

St. Ignatius Loyola Church Bldg. 100 Anniv.

By Richard Evers

It is a striking coincidence that the 500th anniversary of the birth of St. Ignatius Loyola, founder of the learned and renowned Society of Jesus, and the 100th anniversary of his name-sake church in Hicksville are taking place in 1991. The landmark structure on Broadway has been a timeless feature of Hicksville's changing downtown scene since 1891. The familiar house of worship certainly holds many memories for its parishioners. But it also has been viewed in passage by millions of travelers, over the decades. Its gothic spire soars to the heaven of all faithful believers.

St. Ignatius Loyola's pastor, the Reverend Edward Tarrant, and a parish Centennial Committee under the Chairmanship of William Heberer, are busy with plans to mark their church building's 100th anniversary with a program of events commencing this summer and climaxing with a Sunday afternoon Mass of Thanksgiving and Celebration, on November 24, with the presence of Bishop John R. McGann of the Diocese of Rockville Centre and distinguished guests and parishioners.

In addition to a Centennial Journal, there will be an August exhibit in the Hicksville Public Library focusing on this 100th anniversary of the St. Ignatius Church building, as well as an exhibit of original church furnish-ings in the Old St. Ignatius School, during October.

The present church building is the second church built by Hicksville's Roman Catholics. It was erected by the memorable Father Lawrence Fuchs, during his 50 year pastorate. In the weeks to come this newspaper will proide historical accounts of this historic building's colorful past and evolution.

The Hicksville Youth Council is still carrying on business as usual despite any rumors that you may have heard of us closing our doors. The New York State Budget was finally passed in the wee hours of the morning on July. 3, and we did get a portion of our money restored. The bad news is that we are going to probably get hit with a 20% cut in funding which will work out to a reduction of funds by about $30,000. To make up for this loss we are going to have to find alternative funding sources. The first avenue that we are going to approach is fund raising. We are planning a major fundraising effort the weekend of August 17 and 18. On August 17 we are planning a Garage Sale/Carnival in the Beacon Federal Savings Bank parking lot, which is located right next to the Youth Council on the corner of Division Avenue and Old Country Road. The hours of this event will be 2:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. On Sunday the 18th of August we will be holding an outdoor Flea Market in one of the local parking lots, between the hours of 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. At this time we are looking at several different locations. Once we find a suitable lot we will advertise it.

The paint scheme is different and the first St. Ignatius Loyola parochial school is gone from Brosdway, but the landmark church in Edward Bady's original view in 1989 was approaching its 1991 Cestennial with grace and stability.

We need your support to make these events work. We hope that you will attend these events. But we also need your support by donating any good used clothes, furniture, appliances, or any other treasures that might be sitting around your home to our garage sale. Invited To Teach At DNA Laboratory Adele Damian Niceforo, teacher of the Academic Enrichment Program, Hicksville school 'program for the academically talented elementary children, has been invited to teach genetics to fifth through eighth grade students at the DNA Learning Center at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory, for two weeks during the month of July.

According to Ms. Niceforo, the history behind this project dates to the spring of 1989, when the DNA Learning Cener sponsored an experimental workshop for gifted fifth and sixth graders, "Fun with DNA." Hicksville Academic Enrichment Program students Nicholas Gonzales and Helen Christodoulou, now 8th and 9th graders, respectively, were among the select few on Long Island who were given an opportunity to b^m part of this earning experience in genetics and DNA fingerprinting.

"Needless to say," said Ms. Niceforo, a member of the DNA Teacher Advisory Committee, "teaching DNA on the elementary level generated great interest among area teachers, administrators and the press." As a result of this interest, six expanded sessions of "Fon with DNA" will be held at the learning center this summer.

"Not only will I have the pleasure of teaching at the DNA Learning Center." said Ms. Niceforo, "but 28 of our hicksville students have been nominated to participate as well." The following Hicksville children will commute to Cold Spring Harbor daily for one week of study: Grade 5: Edric Borja, Jason Graf, Kurt Koegl, Joseph Leo III, Edward Pettei, Kimberly Pina and Salvatore Seguna: Grade 6: Edward Chu, Joseph Herb, Shawn Jacobson, Carol Herb, Shawn Jacobson, Carol Licu, Gregory Quintan, Kimberly Scobie, Daniel Voss, Jonathan Wong, Kerri Young:

Wong, Kerri Young; Grade 7: Carney Anne Brewer, A Joanna Christodoulou, John Y Corso, Andrew Costello, Shirin Odar, Michael Pettei, Paul Tanck, Anthony Vernace and Synphen Wu; Grade 8: Christine Pettei, Colleen S Young and Jason Amplo.

According to Jane Conigliaro, Coordinator of the DNA summer program and a middle school specialist. "The students who will be attending will be immersed in a variety of hands on activities and labs designed to increase genetic literacy, encourage critical and creative thinking, and spark curiosity about the future."

36 Added Beds For Intensive Care

It could almost be science fiction...imagine being the only patient on an entire hospital floor. Imagine lying in a brand new hospital bed that has never before been occupied. Picture sophisticated color monitors continually displaying your vital signs, and a nursing staff catering to you, their only patient.

Allan Crispell, of Levittown, didn't have to use his imagination. As the first patient on the newly remodeled intensive care unit at North Shore University Medtospital-Cornell University Medtocal College in Manhasset, Mr. Crispell spent his recuperative time as a minor hospital celebrity. Recovering from an episode of angina, Mr. Crispell was in good spirits as he regarded the state-of-the-art medical equipment that surrounded him. "Soon they will invent a robot that can hold your hand when you're sick," he joked.

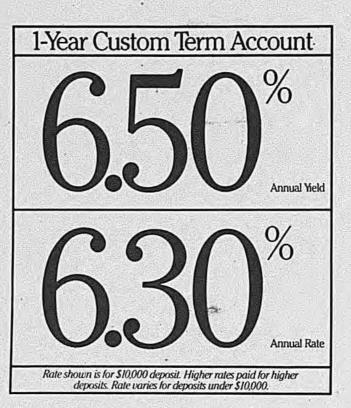

The 35 new beds comprise both medical and surgical intensive care units, and are located on the refurbished fifth floor of the hospital's Payson-Whitney Towerbuilding. Their addition brings North Shore-Cornell's total number of intensive care beds to 155, the highest in the region, and underscores the hospital's commitment to providing the most sophisticated care to the critically all and injured.

Bright and open floor plans allow the nursing staff to view their patients, and the modern equipment in place also facilitates patient care. Computers monitor more than 20 physical parameters, including blood pressure, body temperature, respiratory rate, pulse strength, cardiac output, and blood oxygen content, and display the results on color terminals. The units also contain automated laboratory processing for 45-second results on tests such as blood gases and chemistries, and beds which automatically weigh patients.

Within the units are four mini-units, each containing four beds, with a nursing station centrally located. Here nurses can closely supervise ventilatordependent patients and others whose conditions warrant careful monitoring. For patient treatment, some of the beds are furnished with hemo-dialysis equipment. There is also a separate suite equipped to fulfill the unique needs of the infectious disease patient.

Behind each of the 35 beds lie flexible equipment walls, enabling staff to customize the advanced medical equipment to each patient's needs. Within the next six months, a computerized medical records system will be installed, freeing medical and nursing staff from time-consuming saperwork so that they can devote even more of their day to direct patient care.

"We are extremely excited about the new unit," said Patrick Coonan, R.N., Assistant Director of Nursing, speaking on behalf of the nursing staff, "The state-of the-art technology and th physical Jay-out allow the nursin, and medical staff to more effectively maintain patient care on a minute-to-minute basis."

Smoking Off Job Not Reason To Be Fired

Most collers to Input do not believe that an employee should be denied employment for smoking off the job in answer to this question: "An Ohio company has disnissed an employee for smoking off the job because it affected its group health insurance rate. Does this violate civil rights?" Here are some of the answers: JUST BEGINNING

I think that what happened in Ohio is just the beginning of things to come where groups can band together and restrict the rights of others. If we have a universal health insurance this will be used to control the behavior of everyone. If a group gets together and says that you should not drink because it is going to increase the health insurance risk that all pay, then they may be able to control you. If a group complains that overweight people are going to the doctor more than other and running up health insurance rates then it will be grounds to tell everyone in the plan what they should eat or when to go to bed or get up. This is the picture that is emerging with the elitist groups who want to prescribe behavior for others. The seat belt law was the epitome of this. Wearing seat belts might be safer than not wearing them. There was no threat to freedom in mandating that they be in all cars, but the elitist mentality decided that because people were not listening to their advice that it should be made into law. And the reason for this meddling with freedom is because you might be in an accident and cost insurance companies more for your injuries. The next step will be health insurance as a control for everything. Even things that are not proved, but surmised to be injurious. Civil rights are already gone. K.G. A BIT EXTMEME

I think the Ohio company was a bit extreme. If the employee wanted to smoke on his own time, why fire him for doing that? It has first of all not been proven that everyone who smokes dies from it and secondly if it increased the health insurance then the employee should have had the right to pay the difference in the rate. G.H. NOT GULLTY

In the case cited, courts found in favor of the employee and I believe they should have. It is going a bit far and in a direction we might not want the country to go in forcing people to do what "Big Brother" says. Whether it is the government or an insurance company trying to replace the government an employee should have the right to make decisions on what he does off of the job. J.B. GOING TOO FAR

I am not a smoker and I think it would be great if everyone gave up smoking. But I think getting someone discharged for smoking off the job is going too far. Besides how did they know he was smoking unless he told them? K.S. SHOULD BE ALLOWED

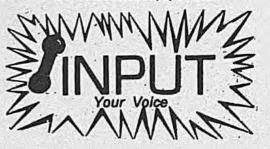

Too many people seem to get a high out of ordering other people to do as they say. Non-smokers and former smokers have a right to complain if they are being bothered by smokers but it appears that there is an old fashioned witch hunt with overtones of dictatorship coming to light on the smoking issue. The employee should be allowed to smoke off the job. K.G.

OBTAIN A WAIVER

I know very little about the Civil Rights law except that there was one enacted in 1964 and people have become more and more confused about their "rights" ever since. Today's "Question" is a case in point. Those who smoke feel they have every right to do so and couldn't care less about the damage to their health. Then, there are those like me who gave up the habit - really gave it up - and feel sorry for those addicts who can't see the light recognizing that they have every right to enjoy smoking even if they know it is injurious. And, as far as I am aware, they have that same right as long as they don't go counter to the rights of others who have the legal privilege to forbid smoking on their property or with detrimental effect to their affairs. When someone is hired, it is the perogative of the employer to set forth the acceptable conditions of employment and if the group insurance rates are based upon a prohibition against smokers as an undesirable risk, I believe they are within their rights in rejecting the application of smokers seeking employment. In the case described, the employee was engaged prior to the health insurance problem and I think that under those circumstances the employer should be able to obtain a waiver for the individual involved. PG.S. PAST ISSUE

NO

I am against filling any Supreme Court vacancy because he or she is from a minority. This is an excuse used to place people so that the greatest non-religious document can be watered down. The Constitution has kept us on the freedom path for over 200 years. We have managed to get justices that have helped keep it strong without catering to minorities or majorities. We need great minds with an understanding of the Constitution, its purpose. A.A.G.

Discovery! The Year Of The Lifetime Reader

By Don Pace 1991 has been designated by The Library of Congress - "The Year of the Lifetime Reader". According to a bulletin put out by the Library it is a unifying theme for supporting reading and literacy projects that benefit all age groups. Its purpose is to remind us of the joy and importance of reading as a lifetime activity.

importance of reasons as a incrime activity. As a bibliomaniac from way back I was not suprised to see a recent lead article in the New York Times Book Review entitled -"Bibliophilia: Still No Cure in Sight". So for those of you who "suffer" thusly, I offer the following tidbits: The oldest book in the world "Papyrus Prisse" is in the National Library in Paris. Do not attempt an inter-library loan

In 1660 the merchants of Amsterdam presented King Charles II of England with a giant Atlas of the World. The book, now in the British Museum, is five feet ten inches high by three feet six inches wide, and runs on wheels when opened. It is perhaps the biggest book in the world and one of the smallest is "Chemin de la Croix" whose pages measure a half inch high and a quarter inch wide. It is from the lilliputian library of M. George Salomon, a Nineteenth Century French collector who assembled 700 volumes, none of which exceeded two inches by one and one-third inches.

The first book printed in North America in an edition of 1700 copies was "The Whole Booke of Psalmes Faithfully Translated Into English Metne" in the year 1640. It is more commonly known as The Bay Psalm Book. Only 11 copies are known to exist with 9 of them defective. If you come across one in a flea market - Go For It!

In 1977 Americans bought more than 300,000 copies of "The Nothing Book", cloth bound and containing 192 blankpages. What I'd like to know, who are the 299,999 some odd other nuts? The oldest printed book in the world is Chinese. It is a Buddhist scripture. On it is written the date May 11, 868 and the printer's name -Wang Chieh. Come to think of it maybe that's why some fortune robbin tit so state. cookies tast so stale.

The first commercially successful mechanically printed book from moveable type is attributed to Johann Gutenberg and most of us are familiar with the Gutenberg Bible. For those of you who have never seen the real thing, go visit The Library of Congress where one of the "Gutes" is magnificently displayed. It is one of three complete vellum copies extant.

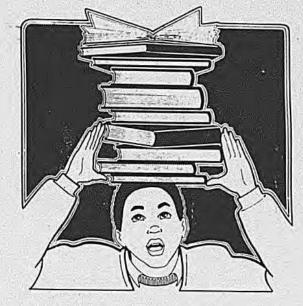

It should be noted tht long before Gutenberg's time, the Chinese and Koreans had been printing text and pictures cut on woodblocks. They had invented moveable types of porcelain and metal. (It is believed the Koreans invented the first moveable metal printing type in 1234.) But the languages were so complicated, and required so many different types, that they could not make practical use of the method. The idea was lost until Gutenberg applied it successfully to the alphabet.

People have used books in one form or another for more than 5,000 years. The most ancient form of writing was on bricks, stones, tiles and even oyster shells. Later ivory and bark and leaves of trees were used.

Paper gets its name from papyrus, a reed that the ancient Egyptians used which grew in great quantities along the banks of the Nile. It was cut into thin strips, crisscrossed and pressed together in layers and pounded flat. Then it was polished with ivory until soft. After this the pieces were pasted together to make on long strip on which the Egyptians drew their hieroglyphics and then the strip was rolled around a painted stick. As you read a papyrus roll, it was unrolled with around a painted stick. As you read a papyrus roll, it was unrolled with the right hand and rolled up with the left. The title of the roll and author appeared at the end. Being human, I'm sure these ancient authors made mistakes with their glyphs and I can see the errata note now · ''Please disregard previous papyrus''. At some point in time people tired of rolling and unrolling the long rolls so they folded single sheets of papyrus in half and tied or sewed them together along the fold. This kind of book is called a codex and remains the major form of book today. Of course papyrus gave way to parchment which was made of animal akins. These were washed, scraped and rubbed with pumice stone until smooth. Then they were powdered with white chalk. powdered with white chalk.

The Christian Monks were the book lovers of the Midle Ages and their books (referred to as illuminated manuscripts) are probably the most beautiful ever made. And I can think of no more unjust appellation than the term "The Dark Ages" to describe this period for without the efforts of these unselfish people, most of them toiling anonymously, we would not have much of the knowledge we have today.

Books printed from approximately 1150 to 1500 are called "'incunabula" from the Latin word for cradie. Today they are extremely valuable and affordable by only very wealthy muscums or very wealthy valuable and anordable of only very weating muscums or very weating private collectors of antiquarian books. Some people literally devour books. Howard Nolan, an undergraduate of Brasenose College. Oxford in 1966 devoured his in seven days. It took him that amount of time to eat 566 pages of a copy of the University Examination Statutes. (No doubt his prep school training was in catin').

Famous People on Books:

Thomas a Kempla: I have sought for happiness everywhere, but I have, found it nowhere except in a little corner with a little book. Francis Bacon: Some books are to be tasted, others to the swallowed.

and some few to be chewed and digested. (You can see how Howard Nolan liked his Bacon.)

Russell Baker: Nearly everybody who suffers from any education whatsoever has a half-read great book on his conscience - The Albatrosses of Literature Henry Ward Beechers Where is human nature so weak as in the Hilaire Belloc: When I am dead I hope it may be said: "His sins were scarlet but his books were read."

Jonge Lais Bonges: I have always come to life after coming to books Bishop Richard De Bury (Chancellor of England 12-87-1345): All the glory of the world would be burried in oblivion, unless God had provided mortals with the remedy of a book. Charles Dickens: There are books of which the backs and covers are the best parts

Lawrence Dunnell: "Her look spoke libraries."

Ralph Waldo Emerson: A man's library is a sort of harem, and tender readers have a great pudency in showing their books to a stranger. Aldous Huxley: The proper study of mankind is books.

Andre Maunola: In Literature is Love, we are astounded by what is chosen by others.

Wright Morris: Speaking of his good friend the archaeologist and anthropologist Lonen Eiseley - "He had one of the authentic, beautiful, touching, poignant, and absolutely mad passions for books. He made mine seem quite minor.'

Lord Samuel: A library is thought in cold storage. Henry David Thoreau: He said all the books he really loved had a certain grit, a certain feel, a tactile quality that hung on long after he'd forgotten the plot and the characters. Calvin Trillin: Most books today have a shelf life somewhere between milk and yogurt.

Mark Twain: The man who doesn't read good books has no advantage over the man who can't read them

Yvegney Zamyatin (a contemporary Russian writer): Man ceased to be an ape on the day the first book was written. There is nothing quite like a book. You can read a book anywhere you choose in just about any pose you choose. You can conveniently lug it to a beach, a bench or a barge. You can easily thip it, rip it or clipit. Scribble on it, dribble on it or quibble on it. It doesn't interrupt you at its most interesting moments which commericals for overall or undersamprotection. It can go in the bed or bath with you. It doesn't confine you to the room of its choice. But it can send you to distant lands and universes! It can help you understand yourself or the opposite sex (if that's possible). It can tickle your imagination or massage your mind. There is no form of entertainment as convenient, as obliging and as suited to your comfort as a book.

And as a closing note appropriate to this time of year, people who buy books on lawn care become good weeders. © 1991 by Don Pace

Anyone lucky enough to have a home with a garden finds usable living space greatly expanded in the summer That inviting green haven suddenly becomes an extra living or dining room. Since everyone loves a garden party, this is the time of year to take advantage of the extra area and gather a larger group of friends than you normally can ac-commodate comfortably.

Make certain that guests are aware that you will be outdoors some or all of the evening. If it's very hot, they will want to dress coolly. If it's a little chilly, they may want to wear a sweater. But if there is a change of plans at the last minute, no matter what, call and tell them so.

Summer is the time for less formal food. Which also means less fussy cooking. It is much easier to grill chickens than to bake them. Unlike beef roast, a cold beef salad can be prepared in advance. chickens than to bake them. With fruit coming into its own fla-vorful season, elaborate desserts are not needed, or even wanted. Also, as the temperature climbs, appetites usually wane somewhat, so the cook doesn't have to pre-pare the usual hefty portions.

Even with the great outdoors at your disposal, some crowd control is necessary, especially if the gar-den, like mine, is a patch, not pala-tial. Since there isn't enough gar-den space for a separate area for cocktails, begin the evening in-doors. This prevents the already-set tables from becoming messy as glasses are put down, ciga-rettes stamped out or chairs pulled out for sitting. A good strategy is to serve not the cocktails in the house, but the first course as well. Since people are standing, this should be something that can be eaten without any cutlery. Something to sip, of course, is the perfect answer.

One such solution is Pink Lady Soup, a chilled, low-calorie delight that is best if made the day before. Since this is an informal evening. it is not necessary to serve a saucer under the soup cup or mug. If you worry about your rug, however, it is wise to use saucers.

Pine nuts make these recipes special

A cheesecake is not a cake but a pie. Plum pudding is more like a cake than a pudding. And pine nuts aren't nuts — they're the seeds of certain varieties of pinecones.

Pine nuts — or seeds — have been cultivated all over the Mediterranew, at least since classical times. In fact, with all the volcano activity going on recently, it's interesting to note that archaeologists have found pine nuts preserved among household items in the ruins of Pompeli, buried when Mount Vesuvius erupted in A.D. 79.

Still in whoe use in Mediterrangen and Middle Eastern cuisines, seeds here come from a variety of tree known as the Pinus pinea. Italians know them as pignolis or "pinocchios."

Pignolis (also spelled pignolias) are long and slender, yellow-white and fleshy, and the flavor resembles that of almonds. They're a good source of protein and quite high in fat (about 24 percent protein and 51 percent fat) and provide minerals such as calcium, phosphorus and potassium.

Of the world's hundred or so varieties of pine trees, about a dozen produce eating-quality seeds. One variety, Pinus monophylla, has long been an important zource of nutrition in the diets of Southwest Native Americans. These seeds, known by their Spanish name, pinon nuts, are lower in protein and even higher in fat than European pignolis. Archaeologists have found evidence of pinons in the firepits at Gatecliff shelter ir Nevada and in caves of northwest Utah, evidence dating back thousands of years.

The tree itself is important to Native American folklore, too; it's a tradition for Hopis to smear a bit of the goccy pine sap on their foreheads before going outside in the month of December — to ward off spells.

Pine nuts have become a wellknown culinary garnish in the United States in recent years, due in large part to the popularity of pesto, that wonderful green stuff made from a base of crushed fresh basil leaves, pine nuts, garlic, olive oil and Parmesan cheese. Mixed with steaming, just-cooked pasta, the flavor is divine.

Toasted pine nuts make tasty additions to casseroles, salads, pasta and vegetable dishes, and pilaf. They're also used in making desserts, candies (like halvah), cookies (there's even a pine nut macaroon) — or sprinkle toasted pine nuts over ice cream for a contemporary gournet touch.

Because they're so high in fat (mcstly "good" fat of the monoand polyunsaturated variety), raw pine nuts should not be stored for long periods of time or they could go rancid. For long storage, place in a tightly closed container and freeze. This way, you can keep them on hand and use raw, or toast a portion at a time in your microwave (see tip below) as needed.

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.)

MICRO-TIP OF THE WEEK To toast pine nuts in your microwave, spread ¼ cup raw pine nuts in a single layer on a shallow microwave-safe plate. Microwave on HIGH (100 percent power) setting two to three minutes, stirring every minute, until golden. To toast ½ pound (about 1 cup), follow same instructions, microwaving for eight to 10 minutes (sit twice during cooking time).

> CREAMED PEAS WITH SMOKED HAM AND PINE NUTS

- 2 (10-ounce) packages frozen peas, or 21/2 cups fresh
- peas 7 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 cup half-and-half
- ¼ cup finely chopped onion 2 tablespoons minced fresh
- parsley 4 pound thinly sliced smoked ham, julienne sliced
- Dash white pepper 1 generous tablespoon toast-

1 generous tablespoon toasted pine nuts

Yields 6 to 8 servings. Preparation time: 10 minutes. Cooking time: 8 to 11 minutes. Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Rinse fresh or frozen peas in colander, drain well and set aside.

Combine cream, half-and-half and onions in 2-quart microwavesafe casserole. Microwave 4 to 6 minutes, stirring every 2 minutes, until cream bubbles around edges. Stir in peas and parsley and microwave 4 to 5 minutes, or until peas are tender. Fold in ham and pepper, and garnish with pine

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abreham, Ph.D.

Dr. Abraham: When I met this boy, he was just about everything I liked. He was thoughtful, sweet and so nice to be with.

Those first few months we talked about so much, like what's going on at school, which college we might go to, a movie to choose, what we thought about it, our families and how good or bad our parents are to us. It was all a lot of fun. We laughed with and at each other, and that was wonderful.

Then he seemed to change. Everything is different now. We don't talk about any of those things. Whatever I start to talk about he twists around, and it always comes out related to sex.

If I mention some kids we know at school, he wonders with whom they go to bed. A new carryout boy at our supermarket — "How do you think he would be in the sack?" A new movie — "What kind of and how much sex is in it?"

It is always like that these days, although it kind of sneaked up on me. He isn't at all the boy I

He isn't at all the boy I knew and liked so much. I think it's time for a change on my part, especially before the hints become more than that.

What do you think I should do? - Worried Worried: It sounds as though you have already made a decision. Your common sense tells you that because the relationship has changed so drastichally, it no longer is what you want. You might tell him that it's just not the same and try to explain to him how the past and present differ from each other. It seems best for you to break away, maybe for a few months, maybe longer. Time will tell.

Dr. Abraham: I'm a girl, 14 years old, who is crazy about hats. I don't wear them all the time, but I do sometimes when no one else does. That bothers my boyfriend, so he tells me to stop it. He says that he doesn't want me to look so different. It embarrasses him.

I think that is stupid, and I told him so. "I am what I am," I said to him. So now he is sulking around.

he is sulking around. But I like him anyway, so what should I do? — Hat Happy Hat Happy: Because you

Hat Happy: Because you said that you don't always wear them, can you possibly cut back somewhat on times when you are with him? At least you might consider a compromise like that which may please him

I like your "I am what I am" point of view because It possibly indicates your being an individual who has creative ideas that are important to you and worth preserving. However, some flexibility and give-and-take can often help our lives move along more smoothly and happily.

Dr. Abraham: I think I'm a very levelheaded person, but my best friend tells me that I've become very moody lately. I don't think I am. In fact, I've noticed that she all of a sudden loses her temper pretity often, although she practically never did before. But I still like her, and at other times she is a fun person.

We are both 15-year-old girls, and I need to know how to handle this or what to say to her when she says I'm moody. — Not That Way

Not That Way: In a situation like the one you've described, it is probably a good idea to ignore her labeling of you as moody and also do your best to ignore her apparent moodiness. She will probably get over it without your input.

It isn't unusual for teens to pass through a stage of emotional ups and downs. As a matter of fact, many adults also do.

An important point to keep in mind is your friendship, which you seem to enjoy, and attempt to overlook her comments as well as her attitude changes.

Dr. Abraham: It seems backward to me, but the only time my girl will sit close to me is when other kids are around. I'd think that closeness would come more often when we're alone, but it isn't so with her and me.

I don't have any idea why she is like that. Do you? — Closeness Wanted Closeness Wanted: The public closeness may be because she wants to be sure that no one steals you away, she is shy or she wants to show off that she has you as a boyfriend.

The non-closeness in privacy could be due to pressure you've put on her, a setting you're in when family is around or uncomfortable furniture for being near each other.

Of course, other reasons might be behind this public/private issue. Why don't you ask her to help solve the mystery for you?

Guilt-free picnic

By Linda Susan Dudley

Americans love picnics. Picnics around the fire ring at the beach. Picnics on a splintery wooden table in a remote campground. Even a picnic at a concrete rest stop as cars whiz past on the interstate continues one of our food traditions.

We love them so much we even joke about the built-in nuisances . ash on the hot dogs ... blackened marshmallows ... and a colony of ants in the picnic basket.

And over the years, those who eat outdoors have developed standard picnic menus. (When was the last time you heard any picnicbound diners say: "You bring the almond-studded brie and we'll pack the frozen peach mousse with minted raspberry sauce?")

Instead, at summer picnics we usually expect hot dogs or burgers with a little (or a lot) of each of the following: baked beans, mayolaced coleslaw, potato salad, mac-aroni salad. And - what amounts to a nod to health - a slice of cold watermelon

Pile all this food on a paper plate and what do you have? Well, a lot of calories, fat and sodium with your meal.

For example, snack on potato chips and dip and then go to the table and select a hot dog on a bun and small, yes small, servings of pork 'n' beans and potato salad. For dessert have a brownie and wash it all down with a soft drink. You'll have consumed in only one meal 1,103 calories, 50 grams of fat and a whopping 2,384 milligrams of sodium. That's more than a whole day's allotment for some people and you didn't even have seconds.

If this has thrown you into menu shock, the registered dietitians at Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation, La Jolla, Calif., have come to your rescue.

You can have your picnic and maintain your health as well. And it's possible with some good eating, not rice cakes and organic broth.

Registered dietitian Janice Shigehara has devised a picnic menu with less than half the calories, half the fat and about a third of the sodium of a traditional picnic plate.

In our health-conscious picnic you'll get grilled chicken, baked corn tortilla chips with a tofubased spinach dip, a serving of cofeslaw, a meal made hearty with an herbed roll and even a brownie. Your refreshment is sparkling sun tea.

Nutrition information for this plate: 555 calories, 25 grams of fat and 820 milligrams of sodium. And none of this is going to bomb your eating plan, even if you're dieting.

The average American diet today shows some unhealthy patterns," said Shigehara. "It is low in complex carbohydrates and high in sugars, low in protein from veg-etable sources and high in animal protein and high in fat and cholesterol.

"These dietary habits, together with physical inactivity, contribute to many of the country's major health problems."

Scripps' dietitians, who spend their days counseling patients about nutrition, believe most diners don't know that 1/2 cup of traditional refried beans contains at least 15 grams of fat, 550 milligrams of sodium and 255 calories. Add to that 1 ounce of corn chips (that's only a handful or less) and you add 160 more calories and 9 more grams of fat.

With a little planning and a few recipe modifications one can save significant calories, fat and sodium and still come away with a very satisfying picnic barbecue,' added Shigehara.

Shigehara offered the following recipes created by dietitians from the Scripps' nutrition program for healthy eating.

Start African violets from leaf cuttings

Today I have some timely green thoughts to share with my gardening friends.

INCREASING AFRICAN VIOLETS

This is a good time to make new African violet plants from old ones, as leaf cuttings root easily in the presence of summer's abundant natural warmth.

Choose healthy middle-aged leaves, not young ones from the center of the parent plant or old ones from around the outside edge.

Remove the leaves from the plant with a gentle sideways jerk so that no stub is left behind to decay. Then, with a sharp knife, cut the stalk about 1¼ inches from the base of the leaf blade. Insert the leaf cuttings upright into a sterile, lightweight planting mix so that the bottom of the leaf is just touching the mix. I prefer to insert the cuttings singly into small pots, but some people have great success putting a pair of leaves in a pot back to back so that they can support one another.

that they can support one another. Water the pot or pots using tepid water, and set them in a clear plastic bag held above the leaves with short sticks or wire. This will keep the air moist around the cuttings. Place them out of direct Place them out of direct sunshine, and watch for condensation dripping on the leaves. In this case punch some holes in the plastic bag.

Be patient, and don't let the planting mix dry out. A cluster of plantlets should appear at the base of the stems in a month or two.

RASPBERRIES

About as close to bacchanalian living as I get in July is to whip up a devil-may-care cheesecake and smoother it with a fresh raspberry topping.

The berry mixture is quickly made by cooking at the bubbling point about 2 cups of raspberries in a little water, sweetening the blend with honey or sugar, and thickening it with about 2 teaspoons of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water. A dab of butter added after the topping has thickened makes it smooth and cupful of fresh berries gives it character. Cool the mixture a bit before spreading it on the cheesecake.

Raspberry vinegar is a useful culinary concoction to make this month. Mixed with yogurt this flavored vinegar becomes a devastating dressing for a fruit salad. Add honey to a little raspberry vinegar to brush on to chicken while it roasts. To make raspberry vinegar, pour red wine vinegar to just cover raspberries in the bottom of a sterilized quart bottle. Cover tightly and strain to use or store after seven days.

Do not use metal jars covers when making or storing vinegars, unless you place two layers of plastic wrap between jar and lid. One final treat that I look for-

One final treat that I look forward to in July is raspberry t shortcake with berries and whipped cream layered over slices of my favorite cake for this purpose, a fine-textured yogurt cake.

To make this cake, cream 1 cup butter with 1 cup (or less) sugar and beat in the peel and juice of 1 lemon and 6 egg yolks. Add 3 cups flour blended with 1 teaspoon baking soda and ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar, 1 cup yogurt and 6 egg whites beaten stiff. Bake in a greased angel food cake tin for one hour at 350 degrees Fahrenheit or until the cake tests done.

LILIES AS?

CUT FLOWERS

As you gather lilies from the garden for cut flowers, leave a greater length of stalk on the plant than the portion you remove. This will enable the plant to continue working and producing food enough for the bulb to bloom well next summer.

Pick lilies early in the morning when the flowers are freshly opened.

Stand the stems in a vase or pail of clean warm water in a cool place for a few hours to allow them to absorb as much water as possible. Then recut the stems under water and strip off any foliage that would be in the vase water when you arrange them. Use cut flower food, but do not exceed the recommended dosage.

One thing to watch for in cut flower lilies is staining from the pollen. If pollen falls on fabric furniture covers or clothing, remove as much of it as possible using light, brisk motions with a dry brush. Launder to remove any remaining stain. Apparently placing a laundered item outside in direct sunlight causes any remaining vestiges of pollen staining to vanish. Some people prevent pollen stains by removing the flowers' anthers before bringing them into the house.

Dad with bitter mouth needs counseling

Q. There is no other way to say it — my husband has a very fresh mouth.

If he can say something to burt someone, his sarcastic, biting tongue gets the best of him.

I'm used to it by now (after all, we've been married for 15 years), so I can ignore him, but I don't like to have my kids subjected to this bitter mouth of his. They are only 9 and 11 years old (both boys), and I am sure they are beginning to feel that the way be talks to them is "normal." How wrong they are!

It is a good man in many ways (for example, his earnings and dependability, and the chores he does around the house), but this habit of his is pretty terrible.

Do you think there is anything I can do about it?

A. It is possible that the "habit" (as you referred to it) is so deeply ingrained that even if he tried on his own to change or control it, it may be just too difficult for him. You didn't mention it, but perhaps you've attempted to help him; if so, you know how ineffective your effort probably has been.

A professional person with famlly counseling skills could be the proper individual with whom to consult. People in the guidance or counseling department of your school district may be able to steer you in that direction.

I do have a reading recommendation for your husband: "P.E.T. Parent Effectiveness Training" by Thomas Gordon. However, the counseling route may also be well worth considering.

Q. I read somewhere that the chance of children getting measles is going up these days.

Because that is a sickness I've always dreaded for our children, tell me if you have beard or read something recently related to this subject. And tell me soon, please.

A. One research study that I've seen is about two inner-city hospital children's emergency rooms where unvaccinated children come together in the waiting rooms.

Because measles is quite contagious parents should avoid places where their children may be with others who haven't been vaccinated, and therefore could be the source of this problem.

You might ask your physician whether he or she has or can get a copy of the January 1991 issue of Pediatrics magazine in which this study was published, and perhaps also knows of other research in this area that can be shared with you.

SOMETHING FOR

EVERYONE

Q. Is there anything on television that you know of that would help me with the kids in my classroom in the fall as well as with my own two girls (8 and nearly 10 years old), related to their getting some dramatic skills? My interest is much stronger than my capabilities in such skills, and that's why I need help.

I'd like to use play-acting to get across materials in history and geography. I think it might be enjoyable, and they'll be learning at the same time.

A. In an April 15, 1991, report of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting I found what might be useful to you.

It is a series of 15-minute programs broadcast by Kentucky Educational Television (KET), which teaches drama skills to children in third, fourth and fifth grades. The series is called "Imagine That."

A professional actor leads the students through exercises or theater games that teach them improvisation and acting techniques. Tapes of the programs can be purchased.

It could be interesting and fun, as well as educational for the youngsters.

You can get more information from Ellen Ballard of KET instructional television; telephone (606) 233-3000.

Tony the Tiger & friends are sweet on kids

By Clark Brooks

Tony the Tiger must be laughing all the way to the blood bank. He has been peddling sugar-coated cornflakes for more than a generation, causing heart disease, obesity and tooth decay, if nutritionists are correct. And he's still going "Grrreat guns." Meanwhile, Froot Loops and

Meanwhile, Froot Loops and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles cereals have gotten most of the bad press following a recent study that found children's TV shows are pushing too many sugary cereals and snack foods.

"This issue is not a new one," says Patrick Farrell, spokesman for Ralston Purina Co.

The Washington-based Center for Science in the Public Interest, which did the recent study, has asked the networks to air messages promoting a healthy diet to counter the cereal commercials.

That might be helpful, says University of California at San Diego nutritionist Joan Rupp, but parents who care about their children's health must stand up to the cartoon pitchmen that have made sugar the morning staple of the all-American kid.

"People are basically giving their children cookies for breakfast," Rupp says.

She's not kidding. Check the main ingredients.

Ninja Turtles cereal: rice, marshmallows, sugar, brown sugar, salt, honey and malt syrup. Calories: 110 per ounce.

Chips Ahoy cookies: enriched wheat flour, chocolate drops, soybean oil, sugar, brown sugar, corn syrup, baking soda and salt. Calories: 100 per ounce.

Honey Smacks cereal: sugar, wheat, corn syrup, honey, soybean oil and salt. Calories: 110 per ounce.

Oreo cookies: sugar, enriched whea3 flour, soybean oil and lard, cocoâ, corn syrup, corn flour, whey, chocolate, baking soda and salt. Calories: 100 per ounce.

The main difference is that the cereals have added vitamins and minerals. Farrell, whose company makes Ninja Turtles cereal, among others, says that's very significant. Rupp isn't so sure.

A vitamin tablet and milk with the Oreos is roughly the same breakfast, she says.

But that's not what she recommends, of course. She'd rather see kids eating cereals with little or no added sugar, which is what she feeds her three children.

"They want the sweet stuff, but I won't let them eat it," Rupp says. "If you can't get your kids off the sugary cereals completely, mix it half and half with healthy cereals." Look for cereals with no sugar, or with sugar or other sweeteners far down in the ingredients, she says, and at least 3 to 5 grams of fiber.

Cereal companies must list the main ingredient first and the others in descending order. But they aren't required to give percentages, and that can cause confusion.

"Sometimes," Rupp says, "they hide the sugar by using a variety of sweeteners."

The Ninja Turtles cereal, for example, lists rice as the main ingredient. But it's likely that the marshmallows, sugar, brown sugar and honey carry about the same weight, Rupp says.

Farrell denies any trickery. Each of the sweeteners has a different flavor, he says, and is necessary to achieve a certain taste.

"All of our cereals are grainbased products enriched with vitamins and minerals," he says. "The fact that they are sweetened does not make them bad."

Most kids pour table sugar on unsweetened cereals, Farrell says. That's true, says Rupp, but only because parents let them.

"You can put bananas or raisins on it instead," she says, "or fresh peaches."

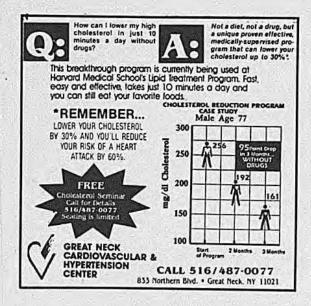

Ninja Turtles cereal contains 11 grams of sugar per ounce, including the marshmallows and honey, which is the same as Tony the Tiger's Kelloggs Frosted Flakes.

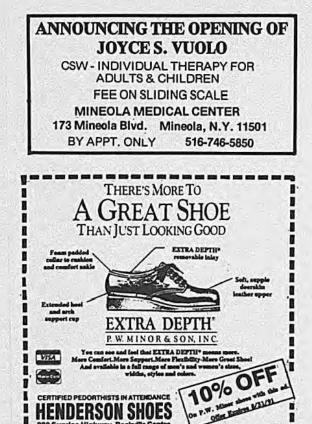

Some pre-sweetened cereals have up to 16 grams of sugar per ounce. There are about 28 grams in an ounce.

THE HEALTHY GOURMET

Desserts without guilt

By Kit Spedaker

With the publication of Sally Schneider's "The Art of Low-Calorie Cooking" (Stewart, Tabori and Chang), · low-everything cooking came out of the kitchen and onto the coffee table. The book is big. glossy, hardcover and rapturous. It takes our kind of eating to the heights it deserves.

The book took me by the hand and walked me to the kitchen before I'd gone beyond "Hors d'Oeuvres, Appetizers, Salads.' There are even nutritional values. Alas, that's this volume's only tiny fault. Schneider only put in calories, fat, protein and carbohydrates. Cholesterol and sodium are omitted, and cholesterol is what most of us look for first.

Never mind. All the recipes are new and wonderful. Here, at last, is a creme brulee without guilt, a raspberry gratin and, best of all, maybe, a functional pineapple upside-down cake.

- GRATIN OF RASPBERRIES cup fresh raspberries or blackberries
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons plus 2 teaspoons dark brown sugar

Yields 2 servings. Each has about 220 calories, 12 grams fat, 25 milligrams cholesterol, 25 milligrams sodium.

Preheat broiler. Arrange 1/2 cup berries in each of two 51/2-inch gratin dishes or 4-inch souffle dishes. Stir sour cream to liquefy it slightly and spread ¼ cup over each dish of berries, leaving a ring of berries uncovered around edge of dish. Sieve 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon brown sugar over each, mounding it slightly in middle. Place dishes under broiler about 3 to 4 inches from heat source. Broil just until sugar bubbles and begins to caramelize, but do not let it burn. Serve at once.

- PINEAPPLE UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE
- 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon
- dark brown sugar 4 slices (%-inch thick) of fresh pineapple or 6 unsweetened canned slices, drained
- 3 large eggs at room temperature Pinch of salt (optional)
- 11/2 teaspoons vanilla ex-
- tract 1 teaspoon grated orange Test
- 1/2 cup all-purpose flour

Yields 6 servings. Each has about 195 calories, 5 grams fat, 102 milligrams cholesterol and 352 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 375 F. In 9-inch ovenproof skillet, melt butter with 31/2 tablespoons of brown sugar over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until bubbly, about 3 minutes. Arrange 3 fresh pineapple slices in skillet (or 5 canned), overlapping if necessary. Cut remain-ing slice in thirds. Place pieces in gaps between whole slices.

Cook pineapple over moderate heat until juices are released, about 5 minutes. Continue cooking, turning several times, until fruit is tender and juices have reduced to syrupy brown caramel, about 10 minutes longer. Remove skillet from heat.

In medium mixer bowl, beat eggs with remaining 51/2 tablespoons brown sugar and salt (if used) at high speed until tripled in volume, 7 to 10 minutes. Drizzle in vanilla, add orange zest and continue beating until well-combined, about 1 minute longer. Sift half the flour over batter. Fold in until just combined. Then sift on and fold in remaining flour. Pour batter over pineapple slices in skillet.

Place in oven and bake for 18 minutes or until cake is golden brown and a skewer inserted in center, comes out clean. Let cake cool on rack for 5 to 7 minutes. Run knife around edge to loosen cake, then invert onto serving plate. With rubber spatula scrape any caramel that may be clinging to bottom of skillet and drizzle over top.

Q. I need some advice on the repair or redo of the roof on a 25year-old home we purchased approximately a year ago.

The roof is asphalt shingles, which has had previous repairs. Can we continue to repair the existing roof, or should we seriously consider a complete redo?

If we need a new roof, what are the best products available today for durability? Is putting a new roof over the old a good idea?

We will have to hire the work done, so I would like some advice on what type of action we should take before we contact a handyman to do the work.

A. All of your questions are good ones when considering the proper maintenance of your home and its roofing. The life of a roof depends on a number of factors. One of the most important is climate conditions exposure to sun, wind, rain, sleet and snow - which cause deterioration

Quality of the installation and original materials along with proper design and maintenance also determine the lifespan of a roof. The predicted life expectan-cy of asphalt shingles is from 15 to 30 years.

Since your roof is nearing the maximum age of normal wear, it is important that you seriously consider a new roof, particularly if continued repair seems likely. To keep repairing a seriously de-teriorating roof will cause more trouble and expense in the long run.

If the current roofing is in good enough shape, you can have a new roof installed over the existing asphalt shingles. This can be done once, but not a second time. The feasibility of this depends on condition of your current roof.

You need to have a professional thoroughly examine your roof and make recommendations. Trained people will look for overall deterioration as well as those hidden problems, such as moisture that can work its way underneath shingles and cause wood rot and mildew problems in the basic structure of your home.

It is best to have three or four roofing specialists look at your roof and make recommendations so you can compare estimates. There are some important factors other than cost to consider.

The type of materials you select for your new roof is important. Asphalt shingles cover nearly 80 percent of the roofs nationwide, but there are different types and grades of the two types available -- "organic" and "fiberglass."

They come in a variety of weights, styles and thicknes and with different fire ratings. Other considerations can be wood shingles or shakes, tile, slate, metal and a number of newer "look-alike" roofing tiles that imi-tate the real thing (such as slate or tile) for less money.

Each roofing material comes in different grades with corresponding prices. For example, the shingle range runs all the way from economy-grade to top-of-the-line "laminated" or "architectural" products.

You need to look at the full product range and make a choice based on your budget and needs.

Just as important as the roofing materials you use is the skill and craftsmanship of the contractor you select to do the work. Pick a contractor who is committed to quality work. The extra cost will come back to you in your new roof's durability and appearance. Some important things to look for in a contractor:

• Is the contractor well-estab-lished at a permanent business address?

. Get a list of references and check previous customers for quality of workmanship, timeliness of job completion, on-site su-pervision, adherence to contract specifications and cost agreements.

· Insist on a written proposal and a warranty covering both materials and workmanship.

· Check with your local Better Business Bureau to see if this contractor has had any complaints.

. Be sure that the contractor can provide proof of insurance including worker compensation coverage.

. Also check to see if your state has licensing requirements and that the prospective contractor meets these requirements.

To help consumers make the best roofing decisions, The National Roofing Contractors Association provides some excellent materials free. You can call toll-free 1-800-USA-ROOF. Particularly helpful is their pamphlet "Buying a New Roof ... and Getting Your Money's Worth." The association will also provide you with a list of NRCA-member contractors in your area.

Q. Our living room is long and narrow (26x13 feet) with a fireplace at one end. I've arranged the furniture every way I can think of and it still looks and feels empty. I have a large sofa and four upholstered chairs that go together. Tell me how to arrange them. - A.C.

A. The idea is to break up the long, narrow space into conversation-size chunks, so that both ends of the room have a focal point, a cohesiveness that allows for cozy conversation - no shouting - and equal visual weight.

There are several ways to accomplish this.

Four chairs, each with a table within easy reach, create one functional seating area, which is anchored, visually, by the fireplace. The large round, skirted table (left) and the tall secretary/chair arrangement (right) further the psychological division of the room into two parts.

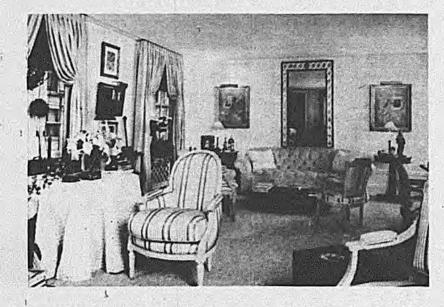

The far section is arranged around the large, dominant mirror hung on the wall behind the sofa. Two more French chairs face into this seating arrangement, defining space without closing it off.

Another option for a long, narrow room would be back-to-back love seats or sofas in the center, perhaps with a round or narrow table between them. Then you would add at least two chairs and a coffee table to each "mirror image" arrangement.

You also could create two highly different activity areas, say, with sofa and chairs at one end and a piano, game table or enter-tainment center occupying the other.

SITTING ROOM - In his own New York sitting room, designer Mark Hampton uses matching chair upholstery to create two separate seating areas.

bottoms of the feet: "Royal Doulton, Made in England, ch. Goworth Victor." It is 8 inches tall.

A. This figurine of a famous dalmatian, Champion Goworth Victor, was made in the early 1900s. It is a choice collectible and would probably sell for $425 to $450.

Q. The enclosed mark is on a platter with an Oriental style scene. Is is 15 inches by 10 inches and is slightly crazed.

Can you tell me anything about it? I would like to know especially when it was made and its value.

A. This was made by Charles Meigh & Son in Hanley, England, during the mid-19th century; "Java" is the name of the pattern. In good condition, it would sell for $75 to $85.

Q. We have acquired a stoneware bottle or jug imprinted "The Adaptable Hot Water Bottle and Bed Warmer."

Have you any idea when this was made and what it might be worth?

A. Hot water bed warmers have been used for over 200 years, but this one was probably made about 1900.

An antique shop would be likely to price it in the $35 to $45 range. Q. My Sevres cup and saucer bas the interlaced "L" mark enclosing "EE."

I understand this mark indicates that these were made in 1782. Please evaluate them for me.

A. Assuming that your cup and saucer are authentic, they should be worth $800 to $900.

If you have never had these authenticated by a museum, you should, because many of the porcelain pieces bearing Sevres marks are fakes.

Q. When was my Royal Doulton pitcher and bowl set made and what is its value?

The pitcher is 10 inches high and the bowl is 16 inches in diameter. They are decorated with lavender lilacs with green leaves.

A. Your pitcher and bowl set was made in England during the early 1900s and would probably sell for $250 to $275.

Q. What can you tell me about a sterling silver Zippo cigarette lighter marked "Tiffany & Co."? It is in mint condition.

A. The famous Fifth Avenue jewelry store had a quantity of Zippo lighters made in sterling silver and inscribed with their name during the mid-20th century.

This would probably sell for $100 to $110.

UNIOR PAGES

A. Tumors of the mammary glands are very common in dogs. Approximately 25 percent of all tumors seen in female dogs are mammary gland tumors.

Mammary gland tumors occur most frequently in bitches that have not been spayed and that are greater than 6 years of age. Spay-ing a dog prior to its first heat period dramatically reduces the risk of mammary gland tumors. It has been estimated that bitches spayed prior to any repro-ductive activity have 200 times less chance of developing mammary gland cancer than intact female dogs. Spaying dogs following one heat period reduces the risk approximately 12 times. Female dogs that are spayed after reaching maturity have the same Our dog in not spayed. Would risk of developing mammary

Mammary gland tumors are Mammary gland tumors are most often reported in cocker spaniels, daschsbunds, German shorthaired pointers, German shepherds, poodles, beagles, Labrador retrievers and Pekingese. The Chihuahua has the lowest reported breed incidence of mammary gland tumors.

Mammary gland tumors, even the smallest circumscribed type, should be removed surgically as soon as they are detected. The longer the tumor is allowed to remain, the greater is the danger of secondary growths or spread of the tumor to the lungs or abdominal organs. Any dog with lumps within the mammary glands should be examined promptly by a veterinarian.

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Recently we went to a new kind of amusement park where all of the rides involve water. There were water slides in which you ride in rafts and others in which you slide down a long hill full of water wearing just your bathing suit. Another part of the amusement park had a long river with different kinds of waterfalls, sprays, and a wave pool. It was lots of fun, and a great way to cool off. When you get tired, there's even a beach to stretch out on and a snack bar for lunch. Have any of you gone to a park like this? Your friend.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits are reduced for early retirement

By William M. Acosta

Q. I will soon reach age 62 and plan to retire at that time. How much are my benefits reduced? - G.C. A. Benefits are reduced for each month you are retired before age 65, up to maximum of 20 percent for people who retire the month they reach 62. When an individual retires at age 62, it will generally take at least 15 years before reaching the point where your reduced benefits will approximate what you would have received if you had retired at age 65.

Q. What rights do divorced spouses have to Social Security benefits on their ex-spouse's Social Security earnings? - B.J.

A. A divorced spouse can get benefits on a former husband's or wife's Social Security record if the marriage lasted at least 10 years. The divorced spouse must be 62 or older and unmarried. The worker also must be at least 62.

If they have been divorced two years or more, he or she can get benefits even if the worker is not retired.

A change in the Social Security law that went into effect in January 1991 eliminated the two-year wait for people who were already getting spouse's benefits at the time of their divorce.

Q. Do all workers pay into Social Security? - J.C.

A. Nearly every individual in paid employment and self-employment is covered under Social Security.

In 1991, about 133.9 million peo-ple will work in jobs covered by Social Security. This includes some 2.4 million state and local employees who are not under a retirement system but will be covered by Social Security after July 1, 1991

This coverage was mandated by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

Q. I have heard of a Government Pension Offset. Who does it affect? - M.Z.

A. It affects people who get a federal, state, or local government pension based on work not covered by Social Security and who might be eligible for a spouse's, widow's or widower's benefit from Social Security. Two-thirds of your pension will be offset against your Social Security benefits as a spouse.
