Town Board Night Meeting April 28

As part of its ongoing efforts to make government more accessible to residents, the Oyster Bay Town Board has scheduled a night meeting for Tuesday, April 28, at 7:30 p.m., Town Councilman Douglas J. Hynes announced.

"Over the years, my fellow Town Board members and I have heard residents suggest that the Town Board hold its meetings at night rather during the day, the idea being that more residents would be able to participate if meetings were held in the evening," Councilman Hynes stated. "The night meeting on April 28th is the first of several we will hold to determine if public response warrants the town Board scheduling more general meetings at night."

Councilman Hynes noted that the Town Board has always had a policy of scheduling night meetings on a specific matter if petitioned by area residents.

The Councilman added that the 10 a.m. meeting previously scheduled for April 28 is cancelled.

Special Use Permit In Plainview

A public hearing has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 7, to consider the application of Giffords Energy Corporation, Sid Tool Company, Inc., and Esco Management Corporation for a special use permit in Plainview, according to Town Councilman Leonard B. Symons.

"The applicants are requesting a special use permit for an existing facility located in an 'H' industrial district (light industry) in Plainview," Councilman Symons explained. "They are proposing that the facility be used to house offices and a public garage and that they be permitted to operate a heating, ventilation and fuel oil business on the property that is located at the corner of the intersection of Executive Drive and Ames Court."

The meeting is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the hearing room of Town Hall East, Audrey Avenue, Oyster Bay.

HBA Holds Late Registration

HBA will hold a late registration for those who have not yet registered for the 1992 season. It will be held on Saturday, March 7, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at Levittown Hall.

The fee is $58 for one child, and $70 for a family. A $20 deposit for uniforms is required at the time of registration. You may write a check dated July 1, 1992, which will be returned to you at the end of the season when uniforms are collected.

If your child has never played with HBA, a birth certificate is necessary for proof of age. A girl or boy must be six years of age or older by July 31 in order to be eligible to play. If you intend to register your children please remember this date, as we cannot guarantee placement after March 7 for the 1992 season.

For any further questions or information needed, contact Rose Marie Rodriguez at 822-6149, or Carol Baglieri at 681-6144 after 5 p.m.

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to announce my candidacy for re-election to the Hicksville Library Board of Trustees in order to continue to devote my efforts, as in the past, for a better library service to the community.

Unfortunately the legal notice and press release in your last issue did not indicate that it was my seat that was becoming vacant.

Books Across America School

John F. Kennedy Middle School in Bethpage is one of 100 schools in New York State to have been selected to participate in a project called "Books Across America." The aim of the program is to have the students read enough pages to reach across a map of the United States to its partner school in California. The students keep track of their reading progress by moving a marker across a huge map that is located in the school.

"Books Across America" began in January, and will conclude in April with a gold medal award ceremony for the students who reach California. Along the way the students earn reading incentive awards that have been purchased through funds provided by the John F. Kennedy Middle School PTA and the Women's Club of Bethpage.

Parents are involved with "Books Across America" as they are aware of the books that their children are reading.

The students are proud to be a link in "Books Across America," as we reach to the goal of being a nation of readers.

Jottings From Yesteryear

By Bill Clark

One time the Playhouse, now the Hicksville Theater, had direction markers painted on the roof for local pilots. The local Williams Hardware Store loaned specialty tools for the job you were doing at home, without charge, until years later someone would take advantage and keep the tools or move. When the town was small, Holden's Stationery would put the sample card aside, if the person was a local birthday or anniversary, so that the party would not get duplicates. But if you wanted it, you could buy the same.

The State unemployment office in the 30's was located where Botto (Ace) Hardware is located now. When the little white church on Broadway was the Methodist Church, how well I remember one Saturday night waiting for the young group to come out. Those days your folks bought your pants and they varied in size. Me, I had to show off and leap the fire hydrant in front of the church, not knowing the new pants hung lower, so I caught them on the top of the hydrant. It took me several feet to regain my balance.

Looking for some older family photos, I realize how many are not dated or the names put on the back, because we think we know them all. Then suddenly you realize there is no one around to ask who is the person next to Aunt Tillie. Also your children or grandchildren will not know in future years. Take these rainy short daylight days to go over them before you start enjoying the outdoor days.

Upper Photo: Looking East on Old Country Rd. in 1925 (approx.) showing Kueken Greenhouses (later Shepard's Stimples). Also Iggulders family. This property from house to street in now two lanes of widened road.

Jewish History At Jericho

The Jericho Public Library is having historian Arthur Coppel present two Jewish history lectures on successive Mondays at 10 a.m. "Looking at Jewish History Through English Literature" is the topic for the first lecture on March 9 and "The Woman in Jewish History" is the second lecture on March 16. An Afternoon Of Song At Library

Charles Huddleston, a baritone from Little Rock, Arkansas, is one of the country's most exciting talents and he will be performing at the Jericho Public Library on Sunday, March 8, at 3 p.m. His '91-'92 season began with his New York City Opera debut in Korngold's Die Tote Stadt. It continues with performances with the Metropolitan Opera Guild, the Orlando Opera, the Pittsburgh Opera, the Wildwood Opera (in Arkansas) and the New Orleans Opera. In addition to his work on the operatic stage, Huddleston has engaged in concert work and musical theater. His career has been highlighted by national tours of Camelot in which he played Lancelot to the King Arthur of Richard Harris, Shenandoah with John Raitt and The Student Prince. The Town of Oyster Bay Department of Community and Youth Services Cultural and Performing Arts Division is co-sponsoring this musical afternoon with the Jericho Public Library as part of CAPA's Distinguished Artists Concerts.

Brain Tumor Dollars

Among the highlights of the February 18 meeting of the Plainview-Old Bethpage Road Runners Club was the presentation of checks totalling $1,500 to the Children's Brain Tumor Foundation.

The Club had designated the Foundation as one of the recipients of the proceeds of last December's Ho Ho Ho Jingle Bells Run in Bethpage, and Bonnie and Fred Adlman were on hand to accept the check at the Club's February meeting.

"We are thrilled to be able to present such a substantial contribution to such a worthy cause as the Children's Brain Tumor Foundation," observed Road Runners Vice President Julie Shapiro, who chaired the Ho Ho Ho Run and associated fundraising efforts. "The Ho Ho Ho Run was a major effort for us, and we're happy that we could share our success with the Children's Brain Tumor Foundation."

Library Urges Mail Back Survey

The Hicksville Public Library recently mailed a survey to the homes of all community members. The library is urging all residents to take a few moments and fill out the survey, and mail it back to us. Postage has already been paid for by the library.

In order for the library to better serve the needs of the community, we need the community's input. This survey gives residents a chance to let us know what services and programs they look for most when they come to the library.

Army Reserve Pvt. Michael J. Conrow has graduated from the laundry and bath specialist course at Fort Lee, Petersburg, Va.

The course provided training in the operation and preventive maintenance on laundry and bath units, delousing equipment, and decontamination. Also included in the training were the use of washing formulas and materials reimpregnation procedures.

The soldier is the son of Margaret Willard of Pennsylvania Ave., Bay Shore, and John Conrow of Gables Drive, Hicksville.

Children's Room Increases Services

The Children's Room of the Hicksville Public Library made tremendous strides in community service in 1991.

In May, an automated circulation system was established, enabling the librarians to spend more time tending to patrons. With this new automated service, the Children's Room is confident that they will be able to strengthen services further in the future.

The Children's Room also added over 3,392 new books to their already large collection. The audio-visual section also saw a gain of 164 tapes and compact discs.

More and more, community members have taken advantage of the many programs offered. This is evident by the 1,029 new applications for library cards and the 591 renewals in the department.

The Computer Learning Month held last October was very successful. It is an extremely vital program, introducing children to the many wonders of computers at an early age.

The very successful Storytime programs were held in the fall and spring. The children and parents all had a wonderful time and the program continues to be as successful this year. Craft workshops have remained a popular attraction and many workshops are planned for the upcoming year.

Artists Perform At Town Libraries

Charles Huddleston, Baritone

Some of the nation's most respected musicians will be performing at local libraries in the Town of Oyster Bay in March, as part of the Town's "Distinguished Artists Concerts" series, according to Town Councilman Thomas L. Clark.

Councilman Clark said, "On Sunday, March 1st, we have the pleasure of enjoying the incredible talents of The D'Amore Duo at the Hicksville Public Library at 3 p.m. Oboist, Dorothy Darlington and guitarist, William Feasley, perform a unique form of chamber music that has been described as 'dazzling' by many."

Dorothy Darlington, who holds a Doctorate of Musical Arts from Catholic University, is a former principal oboe with the National Symphony of Costa Rica and the Jacksonville Symphony. She has thrilled audiences throughout the world as well as right here at home. Ms. Darlington has been a guest artist at the White House, the Library of Congress and Carnegie Hall, to name just a few. The second half of the D'Amore Duo, William Feasley, was the first guitarist to receive the Peabody Conservatory's coveted Artist Diploma. Mr. Feasley was also selected to play for Andres Segovia at the Master's historic last class.

"In addition, at 3 p.m., on Sunday, March 8, at the Jericho Public Library, the Distinguished Artists Concert series will present baritone, Charles Huddleston," said Councilman Clark. "Mr. Huddleston's rare talent was debuted at the New York City Opera this season following his great success in the Lyric Opera of Chicago, last season. He has sung with the Hawaii Opera Theater, the Pala Opera, the National Grand Opera and the Michigan Opera Theater, to name just a few.

Councilman Clark noted that the "Distinguished Artists Concerts" series is being sponsored by the Cultural and Performing Arts (C.A.P.A.) Division of the Town's Department of Community and Youth Services and all concerts are being offered free to residents of the Town of Oyster Bay.

Open House At Nursery School

The Hicksville Nursery School is holding an Open House for fall registration on Wednesday March 25 from 10:11:30 a.m. for parents of 2, 2½, 3 and 4 years olds in the school classrooms at W. Cherry Street and Nelson Avenue.

The Hicksville Nursery School is a non-profit, non-sectarian cooperative located in the back of the United Methodist Church. Founded in 1967, it has offered twenty five years of quality education to hundreds of preschool children as well as serving as field training center for students for S.U.N.Y. Farmingdale, Nassau Community College and Adelphi University.

The school seeks to offer the young child an environment in which he can grow emotionally, socially, intellectually and physically under the careful supervision of a fully trained staff.

The program provides varied activities with an abundance of materials and opportunities for free creative expression under the guidance of skilled, N.Y. State Early childhood, certified teachers. Art, media, wood-working, music and rhythmic movement, language arts, storytelling, dramatics, puzzles, doll corner, books and manipulative toys are all part of the daily program. A huge indoor playground permits daily large muscle activity even in the worst weather. A mid-session snack of milk or juice and crackers or fruits and vegetables is provided. Field trips are included to broaden the child's understanding of the world he lives in.

All parents who wish to, can share in the administration of the school. Monthly business meetings give parents the opportunity to make decisions on administrative needs. There are lectures, films, and "rap groups" to help parents learn more about parenting. Fundraising projects are most often social events helping young families meet other adults who are at the same state in life.

We invite all parents of preschool children to join us for a chance to play and learn together in our spacious well-equipped rooms. For further information, call 681-8246.

Meth. Church Senior Choir At

The group will be accompanied by a string ensemble, organ, and harpsichord. Soloists will be the evangelists, Jesus, thief on the right, and thief on the left. The Offertory will be "Pie Jesu" from John Rutter's "Requiem".

East Street Trip To Caumsett

The East Street School sixth graders participated in a three-day resident program at Caumsett State Park recently.

The "Caumsett Experience" is an exciting retreat which combines social studies, science, and environmental studies in a hands-on adventure for youngsters. The glacial moraine, wooded areas, salt water marsh, and fresh water lake provide the perfect setting for learning about Long Island history, plant and animal life, and marine activity. Naturalists led students through lessons in orienteering, tracking, field succession, survival techniques, and maple sugaring. The night sky becomes a classroom in itself as naturalists point out planets, stars, and constellations. The students also had the opportunity to use a high powered telescope.

N.H. Primaries Don't Help Voters Much

Most callers to Input do not believe that the New Hampshire primaries did much to enlighten voters in answer to this question: "Do you think the New Hampshire primaries have much importance in the overall Presidential election?" Here are some of the answers:

BROKE ICE

The New Hampshire primaries only importance are that they tend to break the ice and introduce us to what to expect. In the case of the Republican primary when Buchanan did better than expected against Bush it served to tell Bush that he had better not expect to coast to victory. In the Democratic camp it tended to show which candidates won't make it. In this case none of the candidates will ever be President so far as I can see. None came up with anything that would make me vote for them. H.D.

WEEDING OUT

The New Hampshire primary is a weeding-out process. By the time the last primary is held the same contenders won't be around. I really think Cuomo still thinks that after these races are all over that the convention will draft him and he will be the contender. In the Republican camp Buchanan made a fair showing but he will never be the nominee. F.D.

I think the country gets carried away with the New Hampshire primary. The state is one of the smallest. It is not at all representative of most of the states and the only thing going for it is that the contestants can go all over it and get to every area. Its importance is slight in determining who would be a good Presidential candidate. K.D.

PRIMARY WITH RULES

Presidential primaries will only have real importance when they are held nationwide on the same day with all legally qualified political parties following uniform rules pertaining to primary candidates. For example, voters must be registered party members. Candidates must submit a nominating petition of 10,000 registered party members or one percent of the Presidential vote cast in their particular state, their political party in the last Presidential election. So schedule a national Primary Day on the First Tuesday in July followed by national conventions in August. With the official campaign starting on Labor Day followed by November elections. N.R.

THE PRIMARY LAW

New Hampshire has conned the public into believing their primary is important. They want us to continue believing it because it is good for their economy. They are so anxious to be the first primary in the nation that they passed a law that if any other state has an earlier primary, then New Hampshire would have their primary one week earlier. I would like to see some state like South Carolina pass a law that it would have its primary on the same date as New Hampshire. New Hampshire law would kick in having the primary one week earlier and then S.C. would have it a week earlier etc. If you follow this on and on Primary Day would be before the last Election Day. J.P.

GOOD THING GOING

I think New Hampshire has a good thing going for it on running primaries first. It brings a lot of money to the state in the form of tourism. But it does little for telling us who is best suited to be President. For the Republicans it did put Bush on notice that he has problems and this might help him in the long run. But the Democrats have a crowded field that will never make it to the Presidency. B.V.

NOT SO GREAT

While it might appear that the contestants in the New Hampshire primaries are acting like a bunch of kids, there is a certain seriousness about it as the large amount of campaign money being spent will attest. Actually, I guess the entire operation might be construed as a testing exercise to abandon or to develop techniques which can be applied more seriously in other campaigns through the country. Certainly, it seems to me to be a welcome opportunity to determine the qualities which each candidate offered for a vote on election day. In the process, though, some traits of character became known to the public - traits often not flattering with negative effect on the voting public despite the possible desire to seek a candidate capable of replacing the incumbent. Such feelings were reflected in the New Hampshire primaries in the significant drop in the votes for Bush compared with his showing immediately after the Gulf episode. Frankly, I don't believe that the votes cast in the New Hampshire primaries bore a relation to the real feelings of the residents - in a sense a sort of test-tube demonstration to evaluate the possible reaction to certain trends when the real vote would be at stake in November. Quite honestly, outside of learning about the true character of some of the aspirants, I don't believe that the New Hampshire primaries were of great importance in the overall Presidential election. P.G.S.

PAST ISSUES

As a physician it shocks me to see the headline "Smokers don't blame smoke makers." Cigarette makers have their own lobby and the backing of Congress and the President. Tobacco growing is subsidized by the Federal government. They target teenage girls of today. Obviously many of the callers have never been addicted to nicotine. Nicotine is a more dangerous drug than heroin or cocaine, which are illegal in the U.S. Why should we give our children, especially the young girls who are going to be the mothers of tomorrow, an access to a drug which is so lethal? JSK, M.D.

Discovery!

A Child With Polio

By Deanne F. Purcell

My story began September 24, 1947 (a night I cannot forget) with violent chills and contractions in my right arm, as well as the feeling someone had jabbed my palm with fifty straight pins at once.

In 1947 there were no Polio shots and most people who contracted the illness were crippled for life or died. September was the dreaded month for the disease, and we were warned not to go near the beach, and if we did to stay out of the water. This wasn't the case for me, as I wasn't even to the beach!

On September 25 I was admitted to Mary Immaculate Hospital in Jamaica, New York. That morning my mother phoned our doctor to come to our house. At this time she thought I was faking illness so I wouldn't have to go to school.

Upon entering the hospital I was admitted to the Incubation Ward where I had to stay for three days. This is where I met Charlie Grimes. We were both surprised when we realized that we were in the same room, as I was ten years old and a white girl, and he was only four years old and a black boy.

I spoke first asking him about himself and he asked about me. I scared him that night when I tried to get out of bed and fell on the floor, hitting the back of my head. At that time my entire left side from head to toe was paralyzed.

After a while we were moved to the large sunny room of the children's ward. This room was more cheerful and it raised our spirits. There was a little crippled boy named Peter who would visit us during the day. He was eight years old. He was in a wheelchair and on his small lap would be several comic books which he brought to share with Charlie. After a while he shared some with me even though I was "a girl" and a stranger to him.

Charlie, unlike me, was paralyzed from the waist down. We received Sister Kenny packs, two or three times a day (a method originated by Elizabeth Kenny, an Australian nurse, for treating infantile paralysis based on the use of hot, moist applications and passive exercise).

Sister Kenny packs were made up of burlap covered with clear oilcloth. These were dipped in hot olive oil solutions and wrung through the top of an old time washing machine wringer. It seemed as if the steam would shoot to the ceiling. With patients lying on their stomachs these packs were placed in an area from the base of the neck to the base of the spine. It felt as if the skin was being burned off your back. Next you were told to remain on your stomach and go to sleep. At this point you felt as if your temperature was 100 degrees or more. When you woke up an hour or so later, you felt as if someone had poured buckets of water on you. The bed would be soaking wet and would have to be changed. We later went to Physical Therapy where they exercised our arms and legs.

Our nurse was named "Nickname" and we called her that because she had a long Polish name which we were unable to pronounce. She explained the Sister Kenny procedure to me and hoped that I could explain what was happening to little Charlie. I tried to tell him but he didn't understand and would cry during the whole treatment.

I would sing to Charlie and it would relax him. At first Nickname seemed a little upset that I could calm Charlie when all of her efforts failed. Later on she seemed to be more grateful.

Charlie's father owned a delicatessen and every day he brought a large can of Pineapple Juice, just for me. He said he wanted me to get strong. Each day I would wrap my ice cream wafers in a colored kleenex and Nickname would give them to an eager Charlie.

Charlie went home October 5, crippled from the waist down. I felt so badly for him, I cried. On October 12 I left the hospital. I was able to walk out with my mother holding one hand and my sister holding the other. The hospital policy was that you had to leave in a wheelchair but I wanted to walk. Because I became so upset, they consented to let me try.

When I returned to school I was ignored by the children, as Polio was a frightening illness. At first it was thought that I should be in a "special" health class with physically and mentally handicapped children, but the principal decided I could return to my regular class. Students and teachers found it hard to accept me, as I'd had nervous problems before Polio which worsened after it. I had a suspicion that another girl in my school who had been out about the same time as me, also had contracted Polio. She was very nervous and upset about whatever she'd had and acted as I did. However, the cause of her illness was kept a secret. I had the misfortune that my illness wasn't a secret.

As I think back on the years since 1947 I realize the wonderful progress that has been made in the field of medicine. Polio has almost been eliminated in our society through the efforts of Dr. Jonas Salk and other scientists. We just need to educate society to the importance of having all children vaccinated so none have to experience the pain of another Charlie.

READER RATINGS

Q. Because of our jobs, my husband and I are on different schedules several nights a week. I would prefer to eat out on those evenlows rather than take the time and effort to prepare a meal just for myself. However, I don't really feel comfortable dining alone. I find most restaurants don't really welcome the person who is not in a group.

A. First of all, there is no reason for you to feel uncomfortable. In today's hectic world there is nothing unusual about people eating alone in restaurants! In any case, the person who dines out has the right to expect the same courteous treatment whether he or she is alone or in the company of others. The smart restaurant owner knows the importance of good will. He values all his customers' patronage and makes them feel equally welcome.

Q. What is the correct way to eat crackers in soup?

A. Small crackers, such as oyster crackers, may be added to the soup and eaten that way. However, large soda crackers should really not be crumbled into the soup. It is better to keep them on the plate and eat them along with the soup.

Q. I have been invited to a formal restaurant dinner later in the year. However, I am also on a strict diet for medical reasons. Do you think I should mention that to my hostess?

A. By all means, tell her. If she selects the menu for her guests she will take your special diet into account. However, my own opinion is that where restaurant dinners are arranged it is better to allow guests to make their own food selections.

Q. What is the proper way of addressing a waiter in a restaurant?

A. My own preference is "Sir", rather than "Waiter" because it shows more courtesy and people do like to be treated with respect. For a waitress I prefer "Miss" to "Waitress" for the same reason.

Q. If an uncut loaf of bread is served to a couple in a restaurant, who should cut and serve it?

A. It would be gracious for the man to cut several slices from the bread for his woman companion and himself. Then he would offer the bread to her before taking his own portion.

KITCHEN HINTS

Asparagus is a favorite

You want to keep its pure flavor.

Here's the simple answer:

1. Peel asparagus stalks. Oil or butter a shallow baking dish that will hold the stalks compactly.
2. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with a little butter. Cover.
3. Bake in a 300-F oven for 30 minutes. Asparagus will remain lively green and taste utterly delicious.

Dried herbs and spices are handy

Sometimes the aroma is weak.

Here's how to guarantee full flavor:

1. Mark the date on the caps of newly purchased jars of herbs and spices.
2. In about a year the color and aroma will begin to fade.
3. Throw away the little that remains; using the insipid seasonings is false economy.

Vegetarian View

By Margaret Witz-Peterson

There's always going to be meat in the American diet — I'm a realist," said professional vegetarian chef Brother Ron Pickarski of Miami Beach, a Franciscan brother whose solo ministry is food.

"But maybe by the turn of the century there might be as many as 25 percent of the people eating a vegetarian or near-vegetarian diet," he added.

Pickarski said 60 to 70 years ago the diet of half of us was vegetarian style.

"I think we'll go back to the type of eating when meat was for special occasions and eaten much more sparingly."

Pickarski is no kitchen dabbler.

In 1983 he was the first vegetarian to be certified a master chef by the prestigious American Culinary Federation. He's also the leader of the only vegetarian team that has earned the right to compete in the international Culinary Olympics in Germany. (The team has won a number of bronze and silver medals and will continue to compete for an elusive gold.)

This year, Pickarski joined a growing number of authors who have published new specialty cookbooks on vegetarian cooking. His is "Friendly Foods" (Ten Speed Press).

Pickarski, 43, is a vegan, which means he eats no meat, eggs or dairy products. But it wasn't always so.

In the mid-1970s he was 60 pounds heavier, was a smoker of long standing and in poor health, he said.

A professional chef and son of a restaurant owner, Pickarski became a vegetarian in 1976 and a vegan in 1977, almost a decade after he joined the seminary and made food his way of touching people.

He raises all the funds to support his ministry himself. It's a calling that takes him traveling more than 50,000 miles a year.

He's down to earth in his approach to converting people to eating lower on the food chain. He realizes that vegetarianism has to be "user friendly" if people are going to adopt that style of eating.

"If people don't transform their eating using foods they like and are familiar with, the change won't last," Pickarski said.

"We have our hard-core vegetarians and then there are a lot of people who will adopt some of the vegetarian principles because of what health experts say about fat and cholesterol."

In other words, it would be just fine to mix real meat equally with a meat substitute if that's what is necessary for you right now. Or, maybe regularly plan vegetarian meals for the family two days a week. That's making some movement in a dietary change.

Pickarski makes a strong case for a meatless menu when he steps into the kitchen. He takes gourmet cooking techniques and applies them to recipes that earn "thumbs up" from diners who don't normally follow a strict vegetarian diet. An informal sam-

Where Our Readers Have The Last Word

This newspaper, and the seven other weekly newspapers associated with it, publishes the last word in restaurant guides and a paid listing of many prominent selected restaurants in this area. While many of them have been rated by the great, and near great food connoisseurs, our readers will have the last word through "Reader Ratings."

Through a special 24 hour phone system, readers will be asked to call in their assessment of each restaurant they visit. Consensus ratings (good or bad) will be published as a continuing part of the guide.

In addition they can make suggestions, compliments or criticisms through the open phone line and messages will be sent through to the restaurant management.

READER RATINGS

Q. Can you tell me the proper way to eat French fries? At a restaurant recently, I saw a young man spear them with his fork and nibble them in mid-air. I found this appalling!

A. The best way to eat French fries is to cut them with the side of a fork into bite-size pieces. You are right - food should never be eaten while dangled in the air.

Q. Recently my fiance and I ate in an expensive restaurant. The food was excellent and so was the service. However, our table was located quite near the door and we felt a terrible draft anytime someone entered or left the premises. We were both extremely annoyed and will certainly never return to that particular restaurant. What is your opinion?

A. You should have told the maitre d' politely but firmly about the problem. He would certainly have shown you to another table if one was available. Even at this late date, you should consider sending a letter to the restaurant owner. I'm sure he wants to please his customers and will take your complaint very seriously. It would make good business sense for him to eliminate the draft!

CRITICISMS OF RESTAURANTS are sent directly to restaurants concerned in the form of a memo. Restaurants that consistently give bad service or food are dropped from these pages.

pling of Pickarski's dishes proved they were filling, artfully presented, satisfying and tasty. His tofu chocolate cheesecake won raves from most.

In many instances he used ingredient substitutes, such as tofu and other meat substitutes, including tempeh, made from grains, and seitan, made from wheat.

Sure we've heard of these ingredients, but do we really know what they are? Take tofu. All of you who know there are six types of tofu, raise your hand. For the rest of us, here's Pickarski's tofu guide.

The types of tofu available include soft, firm, extra firm, silken soft, silken firm and silken extra firm. Softer tofu tends to be better for soup and quiches, firmer tofu for shish kebabs or fried tofu; silken tofu is more appropriate in desserts and sauces.

Pickarski said 8 ounces of tofu contains 147 calories and 27 percent of the daily protein need. Tofu requires refrigeration, and some of it is packed in water and some is aseptically packaged in plastic. If it's packed in water, the water has to be changed at least every other day.

Pickarski recommends buying tofu that is produced locally because he says it is fresher. Here is one of Pickarski's tofu recipes.

TOFU SWISS STEAK

2 tablespoons sesame oil (or canola oil)

1 1/2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms

1 cup halved and sliced onions

1 cup diced green bell pepper, seeded

2 tablespoons minced garlic

1 tablespoon chopped basil

1/4 cup dark barley miso, dissolved in 1/4 cup water

2 cups tomato puree

1 cup water

1/2 teaspoon black pepper

4 tomatoes, blanched, peeled, seeded and chopped (optional)

4 to 6 teaspoons tamari

4 pieces of firm tofu, 2 ounces each

1/4 cup sesame oil

Yields 4 servings.

Heat oil in medium saucepan. Sauté mushrooms, onions, bell pepper and garlic with basil for 5 to 8 minutes. Stir in dissolved miso. Then add tomato puree, water, pepper and fresh tomatoes. Simmer sauce for 5 minutes.

Pour tamari over tofu pieces, distributing it evenly. Heat 1/4 cup sesame oil in skillet. Sauté tofu on both sides until golden brown.

Place a little sauce in an 8-inch square baking dish, place tofu on sauce, and cover with remaining sauce. Cover dish and bake in 350 F oven for 20 to 25 minutes. (If tofu is baked too long, the sauce will evaporate and may not look appetizing; adding more water should solve the problem.)

Serve hot with mashed potatoes and a green vegetable.

Desiree Vivea

Pesach, or Passover, is one of the most revered holidays of the Jewish calendar. Its name is synonymous with freedom, as modern Jews celebrate their forebears' historical liberation from servitude in Egypt many centuries ago.

When you consider that the Israelites were in bondage to Egypt for more than four centuries, it is hardly surprising that the observance of Passover should be rich in the symbolism of slavery and release.

Even the foods enjoyed during Passover are invested with symbolic meaning. Pesach Seder is celebrated in Jewish homes during the first two evenings of Passover. The Seder table includes roasted lamb in remembrance of temple offerings, a roasted egg recalling God's command to Moses on the eve of his exodus from Egypt, a bitter herb in memory of the bitterness of slavery, parsley and saltwater to symbolize the tears of the enslaved Jews; Charoset (a mixture of apples, nuts, wine, sugar and cinnamon) representing the brick and mortar made by Jewish slaves for the Egyptians.

Matzoh, an unleavened, cracklelike bread, is also eaten during the eight days of Passover, in remembrance of the flight from Egypt. The Jews had to depart so quickly that they had no time to stop long enough even to let their bread rise.

If you run a kosher household, you may have been wondering how to clean your microwave oven for Passover. Here's how, according to Zell J. Schulman's "Something Different for Passover," (Triad Publishing Co.): Remove the glass tray and wash it with boiling water. (To be strict, purchase a new one for Passover use only). Thoroughly wash the inside of the oven and door with soapy water.

Do not use the appliance for one full day before Passover begins. At the end of this time, place a 2-cup measure filled with 1 cup of water in the microwave and heat on HIGH (100 percent power) until the oven is filled with steam. Your microwave is now ready for Passover.

Your microwave is the perfect partner to help ease the labor of preparing kosher meals. To commemorate this Passover season, let modern technology blend with ancient tradition to ensure hassle-free cooking. Shalom!

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.)

MICRO-TIP OF THE WEEK

One apple will micro-bake in about 2 to 3 minutes. Add about 1 minute cooking time for each additional apple. If filling apples with chopped nuts, raisins, dates, etc., additional cooking time may be needed for the added ingredients.

HOT BEET BORSCHT

- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 (16-ounce) can diced beets
- 3 vegetable bouillon cubes
- 2 cups hot water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 4 heaping teaspoons sour cream
- 2 or 3 sprigs of fresh dill

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation time: 5 to 10 minutes.

Cooking time: 6 to 9 minutes.

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Saute onions in butter or margarine in microwave-safe 1 1/2-quart casserole for 2 to 3 minutes, or until onions are limp.

Place beets in blender and process until smooth. Add onion and process again briefly, turn mixture into casserole. Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot water; stir into beet mixture. Cover and microwave 4 to 6 minutes, or until heated through.

Stir in lemon juice. Ladle into individual bowls, topping each serving with a dollop of sour cream and fresh dill sprig.

STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 medium potato, peeled and grated
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
- 8 large cabbage leaves, rinsed
- 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons water

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation time: 8 to 10 minutes.

Cooking time: 5 1/2 to 8 minutes.

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Mix ground beef with potato, egg, onion and parsley in medium-size mixing bowl. Form mixture into 8 small loaves.

Place 8 large, outer cabbage leaves on microwave-safe plate. Cover loosely with plastic wrap and microwave 1 to 2 minutes, or until leaves are limp. Fold up 1 loaf of meat in each cabbage leaf.

Arrange cabbage rolls, seam side down, in 12x8-inch microwave-safe baking dish.

Blend together tomato sauce, brown sugar, lemon juice and water in 2-cup glass measure. Microwave 30 seconds to 1 minute, or until mixture is heated through. Pour over cabbage rolls.

Cover with plastic wrap and microwave 4 to 5 minutes, or until cabbage rolls are cooked through and meat is no longer pink.

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Dr. Abraham: I have a 14-year-old boyfriend who doesn't go to my school.

Before we started going out, my girlfriend's boyfriend called and told me that a friend of his wants to go out with me. I said, "Yeah, sure." I was excited because I have been desperate for so long for a guy because I have been used by a two-timer, and that really made me feel bad.

My girlfriend told me that she had once gone out with this friend of her boyfriend. She dumped him for some odd reason. She also told me that he is a cute blond, blue-eyed person. I told her that looks aren't everything. Later she called and asked me to ride my bike to her house because she wanted to tell me something. So I went there, but she changed her mind and didn't tell me anything.

I went out with this friend of her boyfriend, but about two weeks later she told me to break up with him. I asked her why. She then told me what she had found out about him. He had called and told her about another girlfriend he had, so she got mad and wouldn't tell me what he said when I rode my bike over earlier. But now she did. She said he was a two-timer.

My feelings were hurt. So I called and told him that I had been used by a two-timer before, and I am not going to be used again.

Did I do wrong? — Lost

Lost: I don't think so. You seem to have used good common sense. An old saying is that we learn from experience, especially if we're smart.

Your girlfriend spared you from another heartache. To discover so soon what he was like was really a gift from her.

There are plenty of boys who are honest and willing to stick with one girl at a time. If you keep your eyes open, you will find one of them.

Maybe you already have. How about the 14-year-old who doesn't go to your school?

Dr. Abraham: My boyfriend is too shy to write to you. He is embarrassed because he said his handwriting is bad. (It is.)

He is a few years younger than I am (he is 17), and I have two young children.

His family doesn't like the idea of us seeing each other, which we have been doing for seven months. I love him very much, and my girls look at him as a father. He says he loves me and I believe him.

His family doesn't understand this, and they think he should see someone his age. I have tried talking to them as adults should, but there is no response. We love each other so much, and are scared this is going to affect our relationship. Since we have been together, he has improved his grades in school.

What do you think we should do? — In Love

In Love: As with many relationships, it isn't difficult to see and understand both sides of this story — the feelings you have for each other and the concerns of his family.

If your relationship were to lead toward something more permanent, their concern could deepen because of his youth and the responsibilities he would be taking on. On your side, the love you seem to have is something you obviously want to hold on to.

If he agrees with his family about his seeing someone else, you may have no choice but to accept that step. It doesn't mean he has to drop his relationship with you. It could then become a period of maturation for both of you that might lead to a satisfying solution.

One factor you didn't bring up is your own family's attitude. Since they know you well, how they feel about this situation may be helpful to you. You might want to discuss this whole matter with one or more close family members, especially ones whose opinions you respect.

Dear Teens: Many of you have written to tell me how much you enjoyed "The Civil War" television series when it was originally released or shown more recently. Who says all TV is terrible for teens and younger kids to watch? It certainly isn't when programs like that are offered, and when you are selective in those you watch.

I think a lot of you will be pleased by this release from the CPB (Corporation for Public Broadcasting). If you haven't seen the Civil War programs, it may encourage you to watch for them whenever they come around — or see part or all of them for the second time.

Chef gives special touch to Mediterranean cuisine

By Charles Britton

If you ever happen to run a restaurant that becomes one of the 25 or so in the world to win that ultimate culinary accolade, three stars in the Guide Michelin, you'll find out by getting a call from M. le president of the publishing company.

In 1990 a call went out to Alain Ducasse, then 33, the youngest chef ever to make it into that select circle. At the time, he was in Tokyo. Big-name chefs get around a good deal these days.

He turned up recently in Los Angeles for several days as guest chef at Champagne Restaurant, owned by longtime friend Patrick Healey. This was Ducasse's first venture into restaurant cooking in the United States. Usually, Ducasse can be found in Monte Carlo, in the gilded precincts of Restaurant Louis XV in the Hotel de Paris.

Winning the third star would cap the career of any chef, much less a chap who has yet to sprout a few gray hairs. But it is an impossibly beneficial wind that does not blow some trouble the recipient's way. One of the first things Ducasse found out was that the customers' expectation level rose.

"They think the poached eggs should be made of gold," he said.

Given the ambience of his restaurant, that was never an entirely unreasonable expectation. Restaurant Louis XV in the Hotel de Paris de Monte Carlo looks like — well, it looks like what you might imagine from a name like that: ornate and marble and vermeil and crystal chandeliers and heavy draperies hanging in swags and portraits of royal mistresses gazing from oval frames. King Louis himself would feel quite at home, should he make use of a convenient time warp to turn up for a petit repas.

Prices there are at a regal level, too, comparable to any of the grand-luxe establishments on the route gourmandise. Ducasse said guests should expect to pay the equivalent of $100 to $200 for a meal, with, perhaps, some wine. The food, however, stands forth in deliberate contrast to the Louis-Quinze grandeur of the setting.

Ducasse, who was born in Southern France, is a child of his region, and his menu owes more to the rustic traditions of the Mediterranean than to the butterfat-laden classics of Paris. "Je deteste la creme," he said. That may be a bit of an exaggeration, but it does give you an idea of the drift. Critics have noted an Italian cast to his cooking — an extraordinary admission in a culinary culture that remains strongly xenophobic.

His dishes are likely to run to such Italo-Provencale elements as veal shank and cannelloni. One of his plates calls for a garnish of Panisses, chickpea fritters straight from the old quarter of Marseille. And Ducasse doesn't torture his dishes into edible ikebana. The whole idea of the Mediterranean style is that foods should look like — and, more important, taste like — very much themselves.

He called his style "la cuisine de gout" — or maybe he actually said "la cuisine des goutes," the cuisine of tastes. It sounds odd in translation, but it's a good description. He likes to combine the clear, sunny flavors of his home territory, its herbs, its fresh salad greens, its abundant produce, its seafood.

Ducasse is one of those chefs who insists on only the freshest and best. Yes, we've heard that before. In fact, we hear it all the time. But in his case it seems to be quite true and, furthermore, accompanied by a skill in working with flavors, sometimes combining them, sometimes setting them against one another.

Still, this is top-chop French cuisine, so his recipes are very much the products of the professional kitchen. "Rustic but refined," as he put it. He just might toss a few truffles into a dish or demand split-second timing. It's nobody's home cooking.

Like American adults, the French constantly ask their children what they want to be when they grow up. Ducasse was one of those kids who knew. He was determined to be a chef from age 12. His parents were less than delighted by his certainty. They ran a small farm in Southwestern France where geese were raised for foie gras, and they hoped that their son would continue in their footsteps.

The elder Ducasses got the boy a summer job as a restaurant dishwasher, thinking that would bring him to his senses. The strategy did not work. Alain went on to hotel school in Bordeaux and then turned up in some of the most famous kitchens under chefs such as Michel Guerard, Roger Verge, Alain Chapel, Gaston Lenotre.

At 23, he became chef in his own right, at Verge's one-star restaurant, L'Armandier. He won his second star before he was 30 at La Terrasse in Juan-les-Pins on the Riviera.

In 1987 la Societe des Bains de Mer offered to build him a restaurant at its Hotel de Paris in Monte Carlo. This was to be the Louis XV, planned from the start to rival the most elaborate in the world: a kitchen of more than 3,000 square feet with every piece of equipment imaginable and a staff of 90.

La Societe soon got its money's worth in publicity alone. Lui magazine described him as "the other prince of Monaco." Femme gave him a higher rank: "the king of chefs." Patricia Wells in The International Herald-Tribune, published in Paris, also used the royal metaphor. Ducasse was "a new king of gastronomy."

Wrote Le Nouvel Economiste: "In each decade, there appears a French chef destined to mark his imprint on the history of la grande cuisine. ... Now we have entered the era of Alain Ducasse."

German, Italian and Spanish journals soon sang his praises. In the United States, M magazine suggested that he may be the best chef in France. George Lang spread his appreciation across the pages of Travel & Leisure. And in The New York Times Craig Claiborne announced "a new French superchef."

Ducasse brings to cuisine a cunning mixture of the recherche and the comfy. This doesn't mean that his recipes are all that easy to reproduce. The procedures tend to be exacting and the choice of ingredients specialized and extravagant.

One spectacular dish, for example, combines lobster, penne pasta, tomatoes, truffles and (apparently) a little meat essence in squat Provencale-style cocottes, the covers sealed on with a flour-and-water dough. These are placed in (probably) a blazing hot oven for just the right length of time. The cocottes are ceremoniously unsealed at table, to reveal lobster cooked just so and pasta permeated by a haunting sauce. Such recipes are not for ordinary human beings.

The following selection is somewhat more or less approachable.

The first is the main course Ducasse chose for a table of professional Feinschmeckers at Champagne.

His recipe was not available, so we made this approach to it. Ducasse used a whole veal shank; we substituted the more easily obtained osso bucco cut, and our sequence of cooking is surely different from the chef's.

For this recipe to work really well, you need exceptionally strong veal stock. You could substitute an excellent chicken stock, but make it yourself. The canned variety doesn't have the gelatin required to give this dish its body and character. Made with attention to detail, the result might be called "veal with real essence."

VEAL D'APRES DUCASSE

- 4 large cuts of veal shank (osso bucco)
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 1 large carrot, peeled and sliced
- 1 rib celery, sliced

- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 2 cups rich veal or chicken stock
- 1 or 2 bay leaves
- 1 large sprig fresh thyme (or large pinch dried)
- 1 large sprig fresh parsley
- Salt, pepper to taste

Yields 4 servings.

Place veal pieces in saute or frying pan just large enough to hold them. Add 1/2 cup water. Place over brisk heat and bring to boil, covered. Lower heat to rapid simmer and cook about 40 minutes, until water boils away. Regulate heat carefully so that meat browns in its own fat and the juices do not burn in pan. Remove meat. Drain excess fat from pan. (If you do not want to serve the fatty marrow, scoop it from the bones and discard. Otherwise, leave it in place. The marrow was not part of Ducasse's presentation.)

Add sliced vegetables to the pan and saute until they are tender but not brown. Add wine and rapidly boil down until it has mostly evaporated. Return meat to pan with stock. Add herbs and seasonings. Simmer, covered, a further 1 1/2 hours or so, until the meat is quite tender. You may make the dish ahead to this point.

Preheat oven to 400 F in time for the final step. Remove meat to heatproof dish and place in hot oven for about 10 minutes, allowing meat to brown nicely.

Strain cooking liquid, pressing down hard on vegetables to extract all the liquid. Return juices to pan and boil down rapidly until sauce is somewhat thickened and nicely concentrated. Place veal on serving plates and surround with some of the sauce. Ducasse added vegetables — celery pieces and small onions — that had been cooked in the veal juices. Rice would be excellent with this dish.

Q. I am deeply concerned about acid rain, global warming and other environmental problems associated with burning fossil fuels. Don't you think it would be a good idea if we got more serious about all the free solar energy that we have?

A. Absolutely! The supply of solar energy is unlimited.

For example, every day the Earth receives enough solar energy to heat every house, apartment, greenhouse, garage, school and building in the world for a year!

Sunlight can be used, too, to heat space and water in several ways:

- By using active systems, such as solar collectors, to heat liquid or air.

- By using passive systems that rely on architectural features, such as awnings, glass and south-facing solar greenhouses for lighting, cooling and heating.

A well-designed solar house can reduce energy bills by 30 percent or more. Since it doesn't rely on power generated by oil or coal, a solar house produces minimal air pollution. The average water heater uses as much energy as a car!

Currently, there are about 300,000 solar dwellings in the United States. At the present time, at least 1 million buildings in this country use some aspect of solar design and another 1.2 million have solar water heating.

TREE TIPS

Trees, a vital part of nature's balance, are endangered. According to The National Arbor Day Foundation, "tender loving care" of the Earth's remaining trees and forests is essential, but no longer sufficient because man must go beyond conservation.

Why should you plant a tree?

- Trees absorb carbon dioxide, a polluting byproduct from the burning of oil, gas and coal and a major contributor to the greenhouse effect. One tree absorbs approximately 26 pounds of carbon dioxide each year and releases life-giving oxygen.

- Global forests are being cleared at the rate of one football field every second. In fact, one-third of the Earth's forest is now gone. Planting trees is essential to halt global warming.

- Many of America's urban forests — street trees, trees in parks and gardens, trees on watershed lands — have been decreasing steadily for the past decade. In fact, many American cities are losing four trees for every one planted.

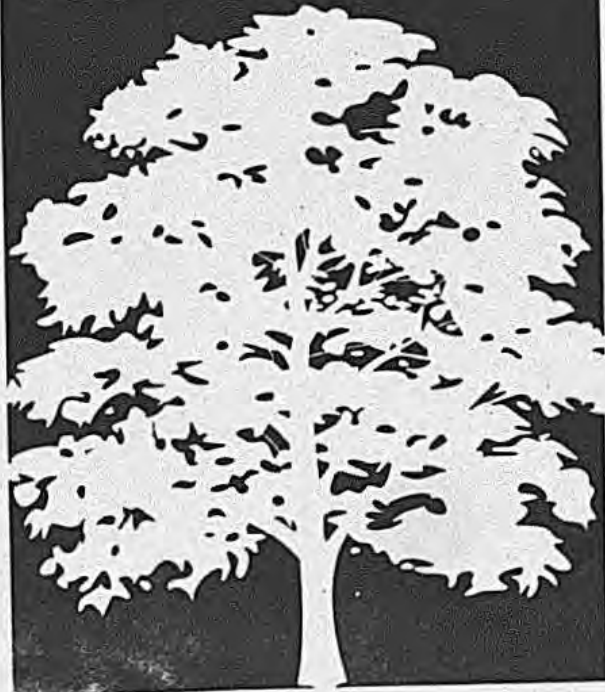

- Well-positioned trees can shade buildings, reduce the need for air conditioning and reduce energy consumption up to 50 percent.

- In winter, windbreak trees can reduce heating needs by as much as 30 percent.

- In addition to their important role in cleaning the air, trees provide us with wood, paper, fruit, nuts, shade, natural beauty and a buffer against noise.

Top trees

- One tree absorbs 26 pounds of carbon dioxide every year.
- Planting trees fights global warming.
- Cities are losing four trees for every one planted.
- Plant trees to shade buildings or act as a windbreak; they can reduce energy consumption by 50 percent.

Free brochures for parents

Dear Parents: One of the most dependable professional resources for parents is the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Among their many publications are the following brochures, which are all practical, brief and very readable. They are available at no cost if you request a single copy and write for each one individually. Among the brochures you can request are:

- "A Guide to Children's Dental Health."

- "Television and the Family."

- "Toilet Training: A Parent's Guide."

- "Choking Prevention and First Aid for Infants and Children."

Send a separate self-addressed, stamped business-size (No. 10) envelope for each brochure you want, addressing your request this way: name of the brochure, Department C, American Academy of Pediatrics, 141 Northwest Point Blvd., P.O. Box 927, Elk Grove Village, IL 60009-0927.

When you have received one or more and have had a chance to check through the contents, please share your reactions with me.

Q. Within the next month or two, I plan to return to my job as a legal secretary. I left it when we were having our child, but I think she is now old enough so that I can leave her comfortably — but only if I plan ahead very carefully.

I have seen several articles that tell me how to handle this situation, but I'd like your advice, too. You have shared so many common-sense ideas with others, so now I hope you will help me on this subject.

Thank you for your time and thoughtfulness.

A. Let me quote from a new book that may be right on target for you. I hope it is on your local library or bookstore shelves so you can see it.

Its title is "My New Baby-Sitter" by Christine Loomis (Morrow & Co.), a working mother herself. Suggestions it offers, plus the colorful parent-child pictures, could be of value to you, as well as to your daughter (depending on her age, of course). It seems to be especially useful for you and other working parents who might want to read parts of it with a young child.

Here are some of the tips it offers:

- If possible, include your child in the actual process of hiring a caregiver.

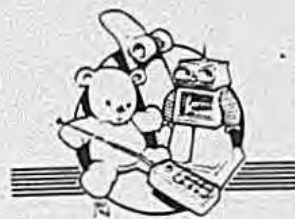

- Remember to always have a written list of important phone numbers for your caregiver.

- If your child is upset about your leaving, never sneak out the door to avoid a scene. You'll only risk making her more dependent and clingy.

- To ensure all continues to go smoothly, talk to your caregiver every day. Talk to your child, as well.

- Make it clear that your child should tell you if she is unhappy with anything about the caregiving situation. (But I'd like to add this: Don't "pump" a child for negative information. It is more desirable to expect that all is going well.)

How to talk to your child about the need for a baby sitter (the author uses that term interchangeably with caregiver), how to reduce the concerns a child may have when parents leave and how to open lines of communication with both baby sitter and youngster are all included.

You can't sit out Chair Dancing

By Jack Williams

Check your pulse at the door and be seated, please. You're about to be taken, kicking and squirming, twisting and churning, into another muscle-tone zone.

The world of high-energy, no-impact aerobics.

Or, as originator Jodi Stolove calls it, Chair Dancing: a new wave-of-the-hands, seat-of-the-pants way to sit and be fit.

Bring your sneakers and sweats. Or even — as in the case of injured Brenda Matthews — your walking, range-of-motion foot cast.

But leave your doubts and reservations, your aches and canes, behind.

Even if you don't have a sound leg to stand on, this is the kind of workout that gets the blood circulating, the heart pounding, and — to hear multiple sclerosis patient Sherry Windle tell it — the muscles pleading for mercy.

"My legs are gonna scream at her all day," said Windle, cooling down after a 45-minute Chair Dancing session.

The object of her protest/praise: Jodi Stolove, an exceedingly taut, contagiously vivacious, 33-year-old originator of a form of dancing in the seats she developed in 1983. By accident.

Stolove devised a range of dance movements that recruits muscles from virtually every part of the body after she broke a foot while teaching a jazz aerobics class.

"I was in a cast," she recalled, "and I needed to continue working, so I walked in with my crutches, sat down in front of the class and realized, gee, everything I could do standing up, I could do sitting down — just about."

Since then, Chair Dancing has been implemented by Princess Cruises and Kaiser Hospitals throughout the Los Angeles area and captured on videotape — available by mail order.

A group of six women, some of whom had already worked out to the Chair Dancing video, gathered under their raven-haired instructor's discerning eye.

Among them: Brenda Matthews, whose running and rowing routines were put on hold a month ago when she slipped on the stairs of her home and broke her right foot.

"This is the first time I've been able to exercise since the accident," she said. "I can feel it in the stomach muscles, the chest and the back."

And sure enough, the pace — which Stolove says can be programmed to three levels of intensity — was enough to jump-start Matthews' heart.

"A 17-year-old girl, very fit, who has been teaching with me got her pulse up to 170," said Stolove. "You increase the workload by increasing the range of motion — lifting your legs and arms higher, upping the energy and enthusiasm. It's a full-body workout. And if you really want to make it harder, you can use ankle-and-hand weights."

"The arms and legs get toned. And you have to use the stomach muscles to lift the legs."

Stolove — a former ballet classmate of Madonna's at the University of Michigan — collaborated with a musician to develop original musical accompaniment.

Among her routines: the cha-cha and the cancan.

"Since I've been doing this," said Windle, "I have more feeling in my hands."

Windle, 42, was diagnosed six years ago with multiple sclerosis, a disease that attacks the central nervous system, impairs muscular coordination and causes blurred vision.

"At first," said Windle, "I would sit in a chair and think, 'Is this really going to help my muscles?' Well, trust me. It does."

"It's awakened muscles I haven't used in ages. Every morning, my legs hurt now — but that's good. I know I've worked the muscles."

"It's an uplifting feeling, knowing I can do something for my body."

To evaluate the effects of her Chair Dancing routine, Stolove (pronounced stow-luv), did nothing but Chair Dancing for a month. (Normally, she walks briskly, runs and practices and teaches other forms of dancing.)

The result? "I've never had a flatter stomach. It's as good or better than other forms of exercise, but I like diversity. For some people, this is the only way they can exercise."

While Chair Dancing itself (which Stolove has trademarked) is relatively new, the concept of exercising in a chair — with musical accompaniment — was devised more than 20 years ago by B.J. (as in Beverly Jean) Morgan-Jensen in Kankakee, Ill.

Morgan-Jensen, who operates a firm called Praiserobics, designed her program for those with limited mobility.

"We used chairs rather than mats and exercised to music, which was new then," said Morgan-Jensen. "At that time, exercise meant military-type calisthenics."

Morgan-Jensen, 46, today works mostly with a senior population, arthritis patients and those unable to perform conventional exercises. Students range in age from 24 to 94.

Said Morgan-Jensen: "Only about 3 percent of the population is doing regular aerobics. Another 3 percent (wouldn't do anything). That leaves 94 percent of the population, and probably 50 percent of those are seniors — one of the biggest, fastest-growing markets there is, but one of the slowest to be addressed."

Morgan-Jensen, who has certification as a cardiovascular fitness specialist through the University of Wisconsin, has — like Stolove — produced an exercise video. Three of them, in fact: "Safe & Sensible," "Lite & Lively" and "Fun & Fit."

"It's safe, rehabilitative and uplifting," said Morgan-Jensen. "You warm up, you stretch and you do cardiovascular exercise for 20 minutes."

And, hopefully, for the rest of your life.

Breaking the botulism chain

Botulism is a sometimes-fatal food poisoning caused by a type of bacteria. Recently the botulin toxin, which kills by silencing nerve cells, has been found helpful for treating some muscle spasms.

The bacteria, Clostridium botulinum, like other clostridia bacteria, cannot survive exposure to air, but its spores can.

Savory pies become main meals

For us, pie comes at the end of the meal. For the rest of the world, pie is a meal.

Around the Mediterranean, main-event pies, frequently without any meat at all, are good enough for company. Once the last resort of poor farmers, pies have been refined into something glorious. Italians and Greeks do wonderful things with vegetables every day. On special days, they put them into pies and call it a feast.

Here are two especially good ones. Don't be put off by the number of ingredients or the length of the recipes. Each may be made in stages and refrigerated. The result is worth every minute.

SPINACH AND RED PEPPER TORTA RUSTICA

Dough:

- 2 teaspoons yeast
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 cup semolina flour
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1½ cups all-purpose flour

Filling:

- 4 large red bell peppers, roasted or 1 (2-pound) jar roasted red peppers or pimientos, drained
- 1½ pounds fresh spinach, rinsed
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 large onions, minced
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme
- 2 eggs
- ½ cup freshly grated Parmesan
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 pound low-fat cottage cheese (2 cups)
- ½ cup chopped fresh basil
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 1 egg beaten with 1 tablespoon water for an egg wash

Yields 8 to 10 servings.

Each serving has 340 calories, 11 grams fat, 90 milligrams cholesterol and 500 milligrams sodium.

For the dough: Dissolve yeast and sugar in 1 cup lukewarm water. Let rest 10 minutes or until frothy. Stir in semolina flour, oil and salt, if used. Stir in 1 cup flour as needed to prevent sticking. Dough should be smooth and elastic, but soft. Place in a lightly oiled bowl and turn once to coat. Cover and let rise in a warm place until doubled in bulk (about 1 to 1½ hours) punch down.

For filling: Cut peppers in half lengthwise, seed and remove membranes. Chop roughly and pat dry. Steam spinach in a covered pan with just the water clinging to the leaves until it wilts. Drain and squeeze out moisture. Heat oil in large skillet and saute onions and garlic until onions are tender, 3 or 4 minutes. Stir in spinach and thyme. Cook a minute or two to blend and cool completely. Lightly beat 1 egg and stir into spinach mixture. Add ½ cup Parmesan and freshly ground pepper. Set aside.

Put cottage cheese in a sieve lined with cheesecloth or coffee filters over a bowl. Let drain until only about a cup of cheese remains (you can squeeze out the moisture to speed things up). Place cheese in a bowl and beat in remaining egg, remaining Parmesan, basil, parsley and more freshly ground pepper.

Preheat oven to 375 F. On lightly floured board, roll out ½ of the dough into a 14-inch circle. Transfer to an oiled 10-inch springform pan. Firmly press the dough into place on the bottom and up the sides. Put half the spinach mixture in the dough. Then add half the chopped peppers, add the cheese mixture, the rest of the spinach.

Roll out the last of the dough for a top crust. Cut steam vents in the top crust and place it over the filling. Fold in edges of bottom crust and pinch the crusts together. Brush the top crust with egg wash and bake for 50 to 60 minutes or until puffed and golden. Remove from oven and cool. Remove ring of springform pan and serve or cool completely and serve at room temperature.

Q. Our porcelain sink has rust spots, which I have not been able to remove. The staining is particularly bad around the drain area. Do you have any suggestions?

A. This is often caused by a faulty faucet or a worn-out drain fixture. It is often best to replace such fixtures to prevent further staining.

One fairly new product on the market, excellent for removal of rust stains and lime buildup on porcelain, ceramic or fiberglass bathroom fixtures is Duro, manufactured by Loctite Corp. (4450 Cranwood Parkway, Cleveland, OH 44128).

It is a non-abrasive cleaner that is sprayed on. It should be allowed to stand for five minutes before rinsing with clear water. Several applications may be necessary for particularly stubborn staining.

If you do replace faulty fixtures, purchase top-quality replacements. Although they are more expensive, a quality chrome-plated brass or stainless product will last years without rust deterioration.

Q. The unglazed tiles in our family room are stained and soiled, a condition left by the previous owner. I do not know the exact nature of the staining. Do you have any suggestions on how I can clean and protect these tiles? I like the look of tile and hope to restore the natural beauty.

A. For maximum protection, the tiles should have been sealed when they were installed. Unfortunately, these tiles are porous and if the staining is on an unsealed surface, it may be impossible to remove.

Your best bet at this time would be to clean the tiles as thoroughly as possible using a solution of ammonia to remove any wax, followed by a thorough scouring of each tile with a stiff bristle brush and an abrasive cleaner. I would suggest that you experiment in an inconspicuous area first to test the reaction on your tiles.

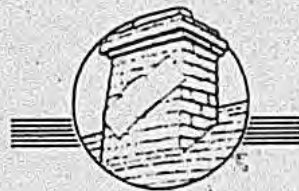

After you have removed as much dirt and spotting as possible, you may want to consider staining your tiles with a color stain. This would probably help camouflage some of the existing staining, although it will not make the colorization of the tile surface uniform. Stains are available in a variety of colors. Check with your local tile dealer, one that carries a large selection of tiles and companion products.

After cleaning (and color staining if you select this option), be sure to seal the tile with a good masonry sealer and apply the protective coatings recommended by your tile dealer. There are several good product lines available that include both sealers and protective finish coats.

Q. I have bathroom sinks that are made of marble dust held together with a hard polymer. Around the drain of each are black marks that appear to be cracks. The sinks are 15 years old and otherwise in good condition. What can I do to correct this unsightly condition?

A. Unfortunately, cracking in synthetic marble cannot be repaired. This type of cracking sometimes occurs when the drain fixture is tightened down too hard during installation. Since the sinks are not new, it is very doubtful that you can hold the manufacturer or installer responsible. You will have to install new sinks to correct the problem.

Q. I want a bedroom that doesn't look like it, since I have this one-room apartment to work, sleep and entertain in. The trouble is, I don't want a sleep sofa or a Murphy-bed thing. Years of living with something you have to pull out and put back convinced me of that.

A. A different idea, if you can, please. — A.M.

A. Different, indeed, and elegant is the all-in-one bed/sitting room in the photo we show here.

The room was designed by a pro, Margot Gunther, ASID, of New York, who put it together around a daybed that doesn't look the part, by day, at least.

The designer heaped on piles of pillows atop a cotton comforter that fits the current "sloppy slipcover" look. The pillows work as a backrest when the bed is in its "sofa" role.

The ideas in the rest of the room are worth a second look, too.

- The desk, catercornered by the fireplace, serves, literally, as an intime dining table or buffet.

- The desk chair can be pulled around to face the "sofa" when company drops by.

- A needlepoint rug, laid over sisal wall-to-wall, focuses the furniture arrangement and breaks the space into different areas visually.

• The cocktail table is definitely double-duty if you have a live-in pet ... a very chic pet. It comes from Manhattan antique dealer John Rosselli and is topped with vintage needlepoint.

Rose Bennett Gilbert is the author of "Manhattan Style" and associate editor of Country Decorating Ideas.

NOVENA TO ST. JUDE

Oh Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, great in virtue and rich in miracles, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, faithful and intercessor of all who invoke your special patronage in time of need, to you I have recourse from the depths of my heart and humbly beg to whom God has given such great power to come to my assistance. Help me in my present and urgent petition. In return I promise to make your name known and cause you to be invoked. St. Jude, pray for us all who invoke your aid. Amen. Say 3 Our Fathers, 3 Hail Mary's, 3 Glorias. Say for 9 consecutive days. Publication must be promised. This novena has never been known to fail. Thank you for answering my prayers. V.B.F. gcf4

MAY THE SACRED HEART OF Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times daily; by the 8th day your prayers will be answered. My prayer has been answered. Say it 9 days. It has never failed. Publication must be promised. B.I. gcf4

HOLY SPIRIT YOU WHO SOLVE

all problems, who light all roads, so that I can obtain my goals. You who give me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evils against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things and to confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you ever in spite of all material illusions, I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. Say for 3 consecutive days after which the favor requested will be granted even if it appears difficult. This prayer must be published immediately. Thank you Holy Spirit. A.R.C. gcf4 thee and to thy petition and faith I offer up to thee this light which I shall burn every Tuesday for nine Tuesdays. Comfort me in all my difficulties through the great favor thou didst enjoy when our Savior lodged in thy house. I beseech thee to have definite pity in regards to the favor (mention favor). Intercede for my family that we may always be provided for in all our necessities. I ask thee St. Martha to overcome the dragon which thou didst cast at thy feet.

O, SAINT MARTHA I

One Our Father and three Hail Mary's and a lighted candle every Tuesday and the above prayer made known with the intentions of spreading devotion to St. Martha. This miraculous Saint grants everything before the Tuesdays are ended. No matter how difficult. A.M. gcf4

ANTIQUE OR JUNQUE

By James G. McCollam

World War II G.I. Joe toy is valuable

Q. Enclosed is a picture of a windup toy, "G.I. Joe and His Jouncing Jeep." It is marked "Unique Art Mfg. Co., Newark, N.J." It was purchased about 1945. Can you give me some idea about its value?

A. This World War II toy is selling in the $145 to $165 range (in good condition).

Q. This mark is on the bottom of a cup and saucer decorated with flowers and butterflies. The cup has two handles and three feet. Can you tell me anything about this Belleek cup and saucer?

A. These were made by Ott & Brewer in Trenton, N.J., during the 1880s. They produced some very fine imitations of Irish Belleek.

Your bouillon cup and saucer would probably sell for about $200.

Q. Please estimate the value and age of my cast-iron bookends. They are painted gold and depict a beach scene with trees in the background. They are marked "B & H" on the bottom.

A. Your bookends were made in Meriden, Conn., by Bradley & Hubbard around the turn of the century. They would probably sell for $65 to $75.

Q. Please evaluate a plate commemorating the U.S. Capitol Building in Washington, D.C. On the back is a picture of a buffalo and "Semi-Vitrous — Buffalo Pottery — 1907."

A. You have all the information there, except for the market price, which is about $35 to $45 in good condition.

Q. I have an old cast-iron bank. There is a monkey that tosses a coin into a lion's mouth. Can you tell me if this is valuable?

A. Let's hope this isn't a reproduction! An original Lion and Monkey bank has sold for more than $2,000.

Take this to a museum where they can examine it for possible authentication.

These were popular in the late 1800s.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. What is cat scratch fever? Is it a dangerous disease? Our children play roughly with our cat all the time. Someday she is going to bite them or scratch them.

A. Cat scratches can cause very serious health problems for humans. Three to 10 days after a person is scratched, a small red bump may appear at the site of the injury. This bump often goes unnoticed. About two weeks following the scratch, the lymph node, which drains lymph from that area of the body, begins to swell. Often the area around the swollen node is sore and tender to the touch. Lymph nodes in the head, neck and armpit are most often affected.

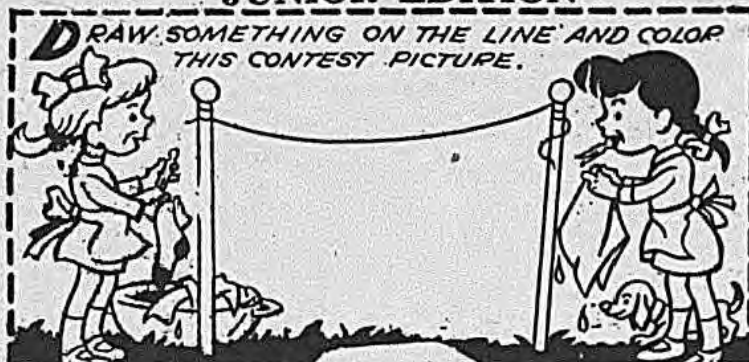

Fortunately, cat scratch fever is usually self-limiting. The swollen lymph node usually returns to normal size within two to four months without any treatment. However, approximately one-third of all patients with cat scratch disease develop fevers, loss of appetite and generally feel weak.

Most cat scratches do not result in serious disease and the fear of cat scratch fever should not cause you to hesitate to have a cat for a pet.

Most cats are well-behaved if treated properly. You should teach your children to play with their cat without causing it to bite or scratch. Unnecessary roughness should be avoided. However, if you are scratched or bitten by a cat, you should consult your physician for advice.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Last weekend I went outside in my backyard and cut armfuls of forsythia branches. I brought them inside and arranged them in several vases filled with water. When I was done they looked like nubby brown sticks, which they were at the time. Some folks poked fun at them. However, during the week, little by little the nubs began to get larger and turn pale green. By the end of the week my brown sticks held a profusion of yellow flowers in each vase. It will be another month or so before they bloom outdoors. You can do this too if you have a forsythia bush, but remember to ask an adult to help you cut the branches.

Your friend
Aunt Tilly

P.S. This week's coloring contest winner is Leigh Trucks.

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Veteran could get higher benefits

By William M. Acosta

Q. I was in military service for three years during the late '40s. Will this count toward my Social Security? — E.D.P.

A. If you served in the military any time since September 1940, you may be eligible for free earnings credit. You will be asked about your military service when you apply for benefits.

If the free credits would make the difference between eligibility and not being eligible, or would mean higher benefits, the Social Security representative will ask for proof of military service.

Q. I recently received my earnings statement. However, it doesn't agree with my own records of the various jobs I have had. What should I do? — J.C.

A. Contact Social Security right away and have available the following information:

- Your Social Security number.
- Your employer's name and address and dates of employment.
- The amount of earnings and proof, such as W-2 forms, pay slips or other proof.

Q. I am 60 years old and am receiving Social Security disability benefits. My wife is 44 years old. If I die before she reaches retirement age, is she entitled to my Social Security? — E.R.

A. Your widow would be entitled to reduced widow's benefits as early as 60 or full benefits at 65 or older. A disabled widow can get benefits at 50 to 60.

There is a special one-time death benefit of $255 that can be made to your eligible widow at the time of your death, regardless of her age.

Q. Will an inheritance from a deceased relative who lived in another state affect my monthly Social Security benefits? — W.K.

A. An inheritance will not affect Social Security benefits. However, if you are receiving Supplemental Security Income, you must notify us within 10 days after the month of receipt. An inheritance is considered income, and any change of income may affect your benefit amount.
