to last and her husband last. For her to serve herself earlier will mean her food will be cold and her filled plate in the way.

After several people have been served, urged by the hostess, guests begin eating so their food will not be cold. And, except at breakfast, the polite husband waits until his wife has been served before beginning to eat.

As more Americans are cutting down on meats, we're turning instead to alternative forms of protein that are lower in cholesterol and saturated fats. When served with grains (breads, pasta, rice), legumes offer a balanced source of protein — and they're much less expensive than meats.

Legumes include beans like lentils, dried peas, soy, pinto, lima, black, navy, kidney, mung and garbanzos. If you garden, it's a good idea to include legumes because they fix nitrogen from the air into the ground, improving fertility of garden soil.

Garbanzos (as they are known in Spain and Latin America) are the seeds of a branching bush annual that grows well in arid and semiarid regions. The beans are popular in the Mediterranean and Middle Eastern regions, where they have been grown since ancient times by Egyptians, Hebrews, Greeks and Romans. In India, legumes (known as "gram") are made into a typical and spicy dish called dhal.

Garbanzos are known as ceci beans in Italy, and are often referred to as chick peas in this country. They are said to have been the first imported food in the New World, brought here by Spanish settlers who planted them in Florida. (Cranberry beans are similar and can be used interchangeably.)

Their nutlike flavor makes garbanzo beans ideal ingredients in main dishes and dips. Middle Easterners use the beans as the basis for "hommos" or "hummus," a popular dip most often served with flat pita bread. The dip is easy to make.

In a blender container combine 3 cups canned cooked garbanzo beans (drained), 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons sesame tahini, 1 tablespoon olive oil, 2 cloves garlic (sliced), ½ teaspoon salt, and ¼ teaspoon dried ground cumin. Blend until smooth, top with a little more olive oil, and garnish with some Greek olives and chopped fresh parsley. Serve with warm pita bread cut into wedges to dip. This makes a wonderful party dish or a refreshing light supper when served with a tossed green salad.

While it's not convenient to cook dried legumes in your microwave, you'll find that it's easy to use canned garbanzos in a variety of recipes. Garbanzos are somewhat higher in calories than other legumes (360 calories per ¾ ounces dry), but they're also an excellent source of protein, fiber, thiamine, iron and calcium. Serve the following dishes with hot cooked brown rice, warm buttered bread or a pasta dish. Add a green vegetable and fruit and you've got a healthy and meatless — but high protein — meal.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

MICRO-TIP OF THE WEEK

Do not use non-stick aerosol sprays or coatings on microwave browning dish; sprays will scorch on dish.

ITALIAN HERBED CECI BEANS

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- ½ small onion, chopped
- 1 small clove garlic, minced
- ¼ teaspoon each dried crumbled oregano and basil leaves
- 2 heaping tablespoons tomato paste
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1 (15½-ounce) can garbanzo beans, drained

Yields 3 servings.

Preparation time: 10 minutes.

Cooking time: 4¼ to 6 minutes (plus 2 minutes standing time).

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

In a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine olive oil, onion, garlic, oregano and basil. Cover and microwave 1½ to 2 minutes, or until onion is tender.

Stir in tomato paste and water to make a smooth paste. Add drained garbanzo beans, stirring to coat evenly. Cover and microwave 3 to 4 minutes longer to heat through. Let stand, covered, 2 minutes before serving.

SPRING BEANS

- 1 teaspoon butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
- 1 (9-ounce) package frozen, cut green beans
- 1 (15½-ounce) can garbanzo beans, drained
- ¼ cup orange juice
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon honey

Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation time: 10 minutes.

Cooking time: 10¼ to 13¼ minutes.

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Combine margarine, onion and green pepper in a 1½-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave 1½ to 2½ minutes, or until vegetables are tender. Add frozen green beans. Cover and microwave 5 to 6 minutes, stirring once, until beans are hot. Stir in drained garbanzo beans. Microwave 3 minutes longer, to heat through. Set aside.

Combine orange juice and cornstarch in a 2-cup glass measure. Stir in honey. Microwave 1 to 2 minutes or until mixture boils and thickens, stirring once or twice. Pour over vegetable mixture and toss gently to coat.

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abraham,
Ph.D.

Dr. Abraham: I don't know why I never thought of it before, but just lately I've looked at my nose in the mirror, really studied it, and it is far from pretty. It's too large, I think, even kind of bulbous.

It never bothered me before, so I wonder whether it's like other things that have bothered me and then just kind of faded away, making me feel I'm sort of sickle. One was my height (taller than other girls I know), kind of stringy, tawny-colored hair, eyebrows too thick, eyelashes too thin and short, and other stuff like that. I generally end up thinking that nobody's perfect.

But back to that nose of mine and its size. Do you think it could be just one more example of my fickleness? — Self-conscious Self-conscious: It certainly could be, but there is probably a way to find out. Table the idea for a while and see whether it joins the fade-out scene.

If it does, you have your answer. If it doesn't, several steps could be taken before any action is considered.

Think about running the topic by your parents and your best friend, and locate a competent cosmetic surgeon with whom you and your parents can talk it over and get answers to your questions related to the need for surgery, anticipated results, cost and other matters that occur to you and your folks.

Dr. Abraham: I've seen a boy at school I think I'd like, but I don't know for sure. I've never spoken to him. I've tried to call him on the telephone, but he is never at home and doesn't return my call. That has happened five times. I think he is either 12 or 13 years old. I'm 12.

The girls at school tell me he is kind of dumb, and I know that in our class he never knows much.

But I don't know what he really is like. How can I get him to talk to me? — Lonely Lonely: The telephone certainly doesn't seem to be the way to do it, so you might try a more direct approach at school. On the way there or back, in the lunchroom, in the halls — these are all places where you might try a "Hello" or a short comment about your class or teacher, an event coming up at school, a class assignment, how nice (or miserable) a day it is or anything to help break the ice.

You might have to try several times, but if that doesn't get him to open up, it may be something like shyness or liking another girl that gets in the way.

After a few efforts by you, it may have to be up to him. After all, you will have given it your best shot, and as people sometimes say, "Now the ball is in his court."

Dr. Abraham: When I'm alone with my girl, she is a living doll — sweet, lovable and fun to be with. But when her girlfriends are around she acts so silly I wish I could get out of there.

They giggle, never finish sentences and act like I'm not even in the same room. They are all a pain to me.

Then I think how it is when we are alone and I get kind of mixed up. I wish you would explain this to me. — Confused Confused: Most of us act, and sometimes even talk, differently in various situations and with a variety of people. That seems to be what's happening with your girl and her friends.

The solution may be to try to cut back on the amount of time you spend with that group. Do you think you can do that without offending the one who is important to you? I hope so.

It might be helpful to tell her occasionally how great it is to be alone with her. She would probably like hearing that.

Dr. Abraham: Let me ask you just a simple question: What are the five kinds of food that a person's diet is supposed to include? I've heard that there are five, but when I asked two buddies of mine what they are, neither one had any idea. Of course, they're no authorities, but maybe you are or can get an answer from someone who is.

I'm putting on weight like a pig and feel I ought to get started losing some of it. — Pudgy Pudgy: The ones usually listed are grains, vegetables, dairy, meats and fruits.

Although that answers your question, it's not the full story of good eating habits. To meet your personal needs you should know which ones in each group and how much are appropriate for you. A problem many of us face is not that we eat too little but too much, especially foods that contain saturated fat (like palm and coconut oil), salt and sugar.

Your next stop should be your family physician with a telephone call or a visit to talk about these issues and specifically why you are "pudgy." And include questions about fiber and fluids (which and how much), and also alcohol. If you don't drink at all, that's no doubt best.

New flavors for the melting pot

By Charles Britton

More flavors are going into the American melting pot: the vigor of cardamom, the snap of cumin, the dark gold of turmeric, the exciting sizzle and pop of mustard seeds as they hit hot oil, the tart smoothness of yogurt.

For the first time in our history, a substantial community of East Indian heritage has joined our diverse society, and its cooks are bringing their distinctive tradition to our kitchens. The meeting of culinary cultures is bound to have a mutual impact. Perhaps we are watching the very start of a new hyphenated cuisine, Indian-American cooking.

Cooking teacher Fatima Lakhani is among those helping bring Indian dishes to our tables. In her nine years in this country, she has found Americans open to different influences and eager to adapt them to established eating patterns.

"People here are fascinated," she said. "But they cannot do without their large servings of meat. They want to use Indian recipes for side dishes, so we do a lot of mixing and matching."

This is a trend she fully approves of, and she often serves Indian dishes this way herself.

Lakhani believes Americans are often misled about the cooking of her tradition.

Too many Indian restaurants, she said, prepare essentially the same sauce for every curry on the menu. In true Indian cooking, the blend of herbs and spices changes according to the main ingredients and the style of preparation. The effect is one of a rich complexity, far removed from prepared curry powders, which are to Indian cooking what bottled pasta sauce is to Italian.

"I had a neighbor come up to me and ask for a standard curry," Lakhani said. "But there can never be a standard curry recipe."

Still, Lakhani seems to have developed something much like that. In England, her basic beef curry was featured on a popular TV cooking show and then in a book developed from the program.

"In England, they're still cooking it," she said.

On a trip to Australia, she found it had traveled to the land Down Under, too.

Like her husband, Aziz, a consultant in information technology, Fatima Lakhani comes not from India itself but from the vast overseas Indian community, which spread into many parts of what was once the British empire.

Both were born in Nairobi, Kenya; her family originated from northwest India near the Iranian border, his from Kathiawar region of western India.

"In our community a girl was supposed to cook. It was a frust by the time a girl was 16 or 17," Fatima said. "My father had to have everything made fresh at home — he still does. I used to make 40 chapatties a day. Now I do it for my husband and children."

The Lakhanis have a daughter, Zara, 18, and a son, Karim, 22.

Chapatties are the most common of the hot breads that are both a staple and a delight of the Indian meal. The whole-wheat dough is formed into a thin cake and cooked on a griddle. The same dough when deep-fried is called a poori.

Indian food made in this country is bound to differ from what you find in Kenya or India, Lakhani said. Some ingredients are not available fresh — or even at all.

Then there is the problem of the essential spices. Those that are ground lose much of their flavor in a few weeks. Whole spices last much longer, so the best policy is to grind your own to meet your needs. A small coffee grinder dedicated to the purpose works well.

For the best selection of ingredients, seek out markets that cater to an Indian clientele. It's a good policy to buy no more than you can use in a month or so. Some products are now being imported from Britain and India in hermetically sealed containers; these have a much longer shelf life as long as they remain unopened.

Indian cooking seems well-suited to present-day preoccupations with health. Vegetables play a large role, and meat is not nearly so important as it is in European and American traditions.

The type and amount of fat can be modified. Clarified butter or ghee would be the traditional choice, Lakhani said, and it gives an inimitable flavor and texture. But vegetable oil can readily substitute in most dishes.

Indian cooking is not fiery hot with chilies, Fatima and Aziz both insisted. This is a refrain often heard from Indian restaurateurs, too, and it appears to be a matter of regional variation and individual taste.

In the following recipes, from Fatima Lakhani's collection, you can adjust the red pepper to suit yourself. And if you wish to add some of the more incendiary prepared condiments available at Indian grocers, that's up to you.

We begin with Lakhani's beef curry that swept Britain.

MILD BEEF CURRY

Spices:

- 2 rounded tablespoons ground coriander
- 1 rounded teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 level teaspoon ground turmeric

1 rounded teaspoon Garam Masala (see recipe)

2 large cloves garlic, crushed

1 piece fresh green ginger, size of a walnut, finely chopped

2 teaspoons salt

Other ingredients:

3 tablespoons cooking oil

2 large onions, chopped

1 cup canned tomatoes

2 generous tablespoons tomato puree

2 pounds chuck steak, cut into cubes

1 cup water

Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Mix dry spices together, mix in garlic, ginger and salt. Set aside.

In heavy pan, heat oil and fry onions until even golden brown. Take care that they do not burn. Add spice mixture, tomatoes and tomato puree and cook over medium heat without lid, stirring until oil starts to separate slightly.

Then add meat, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add water, cover again and simmer gently for about 2½ hours, or until meat is very tender.

Serve with rice. Sliced fresh mango makes an attractive garnish.

Variation: Those who like a hot curry can add red pepper to taste: ½ teaspoon is enough for most.

Garam Masala means "dry spice mixture," and it appears in numberless variations, each with its partisans among Indian cooks. Such mixtures were the precursors of commercial curry powders.

GARAM MASALA

- 2 parts ground cinnamon
- 1 part ground cloves
- 1 part ground cardamom

Mix together and use as required. Keep airtight.

MIXED VEGETABLE CURRY

- 1 large clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tomatoes, finely chopped
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 medium onion, diced
- 1 teaspoon ground coriander
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1 teaspoon Garam Masala (see recipe)
- ¼ teaspoon turmeric
- 5 tablespoons oil
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 2 cups eggplant, cut into pieces
- 2 cups peas
- 2 cups green beans, cut into small pieces
- 2 small potatoes, cubed

Yields 3 to 4 servings.

Combine garlic, tomatoes, tomato paste, salt, diced onions and spices in bowl.

Heat oil in saucepan and fry sliced onions until golden brown. Add spice mixture, mix well and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add vegetables and stir well. Cover and cook over medium heat 10 minutes. Add ½ cup water and potatoes; mix well and cook 20 minutes or so, until potatoes are tender.

This curry is intended as a main course instead of or along with other curries in a large meal. You could serve it as a side dish for simply cooked meat, poultry or fish.

VEGETABLES IN SWEET-SOUR SAUCE

- 2 large potatoes
- 1 cup peas
- 2 large tomatoes, finely chopped
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- ¼ teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon turmeric
- ¼ teaspoon red pepper (optional)
- 4 tablespoons oil
- 2 teaspoons whole mustard seeds
- 1 green chili, cut into small pieces
- A few curry leaves (see note)
- Juice of ¼ lemon

Yields 3 to 4 servings.

Boil potatoes until tender; drain, peel, cube and set aside. Boil peas until cooked; drain and set aside.

In bowl, mix together tomatoes, tomato paste, salt, sugar, turmeric and red pepper. Heat oil in saucepan. Have cover handy. Add mustard seeds, green chili and curry leaves. Mustard seeds will start popping; partly cover pan until this stops, about 15 seconds.

Add tomato-spice mixture and cover saucepan; cook 3 minutes. Lower heat and cook uncovered, stirring frequently for 15 minutes. Add cooked vegetables. Mix well, cover and cook over gentle heat for 10 minutes. Off heat, season with lemon juice.

Note: Curry leaves have nothing to do with curry powder, nor do they give their name to curry dishes; the name is coincidental. They resemble small bay leaves and are available in Indian markets. They are used fresh in India but are found dried here. They tend to lose their flavor rapidly. So try to find a reasonably fresh source.

CARROT PICKLE

- 4 large carrots
 - 4 green chilies
 - 1 tablespoon mustard seeds, crushed
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - ½ teaspoon sugar
 - ¼ teaspoon turmeric
 - 1 clove garlic, crushed
 - ½ teaspoon red pepper (optional)
 - 1 cup tarragon vinegar
- Yields 4 servings.
- Peel carrots and cut each into 4 pieces across diameter. Slice each piece lengthwise into thick strips. Cut chilies lengthwise into strips. Combine all ingredients. Mix well, chill. Serve as side dish.

How to create near-instant gardens

Imagine the vast numbers of bedding plants that are installed in home gardens in the spring. Throughout the continent people will be creating near-instant gardens from home-grown or purchased transplants.

Among the most popular choices in flowers are petunias, impatiens, begonias, geraniums, marigold, salvia, garden pinks and zinnias. Among the vegetables, tomatoes top the list in popularity followed by sweet peppers, lettuce, broccoli and cabbage.

If you are planning to purchase transplants, first assess the planting sites that you have so that you can select types that will grow well in their conditions. Labels will indicate a plant's preference for sun or shade. In many areas, people will also do well to note a plant's need for water. Where water for gardens is limited, either stick to drought-tolerant plants or restrict planting areas to confined, strategic locations.

Prepare the planting areas by digging them over as deeply as you can and by mixing into the soil some peat moss, compost, old or processed manure or a combination of these to both enrich the soil and enhance its capacity for moisture-retention. At the same time blend into the sites a light scattering of a balanced granular fertilizer.

Pre-blended organic fertilizers are becoming increasingly available, or you can make your own balanced formula by combining four parts by volume seed meal (usually canola or cottonseed), one part dolomite lime, one-half part bone meal and one-half part kelp meal. One small handful scattered over each square yard of ground is the way I measure out most all-purpose types of dry and granular fertilizers.

If the purchase of bedding plants is to be incorporated into a general shopping trip, make them your last purchase before heading home so that they won't cook in the back of the car. Once home, give the plants some protection until you're ready to set them out.

Place the plants out of direct, hot sun and water the soil well. Even sun-lovers will dry out quickly in small flats if left exposed to full sun. Be sure in particular that the flats are thoroughly watered prior to transplanting. This will make the job easier for you and less stressful for the plants.

Cloudy weather is ideal for transplanting. But if faced with solid sunshine when you are ready to set out your plants, try to do the job late in the afternoon or early in the evening so that the plants won't have to face the stress of hot sun right away. Mist and water the newly set out plants often while they are settling in.

Most bedding plants are sold in small plastic flats holding several plants each. Remove the plants by pushing on the bottom of the flat to release the soil and root mass. Either cut or gently tease the individual plants apart and plant them immediately, using the spacing recommended on the label. When transplanting into patio tubs, hanging baskets or planters, set flowering plants close together for a pleasantly full display. Water these crowded planting daily and fertilize them often.

My own preferred method of transplanting into a flower bed makes the job go quickly. I make a hole, pop the plant in and go on to the next without filling the holes in. After five or six plants are in place, I pour about a cupful of transplanting solution into each of the holes and let it drain before filling in the holes and firming the soil well around the plants.

A general-purpose balanced liquid fertilizer can be used for transplanting. Examples are such commonly used formulas as 15-30-15 and 20-20-20. Currently I'm using a mild solution of fish and seaweed emulsions mixed.

If you would like to grow a few vegetables transplants but don't have a space allotted for them, try tucking a few into the flower garden. Some vegetables are highly decorative. A clump of curly green parsley, for example, brings a pretty note of contrast to a bed of flowers.

Eggplant is quite gorgeous with its purple-tinged leaves, bright lilac flowers and glossy fruits. Sweet peppers and dwarf tomatoes in fruit bring attractive splashes of color and are quite appropriate set into spaces in a sunny bed of flowers. Frilly leaf lettuce can be used as an edging. And for interesting edible accents in the flower garden, consider kale and Swiss chard.

Our Children

How to cut down on the blubber

Q. My kids have a tendency to put on weight. In fact, I refer to both of them by the nickname "Blubber."

A. I think I know the reason for it, and it is my fault. I'm carrying enough of a guilt trip without telling you why I think I'm the cause of it all. But I have certainly noticed lately how their weight has increased.

Q. Can you give me some ideas on how to handle this problem?

A. This is just a stab in the dark about your possible responsibility, but if you limit their TV watching and the greasy, fatty snacks that often go with it, you might be on the right track.

If you can get them to exercise on a regular schedule, that might also be helpful. If you pay attention to the fat and other weight-producing content in the meals they eat (at home, school or wherever), that, too, may help cut down on the blubber.

If either or both parents are heavy, that may mean the problem is in the genes, making it even more important to attend to the television/exercise/meals factors to help chip away at the fat.

Involved in all this could be the relationship to high blood pressure, a major cause for early death in this country that can start in the early years.

Q. Does this give you enough to think about or work on? I hope so.

Q. I enjoy taking our baby (now 10 months old) to the supermarket with me. He is so alert, watching everyone and trying to grab things once in a while, but I try to keep his hands occupied with little toys, books, and other stuff I bring along.

A. It is all a great experience for him, I'm sure, but I do worry about something he and I have seen a few times.

Some people aren't satisfied with pinching the fruit. They apparently feel compelled to sample it (especially grapes and cherries), and not just a few either. Nuts in large bins are also favorites of theirs. I think it is really a form of shoplifting.

Q. Do you think this practice will give him some wrong ideas? I certainly don't want to end this joint enjoyable experience of ours.

A. Even if he does notice this activity and later on tries to copy the behavior, you can then explain to him that it is wrong taking things that don't belong to you without paying for them.

Q. Because it can be handled if necessary in the future, why not just go on having this good time with him as you attempt to enrich his environment? You certainly sound like a wonderful mother.

Q. We are expecting our first baby in a few months, and of course, this event is the most important thing in our lives. Naturally we don't want to leave a stone unturned in connection with his or her health.

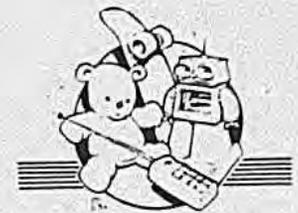

We hear so many conflicting reports regarding the shots that a young child should receive. Although we know you are not a physician, we value your advice based on our reading your column for many years.

What can we do to be sure we have the immunization problem under control? And when we do, can we depend on that source to also deal with other childhood health issues? Thank you for your comments.

A. Because your letter indicates that you probably are on the bright side, I'm surprised that you haven't considered the most logical source for handling your childhood health questions or problems. A competent specialist in pediatrics (one recommended by your obstetrician or by other persons whose opinions you respect) is the individual to contact.

Consider doing so before your baby is born, and as any concerns occur to you and your husband later on, too.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is one of the major sources that physicians, including those who are child specialists, use to keep up to date, but the AMA, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and publications like the New England Journal of Medicine are also among those they often utilize.

Callanetics may look easy ...

By Jack Williams

In a room full of squawking female anatomies — all of them undergoing measurement makeovers — Callan Pinckney is Mother Hen, her role-model limbs as buoyant as feathers.

"All right, ladies" she implores in a voice ranging from East Coast street urchin to Southern aristocrat, "now we're gonna get rid of those dreadful, gooshy saddlebags."

With that, she is cuddling up her size 2 body to a barre, rolling her right hip forward in effortless defiance of gravity and two slipped disks: anatomical aberrations that drove her to founding this fitness subculture known as Callanetics.

After three books and three videos in the last six years that are no strangers to best-seller lists — along with the wholehearted endorsement of the Duchess of York — Callanetics is not so much a cult as an international business and universal discipline.

Eleven franchised studios have emerged within the last two years, including Transformations, in Encinitas, Calif., the recent site of some impassioned, hands-on instruction by the 51-year-old guru herself.

In an age when voices of moderation no longer fall on deaf ears, Callanetics has credibility. No sweat, no nonsense, no impact, no jerks allowed (or kicks and jumps either). Taxing and toning without trauma.

"I didn't even sweat, and here I am with my thighs still quivering," said an exhausted novice, relaxing after an early-morning session.

"She wants you to lift everything one inch higher, one inch higher than you think you can. You wanna choke this woman after a while."

"You think you're in good condition, but you don't realize how stiff you are until you start to do this."

Nor do you realize how much tension you carry in the neck and shoulders.

"Stop tensing," demands Pinckney, repeatedly. "You're gonna learn that the body is a ragdoll. Even your toes should be relaxed. Remember, gentleness is the key word."

Easy for her to say.

In a sequence of exercises addressing such stubborn body parts as the pelvis, inner thigh, hips and abdomen, strain and discomfort among the clientele is contagious, and the ease with which Pinckney does them outrageous.

"When you tense up, you exhaust yourself," she says.

"Relaxing, that's what's exhausting," counters a student. "We're such tense creatures."

Next, Pinckney is demonstrating the inner-thigh squeeze, designed to "get your thighs so tight they'll be a part of your leg instead of a bag, flopping."

Each exercise is punctuated by the inevitable, "Do you want to feel more?" — an invitation to a more challenging variation.

And every time you lift an appendage, it must be returned to its original position in "triple s-l-o-w motion."

Pinckney, who calls both Savannah, Ga., and New York City home, combines an amalgam of influences in the final Callanetics product. Among them: yoga, ballet, belly dance, tai chi.

"It originated," she says, "as something to accommodate my own physical problems: arthritis in the neck and two slipped disks. I couldn't move my body more than the small contractions, and the small muscle contractions — 1/16th to 1/2 inch — are all the average person has to do."

"People I taught in New York started calling it 'Callanetics.' When clients claimed they felt and looked 10 years younger in 10 hours, that was used on the book (as a subtitle). The whole thing got started by word of mouth."

She bristles at the realization that Callanetics is taught in unauthorized studios, by instructors she has not personally certified: "I could slap a lawsuit on them so big it would bankrupt 'em."

But she's convinced that "the word gets out that they're not qualified."

The word about Callanetics reached Air Force troops in Berlin well before the unification of Germany. Pinckney was invited to teach her techniques to special forces schooled in the machismo-until-it-hurts philosophy of fitness.

"When the general met me, he said, 'What can I do for you?' And I said, 'You give me your men and I'll clobber 'em.'"

But one of the first things she heard from the troops was anything but encouraging: "I don't believe the general sent us to do Tinkerbell exercises."

Within minutes, she was mother-henning a room full of squawking male anatomies, and offering her heart-felt sympathies for the bulging eyes and gritting teeth.

"I understand ... if you don't have the strength to keep up," she deadpanned.

Alzheimer's: growing concern

The U.S. population is aging, and as it does the incidence of Alzheimer's disease will rise. Unless advances are made, one-fourth of people now in their 30s and 40s can expect to suffer with the malady.

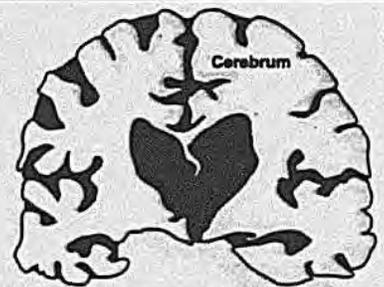

Normal brain

A normal human brain may weigh 3.1 pounds and the hemispheres are fully connected by nerve cells in the corpus callosum.

Alzheimer brain

Striking tissue loss is evident, particularly around the cerebrum and in the corpus callosum. The Alzheimer brain may weigh a full pound less than normal.

THE HEALTHY GOURMET

By Kit Saedaker

New nutritional guidelines say only 10 percent to 30 percent of our diet should come from fat. Fat, however, is calculated in grams, and going from grams to percent is beyond me.

At least it was until I read a health report by Jane Sheyen Chou in a recent McCall's magazine. Chou points out that the Chinese eat 20 percent more calories than we do and are 25 percent thinner. They manage to do this because they eat less than half the fat that we do, more starch and fiber and a third less protein. In other words, they eat mostly vegetables and grains and few animal products.

This makes sense since fat has twice as many calories as carbohydrates (vegetables and grains). But how much fat to eat daily and still stay in the 20 percent group depends on both activity and age.

Couch potatoes must eat less fat; joggers can eat more. Folks in their 20s can eat more, seniors less because metabolism slows down with age. Men can eat more grams of fat than women, of course. No one said life was fair. Best of all, a handy chart gave me some idea of the number of fat grams acceptable at certain ages to stay within a daily 20 percent level.

A 100-pound woman between 19 and 50 years old who leads a moderately active life can eat 37 grams of fat per day. For each 10 pounds over that, add 3 grams of fat so that a 170-pound woman who's moderately active can eat about 64 grams of fat a day. A 130-pound man, moderately active, gets 54 grams and adds 3 grams of fat for every 10 pounds over that. Which means a 210-pounder, moderately active, rates 87 grams of fat.

However, moderately active here is someone who walks around a lot every day — teachers, nurses, mothers. High activity entails regular workouts, professional dancers or construction workers. Most of us, alas, fall into the low category. We have to watch it.

As for cholesterol, the demon fat, it not only arrives in animal fat but is also self-made. Some of us make more than others, but cholesterol is essential for transporting fat to the places it has to go. During a fat overload, the cholesterol "truck" breaks down, dumping fat and cholesterol into the blood stream, where it settles against artery walls, dangerously narrowing them.

Remember, this is not an exact science. To be safe, keep fat and cholesterol levels way down. Chinese eat an average of only 44 grams of fat a day. That or lower is a good goal to aim for.

Figure out how many grams of fat you can afford. Then start with the recipes below, all low in fat, and calculate your percentage daily.

BLACK BEAN SOUP

3 cups dried black beans (about 1 pound), soaked overnight in water to cover

8 cups water or stock
2 bay leaves
2 carrots, chopped
2 ribs celery, chopped
1 onion, chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
Juice of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon coriander
1 tablespoon dried oregano
Pinch cayenne pepper
2 teaspoons cumin
2 tablespoons minced fresh parsley
½ cup sherry
Non-fat yogurt and scallions

Yields 8 to 10 servings. Each serving has about 230 calories, 1 gram fat, no cholesterol and 230 milligrams sodium.

Drain beans from soaking liquid and put them into large pot. Add water, bay leaves, carrots, celery and onion. Bring to boil, reduce to simmer, cover and cook for 1 hour.

Add garlic, lemon juice, coriander, oregano, cayenne pepper, cumin and fresh parsley and simmer until beans are soft. Add sherry and stir on stove, but off heat until well-mixed. Remove half the beans to food processor and puree. Return to pot and place over moderate flame just to heat through.

Serve topped with spoonful of non-fat yogurt and a sprinkle of sliced green scallions. May be served chilled.

Acid wash can clean stained steps

Q. I applied muriatic acid to my cement steps in the hope of cleaning dirt and grease from them. Instead, the muriatic acid left the steps a rust-colored mess.

Repeated applications have done nothing to alleviate the problem, though they have not worsened it, either. What did I do wrong? And what can I do to restore these cement steps to their original color?

A. It is likely that a chemical reaction between the concrete and the acid caused the staining. Rust-colored stains can actually be rust. Such stains are common and have been known to come from ingredients in the concrete mix.

Brown stains also can be vanadium efflorescence, or possibly manganese staining. Iron impurities in acids can have a negative reaction on light-colored masonry, producing such brown staining.

When cleaning brick or concrete, use the highest grade of acid (chemical pure) available to avoid any yellow and brown discoloration. Not more than 1 part high grade acid to 15 parts clean water should be used.

The acid wash should be neutralized immediately by washing the treated area with clear water. Following this, you can treat the area with a solution of potassium or sodium hydroxide, consisting of 1/2-pound hydroxide to 1 quart water. Allow this to remain on the masonry surface for two to three days.

Sometimes staining can be removed with sodium hydroxide applied liberally with a paint brush and allowed to remain on the stained area at least three days. Drano is the most convenient form of sodium hydroxide. Use one 12-ounce can to a quart of water.

Manganese staining also is brown or rust in appearance and is best removed by using a solution of 1 part acetic acid (80 percent or stronger), 1 part hydrogen peroxide (30-35 percent) and 6 parts of water. This solution can remove manganese stain, but has a drawback: The stain often returns within a few days.

The best method for long-term removal of manganese staining is to wet the area, brush or spray it with the acetic acid-hydrogen peroxide solution. When the reaction is complete, rinse with water.

Follow this with a solution of Brik Klenz or Calmal 22 Foam Masonry mixed 1 part to 3 parts of water. This solution should be allowed to remain on the area and is not flushed off.

Not knowing what caused the staining is going to make removal difficult. And rather than test all of these different solutions, your best bet may be to either paint the steps or apply a new top layer of concrete over the old.

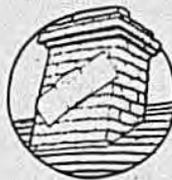

If you do decide to paint, use only top-quality paints recommended by a qualified paint dealer for application on masonry.

Portland cement paints are among the best for use on concrete.

In general it's best to select a "breathing" type of paint. These paints are permeable to water vapor, so they allow moisture to escape from the concrete surface without lifting the finish; but they are impermeable to water in liquid state, so they prevent destructive seepage. Etching the surface with a solution of muriatic acid will help in the bonding of the paint to the concrete.

Another option would be application of a concrete topping. These toppings are mixed with water and troweled on. They are made for interior or exterior use. One drawback is they have a tendency to lift or crack over a period of time.

Or, you can apply a thin layer of new concrete over the old using a concrete glue to assure bonding.

Q. We had planned to move to a larger house last year, but the economic situation has stopped us for the foreseeable future.

We are in great need of a family room — I'm desperate to get the TV out of the living room — but the only possible answer is in attic space over the garage, and I need inspiration. — K.B.

A. Designers Allen Scruggs, ASID, and Douglas Meyers, can supply inspiration by the roomful.

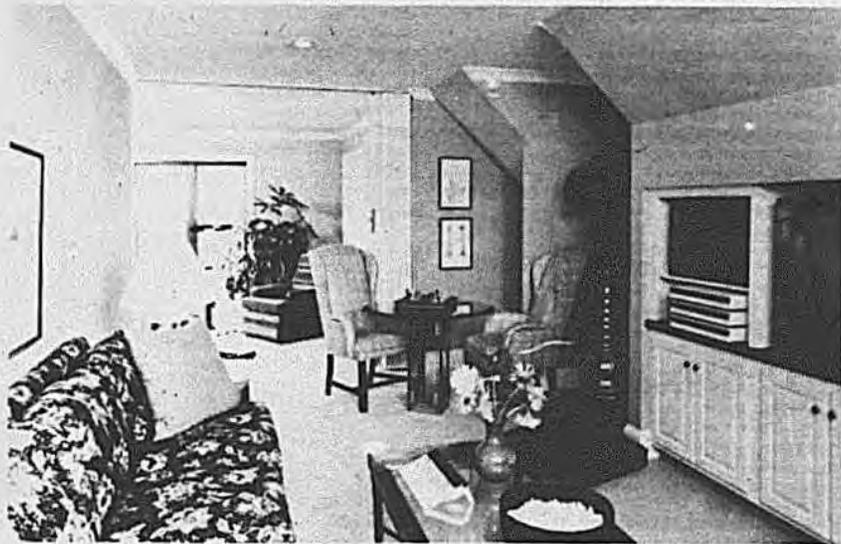

In the photo we show here, only the angled ceilings hint that this was once a dingy, underprivileged attic. The designers have turned it into a multifunction family room with a built-in entertainment center and even space for exercising.

To achieve the finished-for-real look, they have added moldings to the walls, and run a light-color carpet throughout.

The sofa, by the way, is a sleeper, so overnight guests are also welcome here.

And the light wall-to-wall carpeting not only expands space visually, it's also kind on the ears of those downstairs. Made by Mowhawk in a subtle geometric texture pattern, it's also Worry-Free nylon, the better to cope with heavy-duty family living.

In fact, wise buymanship can add immeasurably to your family room fun. Look for soil-resistant

ANTIQUE

JUNQUE

By James G. McCollam

Chair was made about 1875

Q. This chair was purchased and used around the turn of the century; it was refinished and reupholstered in 1965.

Can you tell me something about when it was made and its approximate value?

A. This would be classified as Renaissance Revival furniture made about 1875. It would sell for at least $400 to $500 in good condition.

Q. This mark is on the bottom of my Hummel Madonna bust; it is about 10 inches tall.

When was this made and what is its value?

A. Your Madonna was made by the Goebel Co. in Rodental, Germany. Although Goebel made Hummel figurines, this is not a Hummel; they are all marked "M.I. Hummel."

This would probably sell for about $75 to $85. It was made in the mid-1900s.

Q. What can you tell me about my Wallace Nutting print? It is titled "The Mills at the Turn."

It depicts three windmills beside a canal and measures 14 inches by 17 inches.

A. This is a hand-colored photographic print taken by the renowned American photographer, Wallace Nutting.

It was taken on a trip to Holland and was produced in the early 1900s and would probably sell for $325 to $335 in good condition.

Q. A friend told me that my old art deco dresser set is a collectible.

It consists of hairbrush, hand mirror, covered box, button hook and manicure tool. It is decorated with geometric red and black plastic inserts.

What is your opinion of my treasure?

A. Art deco style items are becoming very popular with collectors.

Your dresser set was made in the 1920s and would probably sell for about $135 to $150 in good condition.

Q. I would like to know something about the value of my blue pressed glass pickle castor.

It is in a silver-plated footed frame with a ribbed trim and a square handle. A pair of tongs hangs on one side. The frame is marked "Roger Bros. Mfg. Co."

A. Your pickle castor was made in Hartford, Conn., during the late 1800s and would probably sell for about $265 to $285.

Q. The mark on a small pitcher is a hound and a harp with "Belleek, Ireland." It is decorated with lilies of the valley.

A. Your Irish Belleek cream pitcher was made since 1965. It would probably sell for $90 to $100.

Send your questions about antiques with picture(s), a detailed description, a stamped, self-addressed envelope and $1 per item to James G. McCollam

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Household insecticides are dangerous to pets

Q. Are most of the insecticides that are used in homes poisonous for dogs?

We have an ant and roach problem and would like to spray our premises with strong insecticides. However, we are worried about the safety of our small dog.

A. Many of the ant poisons, herbicides and insecticides contain arsenic. Dogs often become poisoned by ingesting these substances.

The onset of clinical signs usually occurs from one to several hours following ingestion. The early signs of arsenic poisoning include vomiting, extreme restlessness, whimpering and severe abdominal pain.

These signs are usually followed by diarrhea containing blood. The vomiting and diarrhea soon lead to extreme weakness, dehydration and circulatory collapse.

Dogs consuming arsenic-containing substances should be taken to a veterinarian as soon as possible. If you cannot get the dog to a veterinarian immediately, vomiting should be induced at home by giving powdered mustard or salt.

Before using any insecticides, you should read the entire label to determine the possible dangers that may occur to your pets and family.

If you utilize the services of a commercial spraying service, you should be certain that they know that you own a dog. Isolating your pets and family from the treated areas for a period of time may be necessary to avoid poisoning.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Last week I wrote about Memorial Day and welcoming home soldiers from the recent war. Several people wrote back to correct me because Memorial Day is in honor of those soldiers who have died defending the country, not the people who came home.

This is true, and what I wrote was not correct. And yet, I think most people felt in their hearts thankful that so few of the Desert Storm soldiers were hurt or killed that although they felt sorrow over the lives lost, there was also some relief that so many came home safely. What do you think?

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

P.S. This week's coloring contest winners are David Cazes and Elizabeth Lone.

Patrick and his family live in Beaufort, South Carolina, where his dad is an attorney assigned to the Staff Judge Advocate.

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Age doesn't affect Social Security taxes

By William M. Acosta

Q. I will be 70 in July 1991 and I plan on working as long as I am able. I understand that there is no limit on how much I can earn once I reach age 70, but will my employer continue to deduct Social Security tax from my wages?

A. As long as you are employed in employment covered by Social Security, your earnings are subject to the Social Security tax. Your employer will continue to deduct the Social Security tax regardless of your age.

Q. I have recently started to receive Social Security disability benefits. These benefits are reduced because I was also entitled to worker's compensation. Please explain why. — C.M.

A. If you get worker's compensation or certain other government disability benefits, your Social Security disability benefit may be reduced. This is because the law states that the sum of all your disability payments cannot exceed 80 percent of your earnings averaged over a period of time shortly before you became disabled.

Q. I am married now but was previously married to another woman for 11 years. My present wife claims that my ex-wife will be eligible for benefits on my record. Is this true? — M.B.

A. If you are divorced (even if you have remarried), your ex-spouse can be eligible for benefits on your record. In order to qualify the marriage must have lasted at least 10 years. Contact Social Security regarding other requirements of eligibility. If your ex-spouse receives benefits on your account, it does not affect the amount of any benefits payable to you or your other family members.

Q. We have a 13-year-old disabled child who has been retarded since birth. Is she eligible for Supplemental Security Income? — V.T.

A. Children who have a disability may be eligible if they and their parents have limited income and resources. To be eligible for SSI, a child must be a U.S. citizen or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence. The SSI law considers the income of the parents as well as of the child in determining eligibility and payment amounts. Contact your local office for additional information.
