Babes Program At St. Ignatius

Mrs. Karen Solomon recently completed teaching the BABES program to grades pre-K, K, and 1 at St. Ignatius Loyola School. BABES, the acronym for Beginning Alcohol and Addictions Basic Education Studies, is a primary prevention program provided by the Central Nassau Guidance and Counseling Services. The purpose of BABES is to help the children learn to make positive, early decisions about alcohol and drugs.

Mrs. Solomon gave three lessons on each grade level. Each lesson was in story form and was presented through the use of animal puppets. After each story, Mrs. Solomon discussed it with the children, and they answered questions about it.

Hearing Set On Change of Zone

A request for a change of zone to operate a produce business in Hicksville has been scheduled for a Tuesday, June 16, public hearing by the Oyster Bay Town Board, according to Town Councilman, Douglas J. Hynes.

"The applicant, Fortuna Aleixo, is requesting a change of zone from 'D' residence to 'F' neighborhood business in order to construct an addition to an existing one-story garage and utilize the premises for the wholesale and retail sale of produce," Councilman Hynes stated. "The property is located on the east side of Jerusalem Avenue north of Tobias Street in Hicksville."

The meeting will be held in the hearing room of Town Hall East, Audrey Avenue, Oyster Bay, beginning at 10 a.m.

Hicksville Hotline Monitors Graffiti

A committee of Hicksville residents, businessmen, police, and school officials have announced the introduction of the Hicksville Community Graffiti Hotline. This special phone number enables callers to leave a recorded message of any information they think may be helpful in reducing the amount of graffiti in our community. You do not have to leave your name. Information will be forwarded to the appropriate authorities. This hotline number is NOT for the reporting of any emergencies or report of a graffiti activity in progress. "911" should be used for those situations.

The hotline number is (516) 336-6249 and is available 24-hours, 7-days a week. It will be monitored daily.

Other communities on Long Island have successfully used hotlines such as ours to transmit valuable information from the general public to the authorities, which result in a decrease in graffiti activity. Remember, the information that you think may not be important may very well be crucial when pieced together with information supplied by another caller.

Please use this hotline whenever you wish; your call is important to our community.

Safety Assemblies

The Nassau County Police Department presented two safety assemblies at St. Ignatius Loyola School during March.

The first assembly on Bicycle Safety was conducted by Officer Sullivan of the Community Projects Bureau. Officer Sullivan's presentation included rules for bicycle safety and the importance of proper equipment for bicycle safety.

The second assembly was conducted by Officer Neuberger, who presented a program on Pedestrian and School Bus Safety. Officer Neuberger emphasized proper safety procedures on school buses. Both programs included a film and a question and answer period.

Some first graders pose with Officer Neuberger after his presentation.

Hearing Scheduled On Res. Office

A request for a change of zone from "D" Residence to "R-O" Residence-Office in Hicksville will be the subject of a Tuesday, June 2, hearing of the Oyster Bay Town Board, according to Councilman Thomas L. Clark.

Residence-Office to make use of the premises as a chiropractic office," Councilman Clark said. "The property is located on the south west corner of Old Country Road and Clariassa Drive with a street address of 349 Old Country Road."

The hearing is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the hearing room of Town Hall East, Audrey Avenue, Oyster Bay.

Letters

To The Editor:

This letter is in response to Frank H. Willard's letter that appeared in the Mid-Island Times dated March 20.

I take particular umbrage at two of Mr. Willard's statements: 1. Where he stated that the real objective of the teacher aides is "money," he should understand that the "real" objective is to be treated properly and stop being "jerked around." 2. Mr. Willard's statement that "this case is no different than a kitchen helper who peels potatoes and carrots and then wants to be called and paid as a chef, or as a toll collector who wants to wear a gun and be called and paid as a policeman," is totally asinine and denigrates all teacher aides.

He wrote his letter based on his interpretation of a letter written on 2/18 by Linda Hild. My "interpretation" of his letter is that he was very selective in what he decided to comment on.

If he was upset by what the teacher aides are asking for, did he bother to do further research before writing a letter? Did he bother to speak to any current or past students? Did he bother to speak to the parents of past or current students? I think that Mr. Willard made up his mind by reading a letter and not really understanding it completely.

Some may say that this letter is written by a person with a prejudicial viewpoint and they would be correct. It is also written by a person that has seen dedication and caring taken much further than any job description calls for. My wife is a teacher aide and as anyone who has viewed in school performance can attest to, she does more than just what her job performance calls for. She doesn't go "the extra mile" because she wants more pay or because she wants a title. The extra comes from caring and wanting to do what is best for the students. Isn't that what we all want - what's best for the children? Two major accomplishments that I have seen my wife perform is:

1. Tracking down a student that ran away to California and convincing the student to return to New York.
2. Convincing a few students that kept cutting classes to hang in there.

She didn't do this for a title or for money but rather because she saw kids hurting, confused and out of control.

How can Mr. Willard say that the real issue is "money." How many other selfless acts have been performed by teachers aides that are known only to the children and their parents?

As far as wanting the title and the money, the teacher aides have "earned" it over many years performing duties beyond their job description with their supervisors knowing it. Do you think that this may be one of the major reasons that Hicksville is acknowledged as having one of the finest Special Ed. programs anywhere?

I have two questions for Mr. Willard and the school board: 1. If you peeled potatoes and carrots, put them in the pots, stirred the pots and put the finished product on plates after seasoning them, would you expect to be called and paid as a kitchen helper?

2. Once the school board's decision takes place and all the teacher aides are fired and replaced and they look back in 6 months to see that they made a major mistake -- what will they say to the children "We're sorry, we made a mistake." That's one hell of a price for the children to pay because Mr. Mugavero (and predecessors) reneged on promises and refuse to pay experienced people for a job well done and would rather disrupt the children and pay the money to people that the children and parents will view as strangers.

What does the school board expect to gain by firing people doing an excellent job?

It's as though the school board is saying "if you don't play my way, I'm taking the ball and going home."

The children come first and you can't get any better than what you already have.

Middle School Presents 'Pippin'

Middle School drama students rehearsing for Pippin.

The Hicksville Middle School invites you to join them for an evening of magic and merriment when the Drama Club presents the acclaimed musical Pippin on April 2, 3 and 4.

Tickets are general admission and will be sold at the door. If you wish to purchase tickets early, call 933-6646 for ticket information. All seats are $5 and each performance begins at 7:30pm in the Middle School Auditorium. Thursday evening's performance (April 2) is free for resident senior citizens.

Set in medieval times, Pippin tells the story of a boy's search for fulfillment. As the first born son of Charlemagne (Marc Williams), Pippin (Todd Master) is heir to the throne. However, matters are complicated when Pippin's stepmother Fastrada (Kristine D'Amato) and his brother Lewis (Thomas Patrone) plot against him. When Pippin falls at War, Power and Glory, he seeks the advice of his grandmother Berthe (Stacey Patrone) who sings of the simpler things in life. Pippin then tries peaceful domesticity with Catherine (Jennifer Traxler) and her son Theo (Melinda Forresta) but finds he's bored and doesn't want to assume too much responsibility.

With the help of many players acting in different roles, the Leading Player (Annemarie Elenio) leads Pippin along to the Finale, Pippin's ultimate expression of fulfillment (which must remain a surprise!).

Other cast members include: Kristen Antalek, Corrine Callari, Beth Hoffman, Elizabeth Gaynor, Cassandra Braun, Jessica Haupt, Jessica Panica, Melanie Raffo, Jennifer Mierzejewski, Christine Osso and Lisa Santorielma.

The score by Stephen Schwartz is contemporary, embellished with many beautiful ballads, the most famous being Corner of the Sky.

Top Honors For Musicians

Our Bethpage High School student musicians had an outstanding day taking top honors as they participated in the New York State Women's club 2nd district music competition held on Wednesday, March 18 in Floral Park.

Competing against music students representing Nassau and Suffolk county schools in both Vocal and Instrumental divisions, the results were as follows:

Instrumental Division

1st Place: Christine O'Brien - Flute

3rd Place: Matthew Herzog - Piano

Vocal Division

1st Place: Colleen Cannon - Soprano

2nd Place: Allyson Franco - Soprano

Our musicians felt very proud as they proved that the cultural arts are alive and well in the Bethpage Schools. Congratulations to our Bethpage High School Super Musicians.

Sandra Rolston Student Of Month

Sandra Rolston, an outstanding Senior in Bethpage High School, has been named Student of the Month by the Elks Lodge. A quiet, gentle, soft-spoken young woman, Sandra has achieved a high degree of success in Bethpage, earning her rank as number three in her class with a wide diversity of talents.

Academically, Sandra has participated in all the Honors classes, culminating in the four Advanced Placement classes of Math, Biology, American History and Government. Her writing has involved careful research into the problems of society, leading to an excellent essay on poverty entitled, "How Easy It Is To Become Poor And How Hard It Is To Escape." She analyzed Government programs that have failed and hopes that one day she will develop ways to reach the poor more effectively. In Child Study, she developed programs to help four-year olds become more aware of safety and community help.

In sports, she has served as captain of the Varsity Basketball team, as well as captain of the Lacrosse Team playing forward, and she helped her team finish second in the Conference. Ms. Conrad, the Athletic Director, describes her as "dedicated and self-directed, someone who is always willing to spend the extra time it takes."

Her participation in other extracurricular activities has been no less involved. As president of SADD, she organized the "Day of the Dead" in October when one student dressed up in black with a red sash every 22 minutes, attending classes without communicating to others for the rest of the day, symbolizing how many young people have been killed due to drinking. She was active with the Student Civic Association serving as Junior chairperson for the first Senior Citizen Prom. In addition, she has been Senator and Historian for the Student Council. Through Rotary's Interact Club, she has helped raise funds for the Gift of Life Program to bring two children here from Russia for heart operations.

Sandra is clearly someone who enjoys working with people and plans a career in Environmental Engineering and Communications at Boston College or the University Of Virginia. She commends her parents who taught her always to set a goal and strive for it. When she was very young, she remembers always trying to be the best in all things - a worthy goal for us all!

Generations of Americans have contributed to Israel's economic development. This year, Long Island Israel Bonds will honor three Americans from our community. These individuals represent two generations working for Israel on behalf of all Jewish people.

American Jewry is faced with the unprecedented challenge of helping Israel to absorb the massive influx of several hundred thousand immigrants from the former Soviet Union, Ethiopia and Eastern Europe. In 1992 all proceeds mobilized by State of Israel Bonds will be used to assist in the absorption of these new immigrants.

On May 20, 1992, hundreds of Long Islanders will join together and celebrate Israel's past, present and future generations.

Caring For The Earth

Nearly 500 girls and adult members of Girl Scouts of Nassau County gathered at Broadway Mall (Hicksville) to rededicate their commitment to the earth. The event, celebrating the 80th Birthday of Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., launched an 18 month long program of environmental service projects throughout Nassau County.

Girl Scout Executive Vice President Judy Keller said, "Through environmental action, we can give the future of our earth a new direction. No efforts at taking positive environmental action are too small. But we must begin now. We must begin at home and Girl Scouts can make a difference."

Troops throughout Nassau County will be planting trees and bulbs, cleaning up parks and grounds, working with Chambers of Commerce and local civic associations, recycling batteries and magazines, participating in the "Adopt a Whale" program, and contributing in many other ways to the health of our environment.

The program ended with the Girl Scout Chorus performing a most appropriate song, "We Change the World."

To find out how you can join Girl Scouts of Nassau County in caring for the earth, call 741-2550.

Creating and maintaining a vegetable garden to benefit local soup kitchens is how the Hicksville Association of Girl Scouts has chosen to "Care for the Earth." Joining adult volunteers Margie Lampert and Judy Stenson at the 80th Birthday celebration were Daisy Girl Scout Joanne Giordano, Brownie Girl Scout Ursula Simicic, Junior Girl Scout Theresa Lampert and Cadette Girl Scout Christine Povilauskas.

Students Take Part In Jump-A-Thon

On March 117 the Old Country Road students in grades 3, 4, 5, and 6 participated in a Jump-A-Thon for the American Heart Association sponsored by Maureen Kuperberg and Howard Schack. The Old Country Road School has supported the American Heart Association over the past four years by raising about $15,000 in total. The children used single ropes, double ropes, and some very fancy footwork while they jumped egg beater style. Juice and cookies were served by PTA moms Maureen Abberton, Nancy Callari, Jackie Kolm, Terry Perkowski, and Rose Walker.

Temple Plans Blood Drive

By Mitchell Kurnet

Temple Beth Torah held a successful blood drive on Sunday, December 15. More than 40 people donated blood, which will be sent to hospitals in the New York-Metropolitan area.

Rabbi Michael Katz, who was one of the first to volunteer, stressed the importance of donating blood. The human body is the only producer of this fluid, and the volunteer donor is the only replacement source.

The blood drive was a joint venture of the Sisterhood and the Men's Club of Temple Beth Torah. Carolyn Newman and Steve Tilzer worked very hard to organize and coordinate the drive. Long Island Blood Services said it was one of the better turnouts of the year for them.

Applications For Young People's Art Show

Applications are now available for the Young People's Art Show, which will be exhibited at the Hicksville Public Library from Monday, April 13, through Saturday, April 25, according to Oyster Bay Town Councilman Leonard Kunzig.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for young people in grades seven through twelve to participate in an art show and possibly win a cash award, savings bond or certificate," said Councilman Kunzig. "Even those entrants who do not win an award will definitely enjoy seeing their works of art displayed in public."

The Councilman said that only original works of art done in oil, acrylic, watercolor, pastel, graphics, mixed media or sculpture will be eligible for the art show and that work must be properly framed and securely wired for hanging. Since space limitations are always a consideration, no framed work larger than 32" x 40" will be accepted. In addition, only standing sculptures not exceeding 75 pounds will be eligible.

Entries will be received on Saturday, April 11, from 2 to 4:30pm at the Hicksville Library, 169 Jerusalem Avenue," Councilman Kunzig said. "At that time, a non-refundable entry fee of 50 cents for each work will be charged. Entrants should be aware that each artist may not submit more than three pieces of work."

The Councilman noted that the young People's Art Show is being sponsored by the Cultural and Performing Arts (CAPA) Division of the Town's Department of Community and Youth Services, the Independent Art Society and Friends of the Hicksville Public Library. He added that the contest judges will make their decisions on April 13 and that all awards will be presented on April 25 during a special reception at the Hicksville Library between 10am and Noon.

Further information and application forms for the Young People's Art Show can be obtained at the Hicksville Library or by calling CAPA at 795-5943 ext. 7711.

Town Expanding Newspaper Recycling

The Town of Oyster Bay is planning to expand its successful newspaper recycling igloo program at railroad stations in six additional communities, according to Town Councilman Leonard B. Symons.

"Last summer, through the cooperation of the Long Island Railroad, the Town deployed four newspaper recycling igloos, two each at the Hicksville and Massapequa railroad stations," Councilman Symons explained. "Commuter response to the igloos has been so positive that the Town is seeking to negotiate with Long Island Railroad officials about expanding the program into the Bethpage, Farmingdale, Locust Valley, Massapequa Park, Oyster Bay, and Syosset railroad stations."

"Our newspaper recycling igloos are special, heavy duty collection modules designed to take the weight of newspapers," Councilman Symons continued. "Because of the success of this recycling effort, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Solid Waste Division, has expressed interest in our program and has advised us that the Town of Oyster Bay is the only municipality on Long Island using high profile igloos for the collection of newspapers at railroad stations."

During the past six months, S.O.R.T. (Separate Oyster Bay's Recyclables Today) crews have been emptying each igloo twice a week using a specially designed truck equipped with a knuckle boom crane that lifts the igloo so its load can be dropped into a truck. On an average, more than 12,000 pounds a week of newspapers have been collected from the four igloos.

Q. What was the best decision I ever made?

A. To buy my home.

Q. Why did I buy instead of renting a home?

A. I wanted an asset, equity and a tax deduction. Owning a home made more sense for my family.

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Should executives of large companies have to take a cut in pay when the company loses money?

Voters Should Put Pressure On Congress

Most callers to Input believe that the overdrafts of Congressmen should be punished by the voters in answer to this question: "Should there be a penalty against those Congressmen who wrote overdrawn bank checks? Here are some of the answers:

ABOVE THE LAW

The fact that Congress has always considered itself above the law has been evident in many of the civil rights laws which exempt Congress. Now most of us are seeing that even the simplest banking rules do not have to apply to our lawmakers. It is really time that we stop electing incumbents and clean house in Congress. L.F.

SHOULD GET PENALTIES

The same penalties that apply to non-Congressmen should apply to our lawmakers. If you overdraw your checking account you will be embarrassed by the bank by having the check sent back and you have to make good. If you do not you might go to jail and this is probably where a number of our Congressmen belong. F.N.

PRIVATE CLUB

I think this entire thing has been blown out of proportion. The government did not lose any money on these overdrafts. Members of Congress pooled their paychecks and covered one another's overdrafts. So far as I have heard things always came out even in the long run and no public funds were involved. So as I see it, this was just a private club arrangement that has little to do with running the government. J.G.

NO ONE HURT

Most people overdraw their checking account once in a while. For some people who have known resources, the checks are covered by the bank and there is little said about it although a fee is usually charged. In the House bank they apparently did not have to charge a fee and the Congressmen got a good deal. But I don't think that the government guarantee of FDIC applied to the bank and if it lost money I believe the other members of Congress would be out of luck. The practice is a little bit of a flim flam but I think it will stop and no one is really hurt. G.F.

END PRIVILEGES

These Congressmen who talk so self righteously about other people have a few things going for them. They get reduced meals, special clubs to work out in and a special bank that has its own rules. If we are really running a democracy the rules the voters have to follow should be the ones that the legislators are bound to as well. If not, then the voters should decide to clean house on each Election day until the special privileges end. L.F.

SPECIAL POWER

While everyone complains about what Congress members are doing and getting away with most of the complainers are envious of the special privileges Congress gets for itself. They, first of all, decide when to give themselves a raise and then when laws are passed they exempt themselves, so why wouldn't we think they would come up with this ingenious way of beating the banking game? The trouble is human beings are going to give themselves special favors if they are given the power. We must close each door to special power as soon as it is opened. F.V.

ALL ROTTEN

The lame excuses given by the rubber check writing Congressmen are mind boggling. 1. They didn't know they weren't supposed to write rubber checks. 2. The bank was at fault because they didn't tell them they were overdrawn. 3. It didn't cost the taxpayers any money (an allusion to the savings and loan good ole boys). If I overdraw my account I'm liable to a charge three times the face value of the checks up to a max of $7.50 per check plus bank charges. If I knowingly write hot checks it is a criminal offense. In Japan these people would resign from their positions. In the U.S. I believe no one should be above the law. I no longer know who to vote for. I used to vote for whoever was not in power with the idea that a "new broom would sweep clean". They all are rotten. P.J.

SEVERE PENALTIES

In my opinion, the liberties the Congressmen took in freely over-drawing bank checks is unconscionable and should be subject to severe penalties of some sort assuming that it would be impossible to launch formal charges against those who have capitalized on the looseness of or absences of formal policy. Needless to say, the "illegal" perpetuation of such actions would not have been countenanced by chartered banks to the extent the activity was permitted to continue in Washington. Aside from the punishment the practice well deserved, the mere fact that the abuse was permitted to take place and continue actually should have been recognized and corrected through official action within the House at an early stage. Needless to say, the practice should not be overlooked by the constituents in weighing their candidacy for reelection. P.G.S.

Flying With Film

By Dr. Arthur A. Delaney

Once again my father-in-law chided me. The litany was a familiar refrain. "I don't see why you and your wife fly off to all those foreign countries. The people in those places are a bunch of foreigners who don't speak English. Some of them eat with sticks; others paw food with their fingers. If you don't get robbed, you get sick."

He moves into the crescendo. "Why don't you travel in the good old U.S. of A? His finale is a sock in the deficit. "And, why don't you keep what little money you have at home in the country that's treated you so well?"

Some of it is hard to answer, especially his admonishment to "Vacation America." The truth of the matter, I patiently explain, moving almost into a mantra, is that we travel to "difficult" places while we are still young enough to cope with long customs lines, survive passport and visa controls, grapple with foreign languages, calculate currency exchange, ward off dysentery and cholera, foil brigands, and schlep suitcases. We'll board Amtrack, I remind him for the umpteenth time, when we are too old for the unfriendly skies of overseas destinations.

Actually, I don't find any of the negatives a real hardship except for one, and that's the passenger and baggage airport security check. "Why?" you ask. "Isn't the electronic surveillance set up for passenger safety?" Of course it is, but that's not the quibble. I find flying in a bomb-free plane rather comforting. It's just that I like to take a lot of film with me when I travel, and airport inspection machines have been known to fog the pictorial record of otherwise memorable and often exotic experiences. A roll of film may be replaced, but that moment immortalized on the top of Japan's Mt. Fuji at dawn is not easily recaptured.

Airline and government officials claim that inspection machines are what they call "Film Safe." Well, that's a value judgment calling for faith in the official word. A roll of film with a low ASA (say 100 or 200) will travel through most airport inspection machines without too much harm being done. But it should never be forgotten that radiation is cumulative. It is an assault on emulsion that you may soon forget, but one that a roll of film will always "remember."

I have passed through as many as twelve inspection machines during a single trip. If it were not for diligent shepherding, my film would have received a dozen doses of radiation. To thwart risking damage to my film, I have developed (no pun intended) four strategies that work most of the time.

- * Whenever possible, I travel with an empty camera so that it may pass through the inspection station without fogging the film that would have been inside.

- * My film is always packed in a clear plastic bag. In an assertive but calm voice I hold up my bag and request that my film receive a visual examination. If possible, I try to locate the person in charge; an authority figure can -- and often will -- overrule an officious underling.

- * The American Inspectors I have experienced have always been courteous, cooperative, and understanding. Foreign inspectors can present a challenge. This is especially true in Third World Countries where there may be a language barrier and an old model scanning machine. Knowing a few words in the security guard's native tongue is always a help. "Please" and "Thank You" and the universal smile can work wonders.

- * When all else fails, I have in my carry-on bag a lead-laminated film pouch. This can be quickly whipped out, the film inserted, and with the bag closed tightly, go through the X-Ray machine. There are many photographers who have great faith in lead-lined bags. There are just as many who don't. I vote with the latter.

You might also want to write to the Customer Service Department of the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York 14650. Ask for their "Current Information Summary: X-Ray Fog" (Leaflet No. CIS-98). Kodak also discusses the subject with other useful information for travelers in "Tips for Photographing Your Trip Abroad" (Publication No. AC-17). Both are free and are well-worth packing in your carry-on bag.

Most of the time escorting film through the world's airports has been routine and without tribulation. But there are a few encounters that have become memorable.

In Cairo, the attendant focused his attention on my cameras, not on the film. He looked through the viewfinders and even asked me to remove the lenses. Satisfied that they were as intended, only cameras, he let film, cameras, and me pass with as frowny "Ou'ak."

An especially dedicated inspector in Casablanca expressed no interest in my cameras, but carried film inspection to the penultimate. He had me open each and every box, removed the cylindrical containers, and proceeded to make sure the contents of which were as advertised. The personal body search I came to dread never materialized.

In Caracas, the pretty inspector asked me to take her picture. She posed; there was a flash of light; I was passed through with a smile and a "Muchas gracias, Senor." Later relaxing on the plane, I realized there was no way to send her a print. She did not give me her name and mailing address. No matter. There was no film in the camera!

At the busy Narita airport, the inspector, noticing the tell-tale yellow film boxes through the clear bag, tried to start a debate on the relative merits of Kodak vs. Fuji film. Rather than to go the line as I would have liked for an American product, I turned diplomat and praised the quality of my Japanese-made cameras (Are there any other kind, these days?). Well, before you could say "Kenbei", a new Japanese word denoting gut-level contempt for Americans, we and the film were whisked through the inspection and on our way to Hong Kong. But there were times when I was not as diplomatic.

The most interesting encounter occurred at a German airport. I made my request of the Fraulein in charge. "Film nicht gefahrdet durch Gepackkontrolle," she grunted tautologically. "Ja, Ja," I smiled. And in my best fractured German said "I'm sure your machine is safe, but I notice you are wearing a radiation detection badge. I would, therefore, feel more comfortable if you would hand-inspect my film." Here the inspector was joined by an official-looking civilian accompanied by a uniformed guard who was, in turn, accompanied by an ugly-looking sub-machine gun. "Something is wrong?" the official both asked and stated. I repeated my request. Almost offended, he said curtly: "This is a German-made Handgepackdurchleuchtungsmaschine. It is completely safe. You will let the film go through." As the guard released the safety on his gun with an ominous click, my ever-intelligent wife without moving her lips whispered in my ear: "Let the film go through, dear!" Bowing to the highest authority, I let the film go through.

I'm sure other adventures await at airport inspections, but in the distant future there may be none involving film. The new digital cameras just may make it obsolete. But by that time I'll be riding Amtrack To Oz.

If you have questions about etiquette or dining out you may call them in to WE 1-0027 and we will find the answer.
 Q. In a restaurant we often frequent, they do everything right except one thing. A waiter always comes over with the special of the day but never tells us the price. Now we do not quibble about a few pennies but often these specials are much higher priced than other regular items. Don't you think the restaurant should tell us the price when making the suggestion?
 H.Y. A. We think you are right and we have checked several restaurants and they say that they either have a blackboard, a menu insert or the waiter is told to give the prices. Unfortunately since you only gave the initials we have no way of knowing which restaurant you are referring to or we would contact them. You may show this column to the manager and perhaps he will change his system.
 C.H. Q. I thought it was standard fare to get at least two vegetables with an entree but last week at the [name omitted] restaurant we were charged extra for vegetables. Is this right?
 A. A number of restaurants have changed to charging extra for vegetables, particularly fresh ones, but the safest way is to look at the menu and ask the waiter. Sometimes there are extra vegetables and they are the ones that are given an added charge. But there are some restaurants that charge for every item individually.

Look at the person across from you. Odds are cardiovascular disease will kill one of you.

In fact, more than a quarter of the American population suffers some form of this malady, perhaps as high blood pressure or narrowing of the arteries.

Nearly a million died from a heart attack, stroke, or other complications of a diseased heart or blood vessels in 1986 — about two deaths every minute and almost the number claimed by cancer, accidents, pneumonia, influenza and all other causes of death combined.

About 20 percent of the heart disease victims were under age 65, contrary to the common notion that cardiovascular death strikes only the elderly.

We can't control some of the "risk factors" or conditions that increase the odds for developing cardiovascular disease, such as a strong family history for heart problems. However, other risk factors are lifestyle-related and can be modified, such as cigarette smoking.

The heart-savvy know that food choices also can significantly influence three of the controllable risk factors: high blood pressure, high blood cholesterol and obesity.

It's not your fate to suffer premature disability or death from cardiovascular disease. Embrace wellness by maintaining a more healthful lifestyle and learn how you can beat the odds through careful food choices.

KITCHEN HINTS

You like to make fruit pies

But juice bubbles over the pastry.

Here's how to make effective vents:

1. Poke 2 or 3 tubular pastas about an inch or 2 high into the top pastry layer.
2. Or cut out two small holes, roll parchment paper into little tubes and place in the holes.
3. Steam now vents straight up and pressure is released. Juices bubble calmly inside.

Q. While visiting France last year my friend and I ate in an elegant restaurant. We noticed that forks and spoons were facing downward on the tablecloth. Do you know why this was done?

A. This is an old French custom which is gradually giving way to the English and American way of facing forks and spoons upward.

Q. Recently I came across a menu expression that was new to me. Can you explain what "A la burgignonne" means?

A. Translated from the French it would mean "in the Burgundy style" and it refers to any dish served with small onions, spices, bacon, mushrooms and, of course, Burgundy wine.

Q. I often eat with friends at a local restaurant known for its beautiful decor and excellent food. However, for some reason the waiters and waitresses seem to wear glum expressions on their faces. They are not actually rude, but their manner is somewhat curt. Would it be a good idea to say something to the owner?

A. I don't know how the owner will take your comments, but you would actually be doing him or her a favor. It would cost nothing to have the employees a little more gracious and it would most likely increase the restaurant's business. Food and decor are important, but so is pleasant service.

Q. Recently I attended a formal tea in a fine restaurant. I noticed that thinly sliced bread with the crusts left on was served with butter and preserves. Later, seafood sandwiches with crusts removed were also served. Was this unusual?

A. Actually, no. The idea was to provide people of simple and more complex tastes with a variety of pleasing tea accompaniments.

KITCHEN HINTS

Your are beginning to buy wine

But don't know how to store it.

Wines are lazy; here's why:

1. Rest bottles on their sides to keep the corks moist and springy, guaranteeing airtight fit.
2. Oxygen in air hastens white wines turning brown and red wines a deep brick color.
3. Also, heat hastens oxidation. Keep wines in cool place, about 55 degrees F is best.

 We have a message for you.

Each week Litmor Newspapers presents a select dining guide called Reader Ratings to its readers. The guide presents the messages of outstanding restaurants in this area and it also is a forum for readers to tell other readers about why they like certain restaurants.

Reader Ratings, although it is read by up to 100,000 readers is an inexpensive way to meet the public and have the public meet you. Throughout many years, Reader Ratings has helped build loyal followings for some of the best restaurants in the area.

If your restaurant qualifies as a leader in the area we want to talk to you about being included in our guide. The cost is nominal and the results can be great.

In praise of Earth Day

April 22 is Earth Day, a celebration of important aspects of Political Correctness: Preservation and Conservation.

Amid reports of such global catastrophes as vanishing rain forests and holes in the ozone layer, we are becoming more aware of the need to protect our natural resources and wildlife.

The magnificent California condor, thought by some American Indians to transport the souls of the dead to heaven, now stands a better chance of survival from extinction. Several of the birds were released recently from captivity, introduced back into a natural habitat sadly devoid of condors for the past six years.

Dolphins are freer now to frisk through the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific. Publicity about the dolphin-killing seiner nets used to trap tuna launched a campaign to boycott this form of tuna fishing. Dolphin-safe tuna is available on grocers' shelves, and this is the tuna to buy — on Earth Day and every day.

To the benefit of ourselves and our planet, we have begun an environmental turnaround in recent years. We are becoming more aware of the repercussions of a disposable lifestyle, as throwaway containers choke landfills already brimming with trash. We are making progress — but much remains to be done. Bear in mind the following grim statistics:

Fact: The average American family produces 100 pounds of trash per week.

Fact: More than half of the cities in the United States will exhaust their current landfills by the year 1995.

What can you, as a consumer, do to protect and preserve our Mother Earth? Here are some ideas:

- Ask for biodegradable paper bags instead of plastic at the market — and reuse them. Better yet, buy reusable cloth or net bags to tote groceries home. Use plastic vegetable and fruit bags only when necessary. Buying a bunch of bananas? No need for a plastic bag!

- Make it a point to buy recycled paper products: toilet tissue, paper towels, napkins, etc. Limit your use of paper plates, cups, napkins. Instead, use china dishes and cloth napkins whenever you can.

- Don't patronize restaurants that package food in plastic foam containers. Tell restaurateurs you will come back when they switch to a more environmentally safe form of packaging.

- Recycle newspapers, cans, plastic bottles and glass. Use biodegradable detergents.

- Walk or ride a bike, when possible, or take the bus instead of driving.

- Plant a tree.

As you celebrate Mother Earth on April 22, keep in mind the following thought from the American Indians who cherished this land long before "environmentalism" became a watchword:

"We do not inherit the land from our ancestors; we borrow it from our children."

Tell your kids!

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Dr. Abraham: I have been so fond of this boy, and one of the things I've liked best about him is that he is sort of shy. Other girls may like the macho guys who come on strong, but not me.

He has always been so sweet, and I imagine he still is. But last week he asked me to do something that really upset me.

He said that his parents both work on full-time schedules, and they aren't at home during the day. So out of the blue he asked me to come over to his house and, "Please, let's take a shower together." Even that was sweet and quiet the way he said it.

I told him that I didn't want to, and he just walked away. He hasn't called me since then.

It isn't that I don't like him or want to be with him. I do, very much. And I don't want to lose him because he is so special to me. But that suggestion of his was uncomfortable for me.

We are both 15 years old, and he told me I'm his first girlfriend. I believe him. What should I do? — Lonely Lonely: You might consider telling him what you've told me, with your emphasis on three points: how fond you are of him; the fact that you want to keep him in your life; your discomfort with his suggestion and perhaps the reason why. You might say those things on the phone, in a brief note or in person.

Open communication between the two of you is very important, and it sounds like it's you who has to make the first move.

Dr. Abraham: My girlfriend is worried that when I kiss her the way I like to it might lead to a terrible disease, maybe even cancer. She says it causes hickies, and I guess that may be true because I've seen a kind of little red blotch on her neck after I kiss her.

She would be satisfied if I stopped, but I have a question for you: Can a person become seriously sick, like with cancer, from having hickies? I don't think so, but I'd like to be sure. — Lover Lover: I don't think so, either, but you might verify your opinion by asking a professional person like your family physician.

It could be that her concerns might include other factors, such as not liking their appearance or how they feel during and after your contact. How about asking her?

In a book that I mentioned in this column a while back ("Slang and Euphemism"), the word "hickey" is defined as "a red mark left on the body from kissing, biting or sucking the skin." It is sometimes spelled "hickie" or "hicky."

Dr. Abraham: I'll make it simple: He is black, I'm white and I love him. My folks tell me that they won't stand for it, and so do his parents. If I were older (I'm 13) and earning money, I'd tell them what-for, if you know what I mean.

He says that we'd better call it quits, but thinking about that breaks my heart. Sure, there are other spiffy boys around, but I don't want them. I want him.

What should I do? — Help Needed

Help Needed: Although your opening statement looks simple, how to handle it may not be. Unfortunately you seem to be caught in a 5-to-1 issue, with five against (his parents, yours, and now even him) and one for (you). Those are pretty heavy odds against your relationship.

You need an objective opinion from a professional person who knows you and your family well. Your school counselor may be a good choice to listen and discuss all aspects of this situation with you.

Dr. Abraham: I guess I'm like a lot of teens, being kind of insecure about myself. At least I hope I'm not alone with feelings like this. I kind of know I'm not because two of my friends and I have talked about this, and we agree we're all in the same boat.

We are all 14-year-old girls, and maybe not beautiful, but not bad-looking, either. We all hope we will get prettier.

But it's the overall way we feel about ourselves that worries us.

We're all building ourselves up to talk to our counselor at school because that's easier than with our folks. That's sad but true.

Anything recent for us to read that might help us? Thanks loads. — Insecure Girls Insecure Girls: You are right on target with the thought that you three have a lot of company. That is certainly true.

One published source that might be useful to you is a book called "But Everyone Else Looks So Sure of Themselves," by Denise V. Lang (Better Way).

It talks in plain easy-to-understand terms about the insecurities you girls seem to feel.

A passion for chocolate

By Charles Britton

Scientists have figured out that something like 300 chemical compounds are created when cacao beans are roasted to make chocolate. It's one of the most complex transformations of any foodstuff, and the result is a flavor that many people find seductive to the point of virtually certifiable addiction.

The word "chocolaholic" has entered the lexicon; some flaunt the description, others admit to it shamefacedly and many hide it as a secret vice.

"Chocolate is the essential flavor, complex and deep," said Nancy Baggett, author of "The International Chocolate Cookbook" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang), one of the most splendid productions of the current publishing season. "It's intense, mellow, and when it's done right it's very silky."

And then there's that special feel of chocolate in the mouth. Cocoa butter, the fat component in chocolate, has a sharp melting point, meaning that it suddenly changes from a solid to a liquid without going through a greasy stage. Because the melting point is below body temperature, the effect is cooling on the tongue.

Chocolate once had a reputation as an aphrodisiac — and, to an extent, it still does. It contains a bit of the stimulant caffeine, and some researchers have argued that another of its multitude of compounds has an antidepressant effect. To the Puritan mentality, chocolate seems downright sinful. As people say, it's to die for.

That's why there are probably more chocolate recipes than for any other single ingredient. Each year brings a new crop, because publishers keep issuing cookbooks devoted to the subject.

This year, the entries include Baggett's elaborately designed and photographed book, together with a simpler entry, "365 Great Chocolate Desserts" (HarperCollins) by Natalie Haughton, food editor of the Los Angeles Daily News.

It took Haughton a year to test the recipes in her book, but she said that this did not lead to chocolate burnout.

"No," she said, "I love it still. But I did gain weight."

Baggett's taste for chocolate likewise survived the three years spent on her book.

"Every so often," she said, "I have to have a little taste of chocolate."

Chocolate is an ingredient that is technically difficult to work with. Much of Baggett's effort in working on "The International Chocolate Cookbook" went into developing a home method of tempering.

This is a process of melting chocolate in a precise way and then dissolving chunks of more chocolate into it, so that the result has a firm, glossy quality at room temperature, essential for confectionary and in some pastry decorations.

Fortunately, chocolate mixed with other ingredients — in a frosting, say, or in a cake batter — doesn't have to be tempered.

The most common problem people have, Haughton said, is melting the ingredient. Chocolate reacts oddly in the presence of a little liquid. A drop or 2 is enough to cause the mass to "seize," to turn "tight," granular and disgusting, instead of transforming itself into a smooth cream. For this reason, you have to be very careful to melt chocolate in a utensil that is perfectly dry.

It's also wise not to store cooking chocolate in the refrigerator, when you take it out, moisture that condenses on the surface may be enough to trigger a seizure.

"Some people say you can bring chocolate back by adding fat," Haughton said, "but I've never found this to be true. It's best just to start again."

Curiously, a larger amount of liquid — say, a tablespoon or more per ounce — merely causes the chocolate to dissolve into the fluid. But for many recipes, you don't want the extra liquid.

Another problem with chocolate is burning. It catches readily, so you have to exercise vigilance when heating it. Both Baggett and Haughton recommend the microwave for melting chocolate. We suggest various methods below.

As for the brand of cooking chocolate, both Baggett and Haughton are perfectly happy with domestic brands. Guittard got special mention. For most purposes, Haughton said, Baker's, Hershey and Nestle serve perfectly well.

The proof, of course, is in the eating, and you can taste the effect of chocolate in the recipes we have gathered.

Note: Cooking or baking chocolate comes in three grades: unsweetened, bittersweet (called semisweet by some makers) and sweet. Although recipes rarely say so, use of one or the other is, to some degree, a matter of taste. If a recipe seems too sweet using bittersweet chocolate, the next time substitute part of it with unsweetened.

Melting chocolate:

In a microwave — Unwrap chocolate squares if necessary. Place chocolate in a microwave-proof bowl. Microwave on HIGH for 1 to 2 minutes, adding 10 seconds for each additional square or ounce of chocolate. Remove from microwave. Stir until completely melted.

In a saucepan — Using a saucepan with a heavy bottom, melt chocolate over very low heat, stirring constantly until chocolate is just melted.

In a double boiler — Place chocolate in upper pan over hot, but not simmering, water. Stir frequently until chocolate is just melted.

In Vienna, that great home of pastry chefs, this warm dessert is a great favorite. Baggett got this recipe from Dietmar Fercher LA's Cafe Central. The German name means "Moor in a Shirt."

WARM CHOCOLATE PUDDING (MOHR IM HEMD)

- ¼ cup (½ stick) unsalted butter, cut into chunks
- 2 squares (2 ounces) bittersweet chocolate, coarsely chopped
- 3 large eggs, separated
- Pinch of salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ½ cup filberts, toasted and hulled (see note)
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon very fine bread crumbs

Sauce:
4 tablespoons hot tap water
½ cup granulated sugar
3¼ squares (3¼ ounces) bittersweet chocolate, chopped
1 tablespoon rum
1 teaspoon vanilla
Lightly whipped cream for garnish

Yields 5 or 6 servings.

Position rack in center of oven; preheat to 350 F. Generously butter 5 or 6 1-cup baking cups or ramekins.

Melt butter and chocolate together. Stir from time to time, until blended and smooth. Remove from heat and cool until barely warm. Bring 1½ to 2 quarts of water to boil.

In small bowl, beat egg yolks, salt and vanilla until blended. A little at a time, add egg mixture to chocolate mixture until well blended and smooth. Chop nuts and combine with 2 tablespoons of sugar in food processor; grind until nuts are very fine, but not oily. (The same task can be done in a blender, but you will have to stop several times to redistribute contents.)

With electric mixer, beat egg whites until frothy. Raise speed to high and beat until they form peaks. Gradually add remaining sugar and beat until stiff peaks form. Scoop about a quarter of egg whites into chocolate mixture and stir it in. Then add chocolate mixture, nut mixture and crumbs to remaining egg whites. Fold until blended but do not overmix.

Divide mixture among baking cups, filling each ¾ to full. Set cups in larger baking pan. Place in oven and pour in enough boiling water to come about halfway up the sides of cups. Bake 25 to 30 minutes, until puddings are puffed and springy but not completely firm when tapped. Serve warm from oven with sauce and whipped cream, if desired.

For the sauce, combine 3 tablespoons of hot tap water and ¼ cup sugar in medium saucepan over medium heat, stirring until sugar dissolves and mixture comes to a boil. Boil 30 seconds. Off heat, add chocolate, stirring until it melts completely. Stir in 1 tablespoon more of hot water, rum and vanilla.

Note: To toast filberts, place in a 350-F oven for about 15 minutes, stirring from time to time, until light brown. To remove skins, rub in a cloth. Not all the skins will come off. Toasted almonds, walnuts or even pecans may be substituted.

Not all chocolate recipes need be elaborate. The next time you want to whip up a quick batch of brownies for an after-school treat — don't reach for a mix. You can stir up a batch of brownies in 10 minutes or less, using the following recipe for One-Bowl Brownies.

ONE-BOWL BROWNIES

- 4 squares (4 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
- ¼ cup (1½ sticks) margarine
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup coarsely chopped nuts (optional)

Yields 24 brownies.

Melt chocolate and margarine, using either a microwave or double boiler. Use a container large enough to hold all ingredients. Grease and flour a 13-by-9-inch metal pan.

Stir sugar into melted chocolate mixture until well blended. Add eggs and vanilla; stir until completely mixed. Stir in flour until well blended. Stir in nuts. Spread in prepared pan.

Bake in 350-F oven for 35 or 40 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan; cut into squares.

Note: For cakelike brownies, stir in ¼ cup milk with eggs and vanilla. Increase flour to 1½ cups. For fudgy brownies, use 4 eggs. Bake 30 to 35 minutes. For extra-thick brownies, bake in 9-inch-square metal pan at 325 F for 50 minutes.

Pick your plants by degrees

A green thumb isn't difficult; it's fun and it's easy! Here's how to choose the plants that are right for you and how to meet their needs.

Whether you live in an apartment or house, there's a wide selection of plants to choose from. Some love the idea of living in a window loaded with sunshine, others will practically grow in the dark.

Many colorful flowers thrive and bloom all year-round under the proper conditions, while others will be happy in bottles, water, window containers, teacups, baskets or anything else. You can grow plants for fun, food, presents on just because you love them.

If you are just beginning to cultivate your green thumb, start with easy ones and gradually work up to those plants that need more care and attention.

Your very first step is recognizing the conditions of your indoors and choosing the proper plant for it. For example, tropical plants won't do very well on a cool sun porch. On the other hand, cool-temperature plants will not thrive and be happy in rooms kept warmer than 70 degrees.

Here's the way professional growers call their shots, temperaturewise:

- Cool is 55 to 60 degrees during the day, 40 to 50 degrees at night
- Moderate is 65 to 68 degrees during the day, 55 degrees night (minimum)
- Warm is 62 to 68 degrees during the day, 70 to 77 degrees at night

Most plants need light, while a few plants, such as Chinese evergreen, aspidistra, snake plant and dieffenbachia, practically can grow in the closet. Light is the No. 1 need of every plant in order for it to produce its own food to survive.

Most flowering plants need sun to bloom. It may be just a touch, like begonias, or all they can get, like geraniums. Most plants that have distinctly colored leaves also are sun lovers.

The following guidelines can help you decide what plant is right for your dwelling, based on temperature:

- Warm: cactuses, dieffenbachia, dracaena, croton, schefflera, philodendron, gloxinia, spathiphyllum and anthurium.
- Moderate: wax begonia, podocarpus, wax plant, piggy back, pothos, strawberry geranium, azaleas and Norfolk pine.
- Cool: citrus trees, geraniums and ivy.

GARDEN ADVENTURE

This spring, why not try some of the other interesting but less-known vegetables? Most are relatively easy to grow, delicious and healthy and thrive in all parts of the United States.

• Unique greens: Why don't more people grow them?

• Celutec: a marvelous vegetable, a member of the lettuce family. When young, the leaves (rich in vitamin C) can be picked and eaten like lettuce or cooked as greens. But within 90 days of sowing, the central stalk will have matured and be ready to harvest. So simply trim lower leaves and eat it raw, like carrots or celery.

If you choose, braise, boil or steam the stalks, they have an attractive light-green color and a pleasing, mild flavor suggestive of zucchini, asparagus or celery.

• Chicory: There are at least two kinds of chicory, but the one I refer to here is the variety Witloof, also known as Belgian endive. No one will say it's easy to grow, but for serious gardeners who also are serious gourmets, Belgian endive is worth the trouble. It's hard to find in fresh-produce markets and, of course, very expensive when you locate some.

Seeds planted in spring produce tall leafy plants by fall. The roots are then dug and stored in boxes of damp sand indoors. When forced in winter, the roots produce crisp, creamy yellow blanched chicory, which are marvelous for salads and for braising.

• Chinese cabbage: a delightful vegetable with a slightly sweet flavor quite unlike regular cabbage. Try Burpee's new Dynasty Hybrid for a fall crop. Two Season Hybrid is the best variety for a spring crop as it resists bolting in hot weather.

Chinese cabbage is great in tossed salads, shredded for slaw, steamed or stir-fried with other vegetables.

• Watercress: Cress requires a fresh shallow stream, or at least very moist, shaded soil. However, garden cress will grow just about anywhere, including your windowsill!

It is grown from spring to fall, and harvested only 10 days after sowing. In winter, try it in pots on a sunny kitchen windowsill.

• Bok choy: another Oriental green that is becoming very popular in the United States. It matures in less than seven weeks but needs cool spring or fall weather to thrive. The spicy, white, celery-like stalks are used in chow mein and stir-fries.

• Tampala: related to the showy amaranthus sometimes seen in flower borders. It's grown mostly to provide a substitute for spinach in the heat of summer when spinach won't grow well. The tender young leaves are eaten raw in salads or cooked quickly. The stems also may be cooked and served like asparagus.

Reading problems don't always mean dyslexia

Q. I really am puzzled about our little boy. He is only 6 years old, and his teacher told me that he is dyslexic because he seems to be slow in learning to read. My sister also is a teacher and she tells me to relax and wait and see what happens to him. She says that many young children catch on, so don't get hysterical.

I'd appreciate your opinion. Obviously, this is worrisome for me. Thank you.

A. Your sister may have a good point. It seems to relate to a recent study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

This research stated that only 28 percent of children classified as having dyslexia in first grade still had it in third grade. By sixth grade, just 17 percent were still considered dyslexic.

Although the odds are on the side of your little boy, it is difficult to tell whether a child's apparent slowness really is dyslexia or the result of slower maturing or due to some other reason.

So continue to keep in close touch with his teachers and also with a reading specialist if his school has one.

Q. Your response to a letter you received about a child who bites was very interesting to me. Our 3-year-old was like that.

Our neighbor asked if she could bite her back; she had older children and said it was the only cure. So I agreed, she did it, and my daughter was cured. To this day, some years later, my daughter doesn't think it was right, but she doesn't resent me for permitting it.

The thing about children's biting is that they have no idea how much pressure they can exert and how much a bite hurts unless someone does it to them. An adult, of course, in biting back should control it so that it is not dangerous. I don't like to think that biting back is the only thing that works, and I hope it isn't.

I have known some people who have a child bite his or her own arm just to see how much it can hurt. Usually young children aren't sophisticated enough to bite less hard on themselves and are surprised at the pain.

A. Thank you for your input. However, I continue to be skeptical about biting back as a solution. It may be interpreted by children as acceptable behavior for adults but not for them. That may seem to them like peculiar behavior and a strange model for adults to provide.

What may work in correcting this early-childhood practice is showing disapproval, indicating by words or facial expressions that the behavior isn't acceptable, identifying some resentment the child may feel or reducing or removing unnecessary restrictions or discipline.

Nutritionist's plan for healthy meals

By R.J. Igeelzi

Fast food doesn't always mean junk food. In fact, eating in a hurry can be downright healthy, said registered dietitian Mary Donkersloot, author of the new book, "The Fast Food Diet" (Simon & Schuster).

"You don't have to compromise good nutrition just because you're eating on the run. Lunch at Jack in the Box or a frozen dinner at night doesn't mean you've blown your diet. It just means you'll need to make some informed and healthy choices," she said.

For example, instead of ordering Jack in the Box's Swiss and Bacon Burger, which packs 678 calories and 47 grams of fat, Donkersloot suggests trying the Chicken Fajita Pita. You'll save nearly 400 calories, 40 grams of fat and a lot of guilt.

Only have time for frozen fare? No problem, said Donkersloot, director of her own nutrition consulting firm. Pop a Healthy Choice Chicken Dijon dinner into the microwave. It weighs in at only 260 calories with 3 grams of fat. It's a much smarter choice than Banquet's Chopped Beef Meal, which has nearly twice the calories and 10 times the fat.

Of course, making the right nutritional choice isn't always so easy, especially when you're hungry and in a hurry.

That's where "The Fast Food Diet" may come in handy, if you can overcome the confusing organization of her book.

In one section, Donkersloot offers a helpful rating system for fast-food chain menus and packaged grocery items. In another, she lists a 21-day eating plan, with nutritious recipes. The problem is, she doesn't show us how to incorporate the rating system into the 21-day eating plan.

Donkersloot joins a growing corps of authors trying to help people sort out the nutritional information about fast foods. Among them are Marion J. Franz, whose "Fast Food Facts" was first published in 1984 (DCI Books); Monte Florman, Marjorie Florman and the editors of Consumer Reports, with "Fast Foods — Eating In and Eating Out"; and Barbara Kraus, whose "Calorie Guide to Brand-Name and Basic Foods" (NAL) includes information on fast-food restaurant favorites.

Donkersloot's book is ambitious — maybe overly so. Along with the rating system, it offers helpful diet tips, the 21-day menu plan and 100 quick and nutritious recipes.

On a 1 to 10 scale, 10 being the healthiest, Donkersloot grades restaurant and fast-food outlet selections, frozen entrees, boxed meals, canned goods and commercial snacks, desserts and beverages.

The scale Donkersloot uses is based on factors from the 1988 "U.S. Surgeon General's Report on Health and Nutrition." It takes into account the total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, salt, sugar, fiber, vitamins and minerals in one serving.

"My clients were always asking me things like, 'Is it OK if I eat ice cream?' or 'What's healthier, a hamburger or a taco?' I found the best way to answer them, a way they could personally relate to and understand, was to use a simple rating system," said Donkersloot, whose slim figure and boundless energy are proof of her own healthy eating habits.

"For instance, when you see that Taco Bell's bean burrito is a 9 and their Meximelt is a 4, it becomes obvious which is the healthier option. This enables people to see the whole picture and how one food choice affects their overall nutrition."

BALANCING ACT

Now, don't get discouraged if your favorite Pepperidge Farms Lido cookies scored a lowly 2 or Kentucky Fried Chicken has 26 grams of fat per thigh. Just because a food rates a low score doesn't mean it's forbidden, Donkersloot said.

"There are no good and bad foods, just good and bad diets. If you eat a high-fat, lower-rated food but balance it out with other low-fat, high-rated choices, you can still have a healthy diet," she said.

She realizes that fast-food chains are constantly coming out with lighter items that won't be found in her book, yet she believes it still serves as a useful reference for people trying to make healthy food choices.

Donkersloot suggests aiming for a gradual improvement in your diet. About 65 percent of food selections (18 out of 28 meals or snacks per week) should be rated 8 or higher, 25 percent (seven out of 28 meals or snacks) should fall into the 5 to 7 range and only 10 percent (three out of 28 meals or snacks) should have scores from 1 to 4.

This is where her plan gets complicated. It requires not only a lot of bookkeeping and math, but also frequent page flipping. For example, in calculating one daily menu, you must go from a food plan on page 90 back to page 52 for alternate sandwich listings, then to page 135 for fast-food restaurant options, then to the back of the book for recipes.

Whew. By this time, you've worked up a real appetite and a lot of frustration — not an ideal state of mind for sensible dieting.

Donkersloot's goal in designing the "Fast Food Diet" was to create a healthy and common-sense eating plan the entire family could live with.

Unrealistic diets don't work, she found out as the nutrition director at the now-defunct Nathan Pritikin Center here. The Pritikin Center is credited with focusing the nation's attention on no-fat diets in the early '80s. Dieters were enthusiastic and optimistic in the beginning of the program, but quickly became discouraged and dropped out.

"The plan was just too rigid. People were getting great results. Their weight and cholesterol were down. Their diabetes was under control. But they simply couldn't stick with it," she said. "That's when I decided I wanted to bridge the gap between the ideal and practical. I wanted to honor people's need for a low-fat diet, but I wanted it to fit into their lifestyle. Plus, I wanted the food to taste good."

FAST FOOD AT HOME

Although Donkersloot says there's nothing wrong with many commercial fast foods, she thinks some of the healthiest, cheapest and tastiest quick meals can be prepared in your own kitchen.

To demonstrate her point, she lists 21 days of healthy menu plans consisting of foods that can be prepared in 20 minutes or less. She also features more than 100 nutritious, fast recipes, including Scrambled Eggs With Spinach in a Pita, Pasta Salad With Artichokes and Basil, Cajun Chicken and Better Pumpkin Pie.

The rating system is not applied to the foods in the 21-day menu plan. If you want to substitute food from a fast-food restaurant or frozen meal, then you're on your own.

Donkersloot said the "Fast Food Diet" is more of a healthy eating plan than a weight-reduction diet. But if you follow the 21-day menu plan and an aerobic exercise routine, you can expect to lose one to two pounds a week, she said.

Comfort foods

Treats are not always sweet, but they are always slightly wicked and they are essential. Everyone has childhood memories of the ice cream cone that made a skinned knee all better, the gumdrop that fixed a splinter, a special birthday cake made just for you. These were therapy for life's darker moments. And they worked.

They continue to work, at least for me, as a grown-up.

Now, however, I plan them in advance. Treats no longer are gumdrops or ice cream cones. I collect recipes for comfort foods I have learned to love such as quesadillas or tostadas and try them out with low fat and salt.

It takes awhile to get them right. They don't always taste like treats the first time. But once I've perfected them, the recipes go up on my refrigerator. The ingredients stay in my freezer.

When I've had too many nos, when the bathroom scale won't come up with the right number despite what I feel is a week of deprivation, I make up a treat. It may be all I eat for one meal, but it's uplifting.

Here are snack/lunch versions of quesadillas, chili and tostadas. All are lower in fat and sodium than their standard twins. All still have great flavor. Pin them up on the refrigerator and use them as needed.

QUESADILLAS

- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- 1/4 cup thinly sliced onion
- 1/4 cup red or green bell pepper strips
- 1 garlic clove, minced
- 12 ounces reduced-fat cheddar cheese, shredded
- 1 tablespoon plus 1 1/2 teaspoons whipped cream cheese
- 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
- Pinch ground cumin
- Pinch crushed red pepper flakes
- 2 (6-inch-diameter) flour tortillas
- Garnish:
- Cherry tomato
- Lime slice
- Italian parsley

Yields 2 servings.

Each serving has about 200 calories, 11 grams fat, 24 milligrams cholesterol and 350 milligrams sodium.

Heat 1/4 teaspoon of oil in non-stick skillet. Add onion, bell pepper and garlic and cook until pepper is tender-crisp. Remove from heat and set aside. Put cheeses, cumin and red pepper flakes in a bowl and mix with a fork.

Preheat oven to 450 F. Put half of onion mixture on bottom half of a tortilla. Add cheese mixture. Fold tortilla over other half of tortilla and press. Do the same with other tortilla.

Place tortillas on non-stick baking sheet, brush with remaining oil. Bake until cheeses melt, about 5 minutes. Cut each tortilla in half and garnish with tomato, lime and parsley. Recipe can be doubled and tripled.

MEXICAN CHILI

- 2 tostada shells
- 1 1/4 cups chili
- 1 cup shredded lettuce
- 1 medium tomato, diced
- 1/4 medium avocado, pared and diced
- 2 tablespoons light sour cream

Yields 2 servings.

Each has about 390 calories, 19 grams fat, 45 milligrams cholesterol and 970 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 375 F. On non-stick baking sheet arrange tostada shells and bake until brown. Remove shells from oven to individual plates. Top each shell with half the chili, lettuce, tomato, avocado and sour cream. Serve at once.

CHILI

- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 2 1/4 cups chopped onions
- 5 cups chunky salsa (store-bought or homemade)
- 1 (10-ounce) can red kidney beans, rinsed and drained
- 15 ounces cooked sirloin steak cut into 1/4-inch pieces
- Freshly ground pepper to taste

Yields about 7 1/2 cups.

Each 1/4 cup has about 180 calories, 6 grams fat, 40 milligrams cholesterol and 800 milligrams sodium. (Chili nutritional values are already added to the tostada recipe above.)

Heat oil in large saucepan and add onions. Cook over medium heat until soft. Add salsa and beans; stir. Simmer until flavors blend, at least 20 minutes. Add steak and freshly ground pepper. Stir to combine and cook until steak is hot, but still rare, about 10 minutes.

Freeze unused portions in 3 1/2 cup or 1-serving portions.

ORIENTAL TACOS

- 1 teaspoon teriyaki sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon vegetable oil
- 1/4 teaspoon sesame oil
- 10 (3-by-3-inch) wonton skins
- 1 teaspoon sesame seeds

Yields 4 servings.

One serving of 10 chips has about 120 calories, 3 grams fat, 15 milligrams cholesterol and 125 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 400 F. Put teriyaki sauce and oils in small bowl. Cut each wonton into quarters. Brush both sides of each quarter with teriyaki mixture and arrange on non-stick baking sheet. Sprinkle each with sesame seeds. Bake until they begin to color, about 6 minutes. Serve chips as they come off the baking sheet or cool and store in an airtight container.

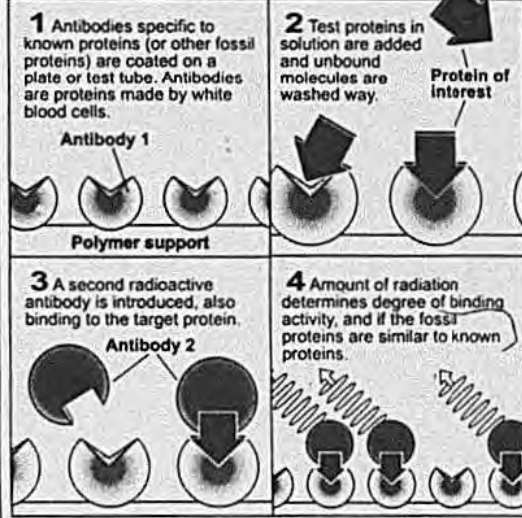

DISCOVERY

Testing ancient proteins

If scientists wish to determine how closely fossilized proteins (from blood, skin, urine, etc.) are related to known proteins, and therefore to known animals, immunoassay testing is employed.

Immunoassay testing

Paleontologists have begun using such testing to categorize fossilized proteins when there is too little substance or no DNA present. Antibodies, an immune system's warriors, are sensitive to trace amounts of various proteins.

Q. Would you please provide information on how to remove radiator rust from a cement driveway?

A. Although we have covered this subject previously, we are happy to repeat the answer as we keep receiving numerous requests for this information.

Mild rust stains can usually be removed by mopping with a solution containing 1 pound of oxalic acid powder per gallon water. After two or three hours, rinse with clean water, scrubbing at the same time with stiff brushes or brooms.

An ammonified solution of thioglycolic acid can be used in place of the oxalic acid solution. Bad spots may require a second treatment.

For deeper stains, try a solution of one part sodium citrate dissolved in six parts lukewarm water and mixed thoroughly with seven parts of lime-free glycerol (glycerine). Make a stiff poultice with calcium carbonate or kieselguhr (diatomaceous earth used for polishing).

Apply a thick layer on the stain with a trowel and leave for two or three days. Scrape or brush off when dry. Wash thoroughly with clear water. If staining persists, the treatment should be repeated. Ammonium citrate can be used in place of sodium citrate for more rapid stain removal, although this solution may tend to etch the surface slightly.

Another stain removal method, recommended for particularly deep and intense iron stains, is to saturate a bandage with a solution of one part ammonium citrate or sodium citrate and six parts lukewarm water and apply it over the stain for half an hour. The solution also can be brushed on the stain at five- to 10-minute intervals.

Following this treatment, if the stain is on a horizontal surface, sprinkle it with a thin layer of sodium hydrosulfite crystals, moisten with a few drops of water and cover with a poultice made of powdered inert material and water.

On a vertical surface, place the poultice on a trowel, sprinkle on a layer of sodium hydrosulfite crystals, moisten lightly and apply to the stain so that the crystals are in direct contact with the stained surface. Remove the poultice after one hour. The operation may have to be repeated with fresh materials if the staining is not completely removed.

When the stain disappears, scrub the surface thoroughly with water and another application of the sodium citrate solution, as in the preliminary operation. The purpose of this last step is to prevent the reappearance of the stain.

Occasionally, brown iron stains can turn black when treated with sodium hydrosulfite. This also may happen if the poultice is left on for longer than one hour. Should the stain become black, treat it with hydrogen peroxide until it is oxidized back to the brown color. The sodium hydrosulfite treatment should then be resumed proceeding as above.

Unless adequate ventilation is provided, this method should not be used indoors because a considerable amount of toxic sulfur dioxide gas will be emitted when the sodium hydrosulfite comes in contact with moisture. Use proper respiratory safety equipment.

When working with acid mixtures, be sure and pour the acid into water (not water into acid), avoiding splashing. Wear old clothes, rubber gloves and eye goggles.

The treatments described here for rust stains are those recommended by Portland Cement Association.

Q. We got our new house for a really good price because of the kitchen — it makes Dagwood and Blondie's look avant-garde modern! While we are saving to remodel (hopefully, this fall), I need some very basic information.

Like, what is the real difference between stock and custom cabinets, what do they mean by "frameless" cabinets and how can I tell if what I buy is any good? — L.B.

A. For such nitty-gritty info on wise buymanship, I tapped the expertise of a certified kitchen designer, a "CKD." Those initials behind a designer's name mean that he or she has been certified by the National Kitchen and Bath Association, and must meet certain standards and ethics set by the association.

While it is no guarantee of design talent, you have some assurance that you're dealing with a reliable professional. That's crucial when you're making a major investment like remodeling a kitchen. On to your questions:

• Custom cabinets are built to order to fit both your exact measurements and your exacting style requirements: type of wood, laminate color, decorative designs and such. The cabinets in the custom kitchen we show in this photo are all made specially to order (by Rutt).

• Stock cabinets, on the other hand, are manufactured in standard sizes from 9 to 48 inches wide (increasing in 3-inch increments). Even with stock cabinets, however, you often can find variations in depth, toe-kick height, etc., to meet special needs.

• The bottom-line difference: Custom cabinets are like a tailor-made suit, as opposed to buying off-the-rack. You pay for individualism and extra quality.

• "Frameless" cabinets are a sleek, European idea that has been around for a decade or so. There are no center mullions (vertical supports), and when the doors are opened, there's no obvious frame around the front. Frameless cabinets offer more adjustability of shelves, easier access to the contents and permit hidden hinges.

• Earmarks of quality construction are much the same as for any kind of case goods: smooth, quiet operation, adjustable shelves, self-closing hinges, mitered or dovetail corner construction in drawers, finished backs and floors and (for laminates) finished edges and matched undersides on wall-hung units.

Get all the checkpoints from the people closest to this subject: Write the Kitchen Cabinet Manufacturers Association, 1899 Preston White Drive, Reston, VA 22091-4326, and ask for their booklets.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never known to fail). Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me, I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. ANTIQUE OR JUNQUE

By James G. McColam

Cabinetmaker didn't leave his mark

Q. This is a picture of our oak kitchen cabinet. I would like to know who manufactured it, date of manufacture and current retail value.

A. Since your kitchen cabinet is unmarked, it is impossible to identify the maker; it was made in the early 1900s and would probably sell in an antique shop for $800 to $900 in good condition.

Q. The attached mark is on the bottom of a hat-pin holder that is 6 inches tall and 3 inches in diameter. It is fine porcelain and hand painted with daisies and poppies.

Can you tell me anything about the origin and value?

A. This mark was used by the Schlegelmilch brothers in Suhl and Tillowitz, Germany, during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

Your hat-pin holder was probably made about 1910 and might sell for $125 to $135.

Q. Please provide me with whatever information you can about my figurine of a brown and white spaniel dog holding a ball in his mouth.

It is about 6 inches high and marked with a crown and the letters, "R.C."

A. The mark indicates that this was made by Rosenthal China in Selb, Germany.

It was probably made in the early 1900s and might sell for $125 to $135.

Q. I have a small cream pitcher in the shape of a cow. It has a white body with orange spots, tail and horns. It is marked "Czechoslovakia."

I have been told that it is over 100 years old. Can you confirm this? I would also like to know its value.

A. This cream pitcher is not 100 years old. Czechoslovakia was founded in 1918; anything so marked was made after that date.

It would probably sell for $35 to $45.

Q. The mark on the bottom of my vase is an eagle with the letters, "M.Z." The vase is 10 inches tall and has a portrait of an old-fashioned lady in an elaborate gown.

Can you tell me anything about its origin and value?

A. The mark you describe was used by the Moritz Zdekauer Co. in Althofen, Austria, during the late 19th century.

It would probably sell for about $125 to $135 in an antique shop.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. Our Boston terrier puppy does not seem to be able to hear us. Can puppies and kittens hear at the time they are born? Are there hearing tests for animals? The puppy seems to be normal in every other way.

A. Apparently kittens begin to perceive sounds at approximately 5 days of age. Normally, hearing is fully developed in dogs and cats by the fourth or fifth week of life.

Many white cats with blue eyes are deaf. The receptor organ in the inner ear of these cats is absent. Dogs that have a predominance of white hair color and dogs that possess the merle color gene also have a high incidence of congenital deafness.

The Dalmation, Austrian heeler, English setter, Austrian shepherd, Boston terrier, old English sheepdog and bull terrier are a few of the dog breeds that most often have this problem.

Unfortunately, hearing cannot usually be restored for dogs and cats with congenital hearing loss. Your veterinarian can determine if your dog or cat has a hearing deficiency.

Aunt Tilly's Corner

A lady that I know has just found out that she is going to have a baby this year. She is very happy about it, and is trying to make sure she takes care of herself so that the baby will be healthy.

She says she isn't sure whether she wants a boy or a girl more. Sometimes she wants one and sometimes the other.

In any case, the mommy and daddy want the baby very much, and are making one room in their house into a nursery for it.

Do you know any ladies who are going to have babies soon? Or have your mom and dad given you a younger brother or sister. What did you think? Write and tell me.

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

P.S. This week's coloring contest winner is Christina Shanahan.

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Report changes in earnings immediately

By William M. Acosta

Q. When I initially filed for Social Security benefits, I gave an estimate of my current year's earnings. I forgot to include my overtime or Christmas bonus. Should I notify Social Security now, or wait until the year ends? — A.S.

A. A change in your earnings estimate should be reported immediately. Each check that you receive based on an incorrect estimate will cause an overpayment. This money will have to be repaid to Social Security.

You can report any changes in your earnings by phone or by mail. The telephone number is (800) 772-1213.

Q. I will turn 70 in early July 1992. I am going to continue working full time and will make over $60,000. Am I entitled to all of my checks the year that I turn 70? — D.H.

A. No. We will count your earnings for the months before the month you reach age 70. Earnings in or after the month you reach 70 will not affect your Social Security benefits.

Q. I understand the Social Security work test for a self-employed person is different than for an employee. Can you please explain the self-employment work test? — G.N.

A. If you are self-employed, you can receive a Social Security benefit for any month you do not do "substantial" work in your business. Work of more than 45 hours per month is generally considered substantial. Less than 15 hours is not.

Work between 15 and 45 hours is usually considered substantial if you are involved in management or a highly skilled occupation.

Q. I receive Supplemental Security Income disability. I will be 60 years old in May 1992. My deceased husband worked under Social Security. I don't want to file for widow's benefits until I am age 65.

I was told that I have to file for the widow's benefit at age 60. Is this correct? — M.G.

A. Anyone who files for SSI or receives SSI must file for any and all benefits due from any other sources.
