The evening proved to be fun-filled with many of the candidates and candidates wives modeling the beautiful fashions from Fox's Apparel of Mineola and Peter Duffy Furs.

HHS Grads AP Scholars

Four Hicksville High School graduates of the Class of '92 have been named AP Scholars by the College Board. The students were recognized for their exceptional achievement as a result of their performance on the May 1992 AP examinations.

The College Board has named Albert S. Hahn AP Scholar with Distinction. The award is given to students who earn 3 or above on five or more AP Exams with an average exam grade of at least 3.50.

Hicksville graduates John Butt and Soo Young Kim have been named AP Scholars with Honors. Students qualified for the award by earning a grade of 3 on four or more exams with an average grade of at least 3.25.

James L. Fitzsimmons received the distinction of AP Scholar. He completed three or more exams with grades of 3 or higher.

Only about eleven percent of the 388,000 students who took AP Examinations in May 1992 performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

Art Exhibit At Library

The artworks of three prominent Long Island artists are on view at the Hicksville Public Library from now through Tuesday, October 20. Included in the exhibit are atmospheric oil paintings by Cynthia D. Brown of Garden City, silk screen paintings of great spontaneity by Ann Israeli of Woodmere and explosive mixed media works by Barbi Yellin of Merrick. The exhibit is open to the public during library hours in the Kenneth S. Barnes Community Room.

Good Shepherd Annual Fair

The Annual Good Shepherd Fair will be held on Saturday, November 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., in the school gymnasium.

The Fair will feature hand-crafted originals for the home and holidays. There will be baked goods, jams and jellies, Christmas decorations, a vegetable stand, a white elephant table and much more. Lunch will also be available.

Good Shepherd is located at 99 Central Park Road, Plainview, adjacent to Plainview High School.

Town Budget Hearing Day-Night Sessions

The Oyster Bay Town Board recently set a Tuesday, October 20, day and night public hearing on the 1993 budget proposed by Supervisor Lewis J. Yevoli. The hearing will be held at Town Hall, Oyster Bay at 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

According to Councilman Douglas J. Hynes, the Town Board's Republican Majority Leader, the Republican Majority is committed to providing a major tax cut for Town residents in 1993. "While the budget proposed by the Supervisor contains such a cut," said Councilman Hynes, "my fellow Town Board members and I have many questions as to how he arrived at this bottom line."

Councilman Hynes explained that since the Supervisor submitted his proposed budget in stages, with final amendments coming as late as today - five days beyond the September 30 deadline mandated by State law - the Town Board members had neither the time nor access to needed information to allow them to review and analyze the Supervisor's budget as a complete document.

Assembly Candidates At GOP Club

Assemblyman Phil Healey, left, is congratulated by Theodore Roosevelt Republican Club President Buddy Mazzara at the Bethpage organizations last meeting. Healey was the overwhelming victor in the recent primary election and came to the club to thank everyone for their support. "Assemblyman Healey is a friend of the taxpayer," said Mazzara, "and we look forward to helping him win reelection this November." Healey, formerly the ranking Republican member of the Assembly Committee on Commerce, Industry and Economic Development, currently serves as a member of the committees on Aging, Governmental Operations and Rules.

John Canning, Candidate for the Assembly from the 13th District, introduces Menetta Modica as his campaign's Bethpage Coordinator to the members of the Theodore Roosevelt Republican Club at last month's meeting. "John made a big impression on our membership," said Modica. "Everyone is looking forward to hearing him speak again."

College News

Theresa M. Adamaites is a member of the freshman class at Hartwick college in Oneonta, N.Y. Adamaites is the daughter of Eileen and George J. Adamaites of Syosset. Hartwick College, a private, liberal arts college specializing in hands-on learning, is located an hour west of Albany, New York in the western Catskill Mountains.

Jason C. Flahbein, a resident of 241 Baird Court, Woodbury, has entered the Class of 1996 at Union College this fall to study biology.

This student is a recent graduate of Syosset High School.

Union, an independent, coeducational college with about 1900 graduates, offers programs in the liberal arts and engineering. Founded in Schenectady, in 1795, Union was the first college chartered by the New York State Board of Regents and is among the oldest non-denominational colleges in the country.

To recall old radio days, I bought 2 cassette tapes. One Fibber McGee and Molly and one Baby Snooks with Fanny Brice. I should have bought a couple more. Going back to those days, I heard them on a homemade radio that used a car 6v battery, 2-45v B batteries and a C battery plus an outdoor antenna to the pole in the back yard.

It was the radio shown in photo th is week, was the late 20's, early 30's. Listening to it, I sent my Kellogg's boxtops in for my Buck Rogers in the 25th Century book & picture, which a few years ago a man bought them as a collector. At supper time we listened to Myrtle & Marge.

How many remember, when the Fire Department had a large diameter ring outside, that would be struck to summon the firemen. I have seen one but can't locate a photo. In 1950, South Oyster Bay Road was approved to be rerouted to the present location, so that Grumman could lengthen their runways and also they gave the land for rerouting the road.

When the Hicksville Motor Vehicle branch was on Jerusalem Avenue (now the parking area of the bank) about 17,000 passenger plates had been sold in this office in 1950.

Hicksville Fire Football's Opening Day

Hicksville's midget football team "Fire Football" had their opening day ceremony on Sunday, October 4. Al Ciacchio, the head coach and founder of Fire Football, officiated over the proceedings. Father Ronald Robahdo of Our Lady of Mercy Parish in Hicksville offered an inspirational opening prayer.

Al started the program by introducing Joe Bentrewe who has been the president of PAL for 20 years - his wife Elenore has been Secretary of PAL for 20 years also. Police Officer Bill Toelstedt who has been in charge of Hicksville PAL for 19 years was presented.

Al then proceeded to introduce supporters who were involved in helping Hicksville Fire Football become a reality. George LaMond, President, and George Ruggerio, Director of North Shore Athletic Alliance, both of whom were instrumental in allowing us to become league members. Mr. Quarttrini, the varsity coach from Hicksville High School has been in full support of our team from day one.

Members from our business community that lent their support were also introduced and plaques showing our appreciation were presented. Mr. Pete Kalogridis of Peter Kal Texaco on Plainview Road in Hicksville. Mr. Mark Ramirez of Mr. Electric, Broadway, Hicksville and Mrs. Vicky Passaro of Photo Mat in Delco Plaza, Hicksville.

Three men that have come down recently and devoted their time and talent to help coach our boys were presented. Dave Engelhardt, Hicksville High School graduate and ex-football player. Gary Marangi, former football star at Boston College and 4 year quarterback for the Buffalo Bills in the NFL. Dennis Sheehan, Hicksville High School graduate and former defensive end for St. John's University. Their help has been most welcomed and greatly appreciated.

Some community members who helped start our program were introduced. Mr. Jerry Manna, Mr. Harvey Fried, Mr. Gary Bretton, Sr., these three men are true friends of all Hicksville youth, thank you for all your support. Mr. Pete Rostenberg was introduced, without this individual our program would not have come to be. Mr. Rostenberg came through with incredible financial support, an expensive doctor's scale and a cooler for the boys. Pete has been voted by our team "Honorary Team Father," our most sincere gratitude goes out to him.

New York State Senator, Ralph Marino was then introduced. He was the only one from all our Government agencies that answered our call for help and saw to it that we will receive a grant for 1993. Thank you Senator Marino for supporting our youth program.

Next several team parents that helped the team get started were introduced. Mindy Bergern, Secretary; Hala Elbedewe, Team Coordinator; Pam Geslak, Director of Publicity; Denise Kelly, Director of Fundraising and Jenny Anderson, Cheerleading Team Mother.

The team Hicksville played that day, the East Rockaway Raiders, were introduced along with their head coach Tony Urbano.

The members of the Hicksville Fire Football team were presented with their coaches:

Coaches:

Jim Gilmore; Brian Kelly; Rodger Kay and Larry Soper.

Players:

David Barnard, Safety; Jason Basso, Center; Matthew Benardo, Tackle; Josh Bergen, Defensive End; Brian Boyle, Tight End; Gary Bretton, Corner Back; Daniel Ciacchio, Fullback; Michael Donohue, Guard; Sherief Elbedewe, Safety; Keith Engelhardt, Quarterback; Paolo Fumagalli, Halfback; Adam Geslak, Linebacker; Daniel Gilmore, Defensive Guard; Brian Kelly, Linebacker; Marc Parante, Defensive Guard; Justin Rostenberg, Guard; Ryan Pound, Tackle; Nicholas Schmidt, Wide Receiver; Adam Smith, Cornerback; Kevin Soper, Halfback; Jared Stanton, Defensive End.

Jenny Anderson

Cheerleaders:

Our impressive color guard was from Hicksville Boy Scout Troup #381. Scouts Steven Kane; Bill Reif; Kevin Chester and Bill Froehlich did the honors.

Our National Anthem was sung by the very talented Carol Rasmussen.

That concluded our opening day ceremony.

Immediately following the ceremony, Hicksville Fire Football kicked off against the East Rockaway Raiders for what proved to be an exciting game. All the Hicksville players were very impressive and did a fine job. Some Hicksville players were outstanding during the game, they were Paolo Fumagalli, halfback, Paolo gained the most yardage for his team with his electrifying runs. Keith Engelhardt was commanding as quarterback, executing several nice plays. Jason Basso was strong as center. Kevin Soper, halfback, was instrumental in several key plays and Adam Geslak, linebacker, made some nice defensive plays.

During the game and at halftime we all enjoyed the beautifully executed routines by our cheerleaders.

On behalf of the Hicksville Fire Football players and cheerleaders we would again like to thank all our sponsors, all the people that helped support our team and everyone who made our opening day ceremony such a huge success.

Last, but certainly not least, we would like to thank Mr. Al Ciacchio without whom this football program would not have been possible, it is only through his sheer determination and genuine concern for the youth of Hicksville, that Fire Football and its cheerleading squad has become a reality. Thank you All

Community Council Hosts 22nd Anniversary Dinner

By Maureen Traxler

Since the Hicksville Community Council celebrated its first anniversary dinner in 1971, the Council has paid tribute to many outstanding citizens and organizations. The Council's annual dinner held on October 1 and co-sponsored by the Hicksville Historical Society, paid tribute to third generation resident Charles I. Montana, Jr. and Child Advocacy Organization, the Hicksville Council of PTAs.

Speaking of the honorees and the PTA Organization, Nassau County Executive Tom Gulotta said, "You're there in the good times, there in the bad times to lend help and support." You're people who care about each other and the community."

To chants of "Car-lie, Char-lie." Charles Montana received the Council's prestigious President's Award. Charlie and his brother George manage Montana Agency, a real estate and insurance business founded by their father in 1946. Married and raising five children could keep a man busy enough, but Charlie finds time to work with many local groups, including the Kiwanis, Cub Pack 491, the Hicksville Chamber of Commerce, the Hicksville Service Unit of the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus, St. Ignatius Parochial School Board as well as serving as a parish trustee, the Long Island Board of Realtors, the Columbia Society of Real Estate Appraisers, The New York Association of Independent Insurance Agents, and the West Point Parents Club of Long Island.

Charlie believes that if more people involve themselves in local hometown organizations our community will continue to improve.

Receiving the Council's Community Services Award was the Hicksville Council of PTAs, the parent organizations of the school district's nine buildings units and SEPTA, the Special Education PTA. The PTA is well-known for its untiring devotion to children, and its many services and programs designed to educate, inform and/or entertain students and parents. Its volunteers work closely with the school administration, the Board of Education, teachers and staff.

Last year, the PTA Council hosted its first Homecoming Fair on the grounds of the High School. The proceeds of the fair go to the Council's scholarship fund, and in June, the Council awarded nine new scholarships as a direct result of the very successful fair. This year, on October 24, the Council once again invites residents to attend its Homecoming Fair prior to the football game.

Accepting the award on behalf of the Hicksville Council of PTAs was its president Nancy Callari. Mrs. Callari said there is always plenty to be done for the children and the community. "We can't do it all," she said, "but together we can do anything."

Calling the Community Council "an organization of all organizations in Hicksville," newly-installed Community Council President Marc Herbst touted the Council's unique function as a forum for all individuals and groups in the community. Mr. Herbst saw the Council's role as an outreach group and announced that the Council would establish liaison chairpersons to community organizations. He also hopes to formulate a community calendar of events.

Outgoing President Joseph DePompa received accolades for his four years of service in the Community Council's stop office. On behalf of the Council, Tony Previte presented Joe with a plaque, and he received citations from both the County and the Town. Mr. DePompa said "Thank you for trusting in a guy from the northeast side of town."

During the evening, Assemblyman Fred Parola inducted the new officers for 1992-93. They are: President Marc Herbst, First Vice President William Kelly, Second Vice President William Bennett, Third Vice President Tom Clark, Secretary Maureen Traxler, Treasurer Valerie Pakaluk. Council Trustees are: Nicholas Brigandi, Edward and Eleanor Draycott, Richard Evers, Linda Hild, Gertrude Paul, and Hazel and John Ptacek.

The Community Council will hold its next meeting on Thursday, October 29, at 7:30 in the Kenneth S. Barnes Community Room at the Hicksville Public Library. This will be the Council's annual candidates forum prior to Election day in November.

V. Pres. Cand. Meets Orlins

Orlins, a self-made businessman from Old Westbury who is running for Congress on a platform of economic change and jobs creation, met with Gore to discuss Orlins' plans to change the way government does business.

Orlins has a plan for economic growth that aims to revitalize Long Island's economy with small business incentives and investments in education and infrastructure that would be paid in part by money from the peace dividend. Half of the defense cuts in coming years should go to reduce the federal deficit, he said.

Orlins also vowed to trim the perks and privileges in Washington.

Sen. Al Gore, the Democratic nominee for vice president, met with Steve Orlins on Thursday to lend aid to the businessman's bid for Congress in the 3rd Congressional District.

GORGEOUS GUESTS — Pretty attendants in charming dresses complete the bridal picture. Shown here: Victor Costa bridal gown by Vogue Pattern No. 2783; bridesmaids' dresses by Butterick Patterns No. 5793.

By Sharon Achatz

In the wonderful world of wedding etiquette, the time of day and formality of the nuptials mandate the mode of dress for both bridal party and guests — but only to a point.

A formal evening wedding dictates long gowns for bridesmaids and elegant long or short dresses for mothers and female guests, for example, while an informal wedding recommends day suits or short dresses for the bridal party and guests.

Within those broad parameters, however, comes the freedom for fashionable flair, with a wide array of fabrics, flourishes and dress fits.

PRETTY MAIDS

The bride, of course, selects her attendants' clothes to reflect her wedding theme and colors — and there is a bridesmaid look for every bride, from romantic long sweeping skirts to sensuous short and fitted sheaths.

Bridal boutiques, catalogs and fashion outlets are filled to the brim with options: the genteel charm of a portrait collar neckline and tea-length hem, the flirty fun of a dropped-waist dress with swingy skirt and off-the-shoulder sleeves, the feminine sophistication of a fit-and-flared jacket with short skirt, the modern sophistication of metallic dressing and short-long combo hems, such as a short gold sheath with detachable bustle-type floor-length skirt.

Brides hoping to select fashions their attendants can wear again are best directed toward soft suits or subtly elegant short dresses — never forgetting, however, that a wedding is a special celebration, and it therefore calls for some extravagance.

Details that add charm and grace include lace, fabric roses and bows at the back — which can be detached later.

Whether the apparel's tone is all-out romance or drop-dead sophistication, most brides opt to dress their maids alike, with perhaps a slight difference in gown style or shade for the maid of honor.

Some brides even opt for maids' dresses that mimic the make of their gown exactly, but in a vibrant color fabric with fewer flourishes. One of the easiest ways to achieve such a coordinated look is by having a dressmaker use the same pattern for the bride and bridal party gowns — and perhaps even a scaled-down version for the flower girl.

While pastels have been favored colors for spring and jewel tones for winter, many shades now span all seasons — floral prints are popular year-round as well.

MOMS AND BABES

The bride also decides how flower girls and ring bearers will be dressed for the big day.

Unless the bridesmaids' dress style is unusually seductive, flower girls generally are shown as miniature versions of the maids — or even of the bride herself — in a matching-fabric dress with equally flounced skirts, puffed sleeves, ribbons and bows galore. Best bets for matching attire are at a wedding boutique, catalog showroom or by hiring a dressmaker to sew all the gowns.

Ring bearers mimic the dress of the groom, whether tux or suit — occasionally wearing a short pant suit if the weather is warm and the child is young. Tuxedo rental shops carry a wide variety of options.

Mothers of the bride and groom and grandmothers often are given no more than a suggestion of color and length of dress, so that they'll coordinate with the bridal party yet still have room for individual expression.

The key to a well-dressed mother or grandmother is sophisticated dressing with an eye for detail — such as tulip or scalloped hemlines, bows at the hip, lace overlays and beading or sequin accents — and fabulous fabrics such as metallic laces in gold and silver, rich brocades, linen, satin or fluid crepe.

BEST-DRESSED GUESTS

Generally, guests are left to their own discretion in dressing, but a developing trend is for the bride to steer their selections as well.

By printing "black tie invited" on the reception cards, a bride is requesting that men attending the wedding wear tuxedos and that women wear something equally fabulous — anything from a floor-length gown to a dressy cocktail suit.

Such dress-up fun can extend to theme weddings as well, where invitations request that guests come in period costume — such as medieval times, the Roaring '20s or the sock hop '50s.

If no such direction appears on the invitation, best-dressed guests can take a cue from etiquette books that spell out dress according to the time of day the reception takes place. Nighttime weddings — unless very formal — call for women to dress in elegant short dresses; daytime weddings call for short dresses or day suits. Men are safe in suits at every affair except black tie.

Beyond the basics of etiquette, a guest does well to keep in mind that a wedding celebration calls for something special in the way of fashion — dresses that bare and curve and flare, soft suits that redefine the look for merrymaking.

On the suit front, perhaps a metallic brocade long jacket over a slim iridescent lame skirt, or a graceful fit-and-flare peplum jacket over a slim skirt.

The best dresses incorporate glamorous details such as off-the-shoulder necklines, lace trims, glittery fabrics, bows and beads.

If a guest is concerned about over- or underdressing for the event, she can get more clarification from the mother of the bride, a close relative or the maids, who will know the wedding's style based on the attire selected for them by the bride.

By Sharon Williams

One of the first and most visible choices a couple will make involves the engagement and accompanying wedding rings.

Ever wonder who started this tradition of diamonds and bands? Following are a few traditions, tips and trends surrounding the nuptial rings.

TRADITION, TRADITION

The glimmer of a diamond on a woman's finger is significant of a promise made, says John Loring, design director for Tiffany & Co., in his book "The Tiffany Wedding."

Placing the ring on the third finger of the left hand was based on the belief that a vein ran from this finger directly to the heart, a notion the ancient Romans took from the Egyptians.

And diamonds, the hardest substance on Earth, were believed to confer courage on the wearer and protection from evil and disease.

The wedding ring, meanwhile, also dates back to ancient Egypt and has been made from iron, gold and platinum, says Loring.

THE FOUR 'Cs'

Since the discovery of vast deposits of diamonds in Africa during the latter part of the 19th century, the diamond has maintained its position as the most coveted gemstone to mark the occasion of marriage.

When shopping for the diamond of your dreams, there are four points to remember: clarity, color, carat weight and cut.

Clarity refers to the minute crystals, feathers or clouds known as inclusions found in a diamond, while color describes the amount of yellow or brown tinge in the stone. As a general rule, the more flawless the stone, the more valuable it is.

With diamonds, carats mean weight. One one-hundredth of a carat is called a "point."

And, whether it's round, heart-shaped or an oval, a diamond's cut should bring out its brilliance.

TRENDS

• Band together: A celebration of simplicity, the classic bandring is back again in either 14-karat, 18-karat gold or platinum.

Look for 1990s updates: bands encrusted with diamonds; bands set with colorful gemstones; textured bands or those that are braided; and bands adorned with carvings of flowers, bows or animals.

• Diamond delights: The most popular of nuptial stones is showing up in some decidedly unique settings — among them channels, clusters and tiny paves.

And, that's not even including the ever-popular solitaire — made new with unique cuts such as the marquise, emerald-cut or pear.

• With this ring: With today's rings, anything — it seems — goes. A couple, for instance, might choose a sapphire solitaire as an engagement ring à la Princess Diana.

Or, they might have an antique heirloom ring resized and used as the wedding band. They could even choose matching bands.

AFTER 'I DO'

Getting-along tips for newlyweds

By Allison Ashton

After the vows, after the honeymoon, after the thank-you notes have been mailed, it hits you. You're married. That wonderful person you wanted to spend the rest of your life with is now the mate who never goes away.

Even for the best-matched couples, settling in the day-to-day reality of married life can be a shock. Folk wisdom says that the first year is the hardest, but some couples can take two — or even three — years to ease into a calm domestic routine. Equitably dividing chores, managing money and keeping romance alive can unhinge even the happiest lovebirds.

Couples who live together before exchanging vows are often surprised to find that being married is more than simply sharing the same house.

Of course you need to make a realistic lifetime commitment and all that, but what about the nitty-gritty everyday stuff that can make married life a tough adjustment. What if she's a slob and he can't balance a checkbook?

DECOR SCORE

One of the most pleasant tasks of new married life is feathering your first nest. Some couples start with nothing; others must blend two households.

If you fall in the first category, you probably also have a limited budget. Make the most of it by planning. Peruse decor magazines and books and amble through furniture stores to get a sense of what you both like. Then invest in quality essentials, like a bed, dresser, sofa, coffee table.

Look for ways to save space in a small apartment. For example, a closet organizer can eliminate the need for a large dresser or a wooden chest can do double duty as extra storage space and a coffee table.

Also look for items that can evolve with your needs, such as wicker chairs that move from the living room in your first apartment to the enclosed porch of your first house.

If both of you already own a lot of furniture, select the best items of both households and sell or donate what you can't use.

Merging two households can be a source of conflict. He might not want to part with his collection of beer bottles of the world and she won't give up every textbook from every class she took in college.

If you want to avoid conflict, however, don't nag your spouse into giving up his or her cherished items. Simply wait. Lack of space alone may be enough to make the pack rat give up the offending object.

PRIVATE TIME

Because you have made a lifetime commitment your spouse doesn't mean you must spend every free moment together, which brings us to the need for private time and private space.

If your living quarters are large enough, carve out a little private space for each of you to call your own. That might be an uncluttered corner of a room where she can do yoga or a comfortable armchair by the window where he can read undisturbed.

If you share a desk or computer to do work at home, set it up in a quiet place — and remember to put your work away when you're done.

In addition to a little privacy, we all need some time alone. For many of us, that means time to unwind after a long day at work. Whether you stop off at the gym for a workout on the way home or simply like to put your feet up and watch the evening news for a half-hour, establish a routine that allows you time to unwind.

CHORE WARS

You both work hard all day, but the dishes still need to be washed, the laundry done and the toilet bowl cleaned. Nobody relishes these annoying tasks, but then few people really want to live in a pigsty.

This is another potential source of conflict for couples, and in the best of all worlds, the work is divided equally. It doesn't usually work out that way.

The idea is to reach a compromise you both can live with. Some couples assign housekeeping, cooking and child care to her, heavy maintenance and yard work to him. Others rotate the chores — she cleans the bathroom one week; he does it the next — so no one gets stuck with all the grunt work.

Or you can share the work: He makes the dinner if she cleans up the kitchen. Or they both postpone household chores until they can't stand it any longer and have a marathon housecleaning session — together.

It also helps to look for ways to save time and resentment. That might mean revising your standards of cleanliness (so what if you can't eat off the kitchen floor), or hiring someone to do the heavy housecleaning every other week or eating take-out food a couple of times a week.

MONEY MATTERS

Money — or lack of it — is the single biggest worry for many newlyweds. Meshing two spending styles can be a mess until you figure out what works best.

Be open, be creative. If handling finances one way doesn't work, be willing to change. If having a joint checking account doesn't work because one partner forgets to make entries, opt for separate accounts instead.

You might divide up the bills or have one partner handle paying all of them while the other handles household expenses.

Big financial issues, however, should always be approached jointly. It's smart to discuss financial goals regularly, setting a time frame for achieving them. Long-range goals include saving money for a down payment on a house and putting money in a tax-deferred savings plan like a 401(K) or Individual Retirement Account.

I DO' HOW TOS Wedding plans and troubleshooting tips

Friday, October 9, 1992

By Sharon Achatz

A wedding is the most exciting and complicated party a bride ever plans. Like any major event, it takes lots of preparation, organization and attention to detail.

Etiquette used to estimate that beginning plans six months prior to the wedding date was sufficient. These days, however, some of the best locations and services can be booked up to a year or more in advance. Protocol's new proclamation: There is no such thing as starting too soon.

Whether she has two years or two months to prepare, the bride-to-be's first preparatory step after accepting her groom's proposal is to buy a wedding planner book. These bridal bibles come in a variety of styles — from checklist to three-ring binder to file box — and are designed to help a bride keep track of the myriad details that precede her trek down the aisle.

Examples of essential information included: calendars and timetables, budget schemes, estimate forms, guest and gift lists, worksheets for organizing everything from reception seating to out-of-town guest lodging.

The best books go beyond essential record-keeping to give guidance on matters of manners — including how to select attendants, how to word invitations and who to ask for what — as well as tips on getting reputable service from caterers, photographers, musicians, etc.

An excellent choice is "The Perfect Wedding Planner" by Barbara Binswanger and John Charlton (Dellacorte). Two other good selections are "Checkers: Your Wedding" by Annette Spence (Fireside) and "Check List for a Perfect Wedding" by Barbara Lee Follett (Doubleday).

If the thought of recording information, evaluating potential service providers and making a final decision within budgetary confines sends shivers down a bride-to-be's spine, she might be a good candidate for hiring a bridal consultant.

These professionals are particularly helpful if the bride is very busy at work or planning an out-of-town wedding.

For the out-of-town bride, a consultant from the wedding locale will listen to the bride's ideas, research options, present potential plans, and then execute the details to meet her taste and budget.

For the busy bride, the consultant can handle as many or as few details as the bride desires — from selecting bridesmaids' dresses to wording the invitations to hiring a caterer. She's perfect for running daytime errands that might otherwise interfere with the bride's performance at work.

Whether or not a consultant is hired, the wise working bride will limit phone calls and errands to lunch time, if possible. And if she must take time off to meet with florist, printer or clergy, for example, protocol prefers that she be honest with her employer as to her needs and offer to make up the time she must be out of the office.

As these scenarios suggest, there are several potentially sticky situations that can arise for any bride. Following are additional troubleshooting tips from bridal experts.

INCLUDING HIS MOM

Involving her future mother-in-law will help strengthen the bond between a bride and her new family for years to come. To make dear old Mom feel wanted, listen to her ideas regarding flowers, dress, music — wherever her interests and talents lie. The bride doesn't have to use all of her future mom-in-law's suggestions, but she may come away with some useful advice.

The bride can request specific advice as well. Perhaps Mom-in-law could help shop for attendant gifts or bridal shoes, offer special requests for music to be played during the wedding or reception, or lend a special keepsake from her own nuptials to be the bride's "something borrowed" come wedding day.

BUDGET BREAKDOWN

Before making too many wedding plans, the bride and groom need to finalize the amount of money they're able to spend, apportioning it among various costs such as invitations, flowers, rings, dress, photographer and the reception.

Traditionally the bride's parents handle all wedding costs while the groom's parents take care of the rehearsal dinner — however, rules are more flexible now. The groom's parents may share expenses, or the bride and groom may finance the wedding themselves.

Regardless, the best way to keep costs down is to carefully evaluate estimates from professionals to make sure there are no hidden costs. Brides should require that professionals put everything in writing and be as specific as possible — including names, date and hours of service, time and site of setup and delivery, all charges (overtime fees, taxes, service charges), date of deposit and terms of cancellation.

WHO'S INVITED?

Drawing up a guest list can be absolutely agonizing, but there are ways to ease the pain. To begin, the list should be divided equally — one-third for the bride and groom, one-third for the bride's parents, one-third for the groom's parents.

Etiquette dictates that the officiant and his spouse be invited to the reception, as well as the fiances and spouses of friends and family. Social-savvy brides will avoid inviting one member from a group of friends without including the others. Unless it is someone to whom the bride is particularly close — and everyone knows it — she risks hurt feelings.

Community Council Dinner Big Success

Hicksville's Community council, in co-sponsorship with the Hicksville Historical Society, enjoyed its 22nd Anniversary Installation Dinner at Antun's this past Thursday evening. Over 200 community organization representatives and friends were on hand as the Council honored Hicksville realtor, Charles Montana, and the Hicksville Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

The Council's "President's Award" was bestowed on Charles Montana, Jr., for his many services to his native community, leadership with: the Kiwanis, Boy Scout Pack 15, Chamber of Commerce, Knights of Columbus and parish council of St. Ignatius Loyola R.C. Church, to mention some service. The Hicksville Council of PTAs was honored with the Community Council's Annual "Organizational Service Award" for its many and important services to children's education and parental needs in the 45 years since an unprecedented population boom engulfed Hicksville, in the wake of World War II's ending.

Assemblyman Fred Parola did the honors once again as installing officer, inaugurating the Council's new president, Marc Herbst. Retiring president, Joe DePompa, was honored by the Council with an inscribed plaque and gavel in recognition of his outstanding tenure of four years. Edward and Ellie Draycott of the Council received a certificate of appreciation from the Council for their unflinching, valuable leadership, over many years.

Hicksville's newest pastor, Reverend Nancy-Ruckert of Redeemer Lutheran Church, rendered the prayers of Invocation and Benediction for the occasion.

ORLINS FOR U.S. CONGRESS

Steve Orkins understands that the world has changed and that we must re-order our national priorities. He believes we must be strong at home, not just overseas. He demands that our country take urgent action to create jobs, to provide universal access to quality health care, to overhaul our educational system and to protect our environment. He will fight for the rights of women and protect their right to choose.

Vote Democratic on November 3rd

Over the past 15 years, Steve's experience as a successful businessman, stands in stark contrast to the failures of the professional politicians in Congress.

He will provide leadership to help build a stronger economy and a future of opportunity for our children.

 The USA Fish Market

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Do you think that children should be given the right to divorce their parents?

"My attorney says I don't have to clean my room!"

Voters Think Perot Has Some Clout

Callers to Input had a variety of ideas on what changes returning to the Presidential race by H. Ross Perot will mean in answer to this question: "Do you think Perot's recent moves will change the outcome of the election?" Here are some of the answers:

CANNOT WIN

It is difficult to know whether Perot will actually change the outcome of the election. Everyone, of course knows, or should know that Perot cannot win. Whether it will change the final winner I have strong doubts. Right now Clinton is well in the lead and I do not think that Perot will change that. The only thing that could change the outcome would be a poor showing by Clinton in the debates. Perot will cut Clinton's lead only a few points when things settle down. B.C.

HELPS BUSH

I think that President Bush may have a new lease on the election. If Perot pulls back a lot of the people who went to Clinton, some of them will wind up with Bush because they do not want to waste their votes. If Bush would get going he could still win. F.S.

DON'T NEED QUITTER

I think that Perot looks like a fool and that the Presidential candidates who went to his door begging him to throw support to them acted like fools also. Perot was finished when he walked away from it the first time. The country does not need to elect a quitter. G.C.

SAD CAMPAIGN

The Perot re-entry is important only because the people are not very satisfied with either candidate. Clinton has benefited by Bush being mired down with the economy. But not many people trust Clinton for anything. His background is not that of a person who you would want to trust and his stories about not going to the draft do not add up. He is a very poor candidate yet many do not think that Bush know what to do or he would do it. So that is where Perot comes in but he talks as though the White House is for sale and he just has to spend enough money to buy it. The public is thoroughly befuddled with all of this and right now it is hard to guess who will win the election. The polls say Clinton but only because the public has to make a choice. It is a sad campaign. M.D.

PEROT LIKES CLINTON

I believe that Clinton will finally settle down with most of the Perot votes. I do not think that Perot would have entered the race again if he thought that he would help Bush. He likes Clinton and wants him to be elected. J.F.

THROWAWAY VOTE

I think that Bush might get back many of the votes he lost when Perot bowed out. Most of the voters who switched to Perot were disgusted with Bush but they have had little to make them happy from Clinton. They will not vote for Perot because that is a throwaway vote. N.B.

OVERRATED

I believe that Perot is completely overrated and when Election Day comes he will not really take much of a vote and that he will do very little better than most previous third party candidates. He has not got the organization to deliver many votes and he is perceived as a loser so many won't vote for him. L.S.

CAN'T BUY IT

Perot has the most arrogance of any candidate and he has startled many people with the idea that he can go in and out of the race without much trouble. He is arrogantly rich and thinks that the amount of his bank balances entitles him to be President. The public is not ready to sell Perot the Presidency. He would probably not know what to do if he did get elected. J.S.

STILL NOT DECIDED

I don't believe that there is any doubt that Perot's recent moves will change the outcome of the election. For example, I have a friend who had pretty well decided to vote for Clinton in a race against Bush. Now, with the probable advent of Perot, the vote will be switched to him and I just can't stand the guy. But, even at that, I personally have had a hard time maintaining my support of Bush who without question has not really faced up to the nation's awful financial dilemma. Undoubtedly other feel as I do but are already convinced that Perot will get their vote. With the obvious shuffle which will take place in the event of Perot's candidacy, I am not freezing any decisions in my mind and hoped that something sensible will come out of the forthcoming debate. Out Of Africa • A New Fish In The USA Fish Market

By Arthur R. O'Brien

In her memoir, Out of Africa, which was written in 1937 and more recently made into a blockbuster movie of the same name starring Robert Redford and Meryl Streep, Baroness Karen Blixen wrote about the wonders and beauties of East Africa, and in particular of Kenya, during the 1920's and 1930's. Said the author, "The geographical position, and the height of the land combined to create a landscape that had not its like in all the world." The Kenya that Ms. Blixen so admired and revered then is today becoming the scene of the newest and perhaps the most ambitious fishing venture undertaken in decades.

Reach for your atlas of the world; turn to the map of Africa, and focus on the center, the heart of this vast land. There, right on the equator in East Africa is Lake Victoria.

Massive Lake! Picture, if you will, a massive (26,500 square miles) body of cool, clean fresh water nearly the size of South Carolina. Surround that lake with breathtaking vistas of rolling plains and mountain ranges, and cover the sky in a rich, blue blanket. Welcome to Lake Victoria; the home of Lake Victoria Perch, a fresh water species which is commercially landed in the 25-50 pound range, but which can grow to be a mammoth 500 pounds or more. And not only is the size of the fish large, but the dimension of the fishery itself is enormous. Local government experts project the annual sustainable yield of Lake Victoria Perch to be a staggering one billion pounds per year.

In the past four years, Lake Victoria Perch has emerged as a feature menu item finding its way onto the tables of seafood lovers in Europe, Japan, Australia, Greece, the Middle East, Canada and the United States. But while Lake Victoria Perch may be a new species on today's seafood menu, the fish has been known since ancient times. The Egyptians included it in their extensive catalog of animal deities. Mummified Lake Victoria Perch remains have been unearthed and bas-relief likenesses found carved on tomb walls. The Greeks even minted coins bearing a Lake Victoria Perch. However, it was the British who in the early 1960's took the role of Mother Nature and changed the destiny of Lake Victoria Perch forever.

Seeing Lake Victoria Perch as an attractive target for fishing safaris among the islands of Lake Victoria, the British heavily stocked the lake with the fish. In a few short years, the fish began to flourish while eating everything in sight. Today, Lake Victoria Perch is the primary resident of the lake.

The fillets are white, moist, meaty, completely boneless (family friendly) and suitable for cooking in many ways: baked, broiled, sauteed, grilled and microwaved. One international airline is currently featuring Lake Victoria Perch as an in-flight entree precisely because when cooked the fish is virtually odorless and retains its high moisture content.

Aspen Debut Attracts Media: in trendy Aspen, Colorado last year, Lake Victoria Perch made its debut as the main entree at a kick-off dinner organized by an international coalition of people concerned with the wildlife of Kenya. Titled Karibu Kenya: Safari Planet Earth and billed as the "largest fund-raising effort in the history of African conservation," the event attracted Hollywood stars, political leaders, food connoisseurs and Kenya's world-renowned conservationist and director of the Kenya Wildlife Service, Dr. Richard E. Leaky, as the keynote speaker. The theme of the event was decidedly Kenyan, and the Lake Victoria Perch was the talk of the event. Camera crews from such television programs as Entertainment Tonight and Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous along with local news crews, witnessed the many guests dining on the fish deliciously prepared by internationally renowned Chef Richard Chamberlain of Aspen's famous The Little Nell Hotel. Chef Chamberlain, who usually prefers to use fresh fish, was particularly pleased with the superior quality of frozen Lake Victoria Perch. "Cooking at this high altitude can be very demanding. We must be very careful not to allow our dishes to become dried-out. I roasted the fish in the oven at a high temperature with fish stock to help keep the humidity in the oven. The high moisture content of Lake Victoria Perch makes this fish an excellent choice. In addition, the fish has a firm, meaty texture, and it flakes nicely after cooking."

Chef Chamberlain is not alone in his high praises. Chef Henry Ogden Barbour, the former Chairman of the Board and past president of the Culinary Institute of America, has equal enthusiasm for Lake Victoria Perch. Said Chef Barbour, "When I was first introduced to Lake Victoria Perch at the Boston Seafood Show in 1990, I was immediately impressed. The fish cooks to a bright white color and maintains a most desirable moisture level. It is one of the easiest fish species to prepare, and has no heavy fish odor." Chef Barbour was so enamored by the fish that he authored what has become a well-circulated recipe titled, "Barbour's Boston Butta," which highlights the fish's mild taste with the use of white wine Worcestershire sauce.

The New York Times reported this past spring that the world-renowned Explorers Club featured Lake Victoria Perch at its 88th Annual Banquet held at New York's prestigious Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. More than 3,000 guests sampled Lake Victoria Perch - most for the first time - and gave the fish rave reviews.

Tops in Nutrition: But if it tastes good, is it good for you? The answer is a resounding yes. The nutrition profile of Lake Victoria Perch positions it at the top of the charts. It is low in calories (93 per 3.5 oz. serving), low in fat (1.8g.), low in sodium (33 mg.) and low in cholesterol (54.5 mg.). In addition, it is high in nutritional value. It has up to 710 mg. of heart-healthy, Omega-3 fatty acids (compared to 30 mg. in Orange Roughy), and has a high protein content (19.10 g.). This has excited food service organizations, wholesale distributors and health care operations alike. Chefs have been impressed with its durability, unique taste and texture.

With such attractive nutritional properties coupled with a mild taste and large supply, Lake Victoria Perch is quickly being recognized by leaders in the United States seafood industry as a fish with broad appeal. Richard V. Martin, the past president of the National Fisheries Institute, notes, "Lake Victoria Perch is the most exciting, new fish of significant commercial importance to be introduced to the market since Orange Roughy some ten years ago. It offers consumers a variety of options: year round, uninterrupted availability, attractive stable pricing, and versatility in preparation."

Initially, Lake Victoria Perch was test marketed in various cities throughout the nation. The public reaction was encouraging. The consumer wanted a white-meat, skinless, boneless fillet which was economically priced and which was new, exotic, but still mild tasting. Lake Victoria Perch fit the bill.

Found in Local Markets: Supermarkets have now run advertised specials on natural fillets sized 8-16 ounce and larger at price levels between $13.99 and $4.99, and have been pleased by the quick turnover. Food service groups requested portions for their clientele and were equally satisfied. Processors found a fish which would not dry-out upon cooking, and health-conscious food manufacturers discovered a fish that met their criteria: low in fat, high in nutrition, white meat, mild tasting and microwaveable.

Top Lake Victoria Perch producing plants follow strict quality guidelines which are aimed at meeting the FDA's regulations. They are equipped with state-of-the-art catching, processing and freezing equipment, and can offer the USA customer a fillet prepared under a recognized kosher certification.

All indications point to Lake Victoria Perch becoming the "fish of the nineties." Its sojourn from the shores of Lake Victoria to the platters of USA seafood lovers will be a topic of conversation for decades to come. Think, about it. A 26,500 square mile lake, a white-meat, highly nutritious fish that can grow to be more than 500 pounds, and a sustainable yield of one billion pounds. Truly, the Lake Victoria Perch fishery is very much like the Africa about which Ms. Blixen wrote. The fishery is as impressive as the land and has "not its like in all the world."

When miniature monsters and grown-up goblins dive into the typical Halloween party refreshments, in the process they get a large dose of sugar, salt and fat.

Why not approach the festivities a little differently this year and offer more healthful items? No doubt you'll give adult revelers a head start on the holiday season that starts the next day in most minds.

Kids might like to build their own pizzas, sandwiches or pita pockets. Alongside serve plenty of fresh raw veggies such as carrot sticks.

Better cheeses have no more than 3 grams of fat per ounce and a minimum of sodium; often they're made from part or all non-fat milk. Read labels carefully on the newer reduced-fat items; a cheese that is "lower in fat" or "reduced fat" is not always low in fat.

For the evening's sweet treats, have on hand the season's juicy pears and crisp apples. Fruit-based desserts such as a cobbler or Brown Betty are other toothsome yet more wholesome alternatives.

Popcorn balls and low-fat cookies such as dried fruit bars, ginger snaps or even animal crackers rate relatively low on the grease, too.

Or try specially developed reduced-fat baked goods and cake mixes from the grocer's; while these contain less fat, they are often high in sugar.

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, mix cornmeal, flour, sugar, salt and baking powder. In another bowl, combine egg whites, milk and oil; add to cornmeal mixture all at once. Mix lightly.

Q. Last week we went to a well known restaurant with a party of four people. Each person ordered something different and the result was that the waitress brought the orders out at different times. What happened was that some people had to sit there and let their food get cold while waiting for the others. Some in the party said "go ahead and eat" but no one wanted to do that because it didn't seem right. What should have been done?

G.H.
A. What should have been done is that you should have complained to the management. You have mentioned a good restaurant and we are going to send the complaint on to them. The food should all be served at once or as nearly as possible. Otherwise no one is dining together and you might as well have all gone alone. That restaurant will have to get on the ball.

Home entertaining

A flair for fiestas

When a restaurant combines Southwestern cooking with classic French cuisine, that's news. Then when it is heralded in national publications as a must-not-miss dining experience, one really begins to pay attention.

This success is still more proof that Southwest cooking is about the hottest trend around, in more than the incendiary sense. But in the hands of a classicist, a term that accurately describes chef Vincent Guerithault, the impact of intense seasonings is brought under control.

So now French-born Guerithault brings us a beurre blanc flavor heightened with cilantro. The inventive chef does his cross-cultural simmering in Phoenix at his restaurant, Vincent Guerithault on Camelback. That funny name, Camelback, happens to be the name of the street.

Now with cool fall breezes here, the timing seems perfect to heat up the party scene and throw a Southwestern celebration. But don't invite guests for a dinner or party - call it a Southwestern Fiesta. That maybe cheating a little (a fiesta is technically the celebration of a saint's day) but the word connotes merriment galore.

To emphasize the mood of the evening, request Southwestern dress. People love to dress up, or down, for a special occasion. Just about everyone has denim in the closet as well as boots and a red printed bandanna. Silver and turquoise jewelry or chunky beads are perfect for decorating the outfit.

The table should be especially dressed up, too. The key word here is color. And color. And more color. Use pure primary colors - sunny yellow, vivid blue, lipstick red, intense purple, torrid orange. The cloth and napkins need not be expensive. Get simple materials, the colors will carry the day.

If the tablecloth is a solid color, use bright napkins or a mix of solid colors. If your budget allows, buy red or blue bandannas to use as napkins and let each guest take one home as a souvenir of a great party.

Dishes should be a mix of patterns. You don't have to go out and buy, just use what is in the closet, but not from one set. If you happen to need dishes, anyway, get solid colors of blue, yellow, red or green. Colored glassware also carries out the theme, as do colored glass votive lights.

Don't worry about running around town looking for these items. These days mailboxes are stuffed with catalogs of every sort, and many of them feature these brightly colored accessories.

Have fun with the table centerpiece. Make an arrangement of various chillies, colorful Indian corn, a scattering of tomatoes and cacti. The latter can be the individual cactus leaves available at many supermarkets or small pots of growing cactus. These little pots can also be given out as souvenirs, if you are so inclined.

The "in" flower among florists these days is the humble sunflower, which happens to fit in perfectly with a Southwestern theme. If you can't find them fresh, look in department stores for silk or paper varieties. Don't have a vase tall enough? Try the umbrella stand.

The menu, of course, is of major importance. Plan as many dishes as possible that can be done in advance. Simply reheating is much more relaxing for the cook than watching oven temperatures and simmering sautes. There are any number of Southwestern casseroles, meat pies and stews that only improve upon being reheated.

But for a bit of Gallic flair, here are innovations from chef Guerithault to begin the meal, and close it.

GRILLED CORN SOUP WITH ANCHO CHILI CREAM

Soup:
4 ears corn
2 cloves garlic
1/2 cup carrot
1/4 cup onion
1/4 cup celery
1 jalapeno pepper
1 1/2 cups chicken stock
1 cup half-and-half
Ancho chili cream:
1 ancho chili
3 tablespoons half-and-half
3 tablespoons sour cream
Yields 4 to 5 servings.

Grill corn for 5 minutes over hot flame. Cut corn off cobs. Combine garlic, carrot, onion, celery, jalapeno pepper, chicken stock and corn in skillet and simmer for 30 minutes. Add half & half; boil for 5 minutes, then puree.

Simmer ancho chili in half-and-half for 5 minutes; puree. Cool puree, then stir into sour cream. Swirl 1 tablespoon of ancho cream on top of the soup.

FRESH FRUIT SALAD

1 whole pineapple
1 orange, peeled and cut into 8 slices
2 kiwi, cut into 8 slices
1 Granny Smith apple, peeled, cored and sliced
4 bananas, peeled and sliced
2 tablespoons amaretto
1 tablespoon lemon juice
8 mint sprigs for garnish, if desired

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Slice pineapple into 8 rings, approximately 1/4-inch thick. Cut around inside of pineapple to remove fruit; reserve pineapple rings. Core pineapple.

Mix all fruit in large bowl and sprinkle with amaretto and lemon juice. Let marinate for approximately 1 hour in refrigerator. Arrange fruit in center of pineapple rings and garnish with mint sprigs, if desired.

Trendy Greek eats in no time

Some of today's trendiest eating comes in the form of foods of Mediterranean influence — including the cuisines of Italy, Morocco, Spain and Greece.

In yet another refrain of the theme "all things old are new again," the most ancient of these cuisines is, to my taste, the most "in" of these victuals in vogue.

Most Greek foods not only are simple to prepare — using short cooking times, basic ingredients and few utensils — but also are inexpensive because vegetables, beans and grains are the most common ingredients.

And since Greek eats often have little or no meat, they can be considered healthful by folks trying to reduce their consumption of meat.

Following are three recipes for quick vegetarian Greek dishes that can be mixed and matched for dining diversity.

For a light dinner, pair a colorful Greek Salad of lettuce, peppers, tomatoes, olives and feta cheese with steaming bowls of Avgolemono — a sort of egg-drop soup with a refreshing lemon kick.

For more substantial dining, add servings of Felaful — savory garbanzo bean fritters with just a hint of spiciness that is tamed with a cool yogurt-and-herb dressing.

GREEK SALAD

For Dressing:

2 ounces feta cheese
4 tablespoons vinegar

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 teaspoons minced garlic
2 teaspoons dried oregano

For Salad:

2 heads romaine lettuce, torn into bite-size pieces

1 red bell pepper, julienned
1 yellow bell pepper, julienned
1 red onion, sliced

12 cherry tomatoes, halved
2 ounces feta cheese, diced
16 black olives

Pepper to taste
Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation time: 15 minutes.

Make feta dressing by combining all ingredients in blender until smooth; set aside. Combine all salad ingredients except pepper in large bowl. Pour dressing over salad and toss to coat. Spoon into individual serving bowls; season to taste with pepper.

AVGOLEMONO

4 cups chicken broth
½ cup long-grain rice

2 egg yolks
Juice of 1 lemon

2 tablespoons fresh mint for garnish
Lemon slices for garnish

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation time: 25 minutes.
Place broth and rice in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on HIGH until rice is cooked, about 15 minutes. Meanwhile, whisk egg yolks and lemon juice in medium bowl until blended.

Once rice is cooked, gradually whisk 1 cup hot broth from casserole into egg mixture, then return to casserole and stir to blend. Microwave covered on HIGH until heated through, about 1 minute. Ladle into serving bowls; garnish with mint and lemon slices.

FELAFEL

2 (15-ounce) cans garbanzo beans, drained

¼ cup bread or cracker crumbs
1 egg, beaten

1 onion, chopped

2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

1 teaspoon minced garlic
1 teaspoon ground coriander

1 teaspoon ground cumin
Pinch of chili powder

Flour for coating
Oil for shallow frying

For Yogurt Dressing:

¼ cup yogurt

1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint

1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley

Yields 4 servings.

Preparation time: 30 minutes.

Mash garbanzo beans thoroughly, then add crumbs, egg, onion, parsley, garlic and spices. Mix well. Shape mixture into balls about the size of walnuts — adding more crumbs or water as necessary for shaping — then coat in flour. Pour enough oil in large frying pan to cover base thinly, then heat. Meanwhile, prepare yogurt dressing by stirring together all ingredients; set aside.

When oil is hot, saute felaful balls in batches for 3 minutes each side until golden-brown. Drain well on paper towels. Serve felaful with yogurt dressing at side for dipping.

QUICK TIP

For a sweet after-dinner treat that tastes remarkably rich and elegant, stir one tablespoon sweetened condensed milk into a cup of coffee.

KITCHEN HINTS

Lamb chop tips.

Here's how to make the best chops every time:

1. Broiling or barbecuing are the best ways to cook lamb chops.
2. Choose from shoulder, loin, blade or rib cuts. Rib cuts have the best meat and the least gristle.
3. Select chops of the same thickness so they'll take the same amount of time to cook.
4. Broil for 5 minutes on each side for rare, 6 minutes for medium, 7 minutes for well done. Drain off fat halfway through cooking.
5. To check doneness, press meat with your finger. The firmer the meat, the more well done the chop.

Q. Sometimes I see diners encircling their plates with the left hand while they eat with the right hand. It almost looks as if they were protecting their food from being stolen! I don't like this mannerism and wonder what you think of it.

A. You are correct, it would be much more graceful to put the left forearm just on the edge of the table or simply to place the left hand in the lap while eating with the right hand.

Q. Is it proper to eat the little "extras" served with cocktails, such as olives or maraschino cherries, or should they be left in the glass?

A. It is perfectly all right to enjoy them along with the cocktail. If they are served on a toothpick that is what you can use to remove them. If not, finish your cocktail and then (as unobtrusively as possible) eat them with your fingers.

Q. Can you tell me the proper way to eat French fries? At a restaurant recently I saw a young man spear them with his fork and nibble them in mid-air. I found this appalling!

A. The best way to eat French fries is to cut them with the side of a fork into bite-size pieces. You are right—food should never be eaten while dangled in the air.

Q. While visiting France last year my friend and I ate in an elegant restaurant. We noticed that forks and spoons were facing downward on the tablecloth. Do you know why this was done?

A. This is an old French custom which is gradually giving way to the English and American way of facing forks and spoons upward.

Q. Recently I came across a menu expression that was new to me. Can you explain what "A la burgignonne" means?

A. Translated from the French it would mean "in the Burgundy style" and it refers to any dish served with small onions, spices, bacon, mushrooms and, of course, Burgundy wine.

Give quiche a chance

Apple pie is about as American as you can get — but quiche? Some Americans still have the idea that it's French haute cuisine and therefore snooty, fancified, somehow not quite the proper fare for "real men."

But quiche is not the creation of some five-star French chef. Instead, the dish originated in the farm kitchens of the French countryside. Traditional quiche is made of simple wholesome ingredients such as eggs, cheese, milk or cream baked in a pastry crust — ingredients no more or less "manly" than those found in many an American dish.

Since your microwave won't brown the pastry crust, you can fake it by brushing lightly with Worcestershire or soy sauce before microwaving. Today's French Onion and Mushroom Quiche calls for a frozen store-bought pie crust (or you can use your favorite recipe and make your own, if you have the time and inclination).

Or make a delicious microwaved quiche sans the pastry. Vegetarian Crustless Zucchini Quiche has no crust at all, while Sunday Brunch Quiche features bacon, black olives, onion, Swiss or Monterey Jack cheese in a brown or white rice crust.

Recipes for microwaved quiche differ from conventional recipes in that many call for partial pre-cooking of the egg custard mixture before final microwaving in the pie plate. This pre-cooking allows the delicate egg mixture to microwave more evenly during the final stages of cooking.

Most microwave recipes also call for standing time at the end of the microwave cycle. This last step is essential, since it completes cooking and sets the quiche.

Quiche Lorraine, the classic version of the dish, adds bacon, onions, Swiss cheese and a touch of nutmeg. Get creative and try your own variations — tiny bay shrimp, flaked salmon or sautéed scallops, mushrooms or mild green chilies, diced ham or turkey.

Think you can't eat quiche because of the cholesterol? Make yours with egg whites or purchased egg substitute. Can't eat real bacon because of the fat? Try bacon-flavored bits instead.

Many think of quiche as a light dish appropriate for spring or summer. But it's equally good on an autumn table, as a hearty brunch or cozy supper. For dinner, add salad or a steamed vegetable. Today's recipes would be good any time of day, and remember that a slice of quiche makes a nice alternative to a sandwich in a brown bag lunch.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

MICRO-TIP OF THE WEEK:

Eggs microwave rapidly, so they're easy to overcook — and overcooked eggs can be tough and rubbery. You can't stir an assembled quiche, so microwave at a lower setting (50 to 70 percent power) to allow eggs at center time to set without overcooking edges.

FRENCH ONION AND MUSHROOM QUICHE

- 1 commercial frozen 9-inch pie shell
- 1 cup shredded Swiss or Gruyere cheese
- 1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
- 3 eggs
- ½ cup heavy whipping cream
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 (3-ounce) can french-fried onion rings
- ½ teaspoon dried parsley flakes

Yields: 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation time: 5 to 10 minutes.

Cooking time: 14 to 18 minutes (plus 5 to 10 minutes standing time).

Oven setting: MEDIUM (50 percent power); HIGH (100 percent power).

Carefully remove pastry shell from foil tin to 9-inch glass pie plate. Microwave about 1 minute at MEDIUM setting, to soften. Press dough gently but firmly into sides and bottom of pie plate. Prick dough all over with fork and microwave at HIGH setting 3 to 4 minutes, rotating every minute.

Sprinkle shredded cheese over bottom of crust, then add mushrooms in an even layer.

In small mixing bowl beat together eggs, whipping cream, paprika and pepper until frothy. Pour slowly into prepared crust. Crumble french-fried onion rings over top, then sprinkle with parsley flakes.

Microwave, uncovered, at MEDIUM setting 10 to 13 minutes, rotating dish every 4 minutes, until edges are set but center is still soft. Let stand on heat-proof surface 5 to 10 minutes before cutting into wedges and serving.

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Dear Teens: Many of us want to know what others think of us. Do they (or a specific "he" or "she") think we're smart, pretty or handsome, or fun to be with? Do they like the way we dress or talk and our attitudes toward drugs, alcohol or smoking?

Or are you one of those who doesn't care, feeling that "I am what I am, and I like myself this way?"

Perhaps you are among the teens who say you couldn't care less what adults think of you.

No matter what others say or think about teens, you may want to at least glance through something I recently came across.

A national poll appeared in the September 1990 issue of Family Circle magazine based on what nearly a thousand adults said about teens. It was conducted by the CBS News Election and Survey Unit.

Here are some of the questions asked and answered:

• At what age should children begin dating? The largest number chose the age of 16, with more blacks than whites selecting 17 or 18. Many of you will perhaps think that is much too late — right?

• At what age should parents talk to their children about birth control? The favorite age selected by the adults questioned was 12, but 3 percent said it should never be discussed.

• How about dating someone of another religion? Three out of four felt, "Why not?" Black adults were more accepting than whites, and the Northeast more liberal than the South.

• And interracial dating, how did those questioned feel about that? One-third had no problem with it, and one-third would allow it but didn't approve of it. Blacks were twice as willing to accept it as whites. Half of those who were college graduates felt it was OK.

• If a teen brought home a record or tape with a warning label, what would the adults in this poll do about it? More than half would take it away; 15 percent said that they would listen to it before deciding, a significant response because it wasn't part of the question asked.

You might want to skim through these results again. Are they what you would have expected? Why or why not?

Dr. Abraham: I'm not very tall (about 5 feet 7 inches), but I've never felt that was a handicap. And because I'm 18 years old I may not grow much more.

I don't think I have a problem, but my best buddy does. My special girlfriend is a couple of inches taller than I am, even with flat shoes on.

I've talked about height with her; she never brought it up, but I did. She dismissed the whole thing as a "non-problem," and I agree with her.

In my mind there are so many things that are more important, like the fact that we enjoy all the same things — hiking, a vegetarian diet, non-violent movies, flowers and dancing together, holding close.

What do you think about this height business? — Duane.

Duane: If there is a problem, it is in the minds of your buddy and others who feel as he does. And it may be envy on his part because you have such a compatible girlfriend.

So try to concentrate on all the activities you have in common; they certainly sound enjoyable.

It is possible for some fellows to add a little more height, at your age. I know that is probably of no importance to you, but I just thought I'd mention it.

Dr. Abraham: I have been seeing this guy for a while and it has been great. I am 17, and he is 21. The age difference doesn't matter to me, him or my parents. He is so wonderful, and I have found my Mr. Right.

Sounds perfect, right? Wrong! I leave for the Air Force soon, and what if he meets someone else while I am gone and doesn't care about me enough to wait? I know that I will wait for him because I like him so much.

I don't want to talk to him about it because I am afraid that he will think that I am taking our relationship too seriously. Maybe I am; I just don't know. — Afraid Afraid: It may be better to leave for your tour of duty with no promises beyond letters or other ways of keeping in touch. I understand your fear of losing him, but you don't say anything about how he feels toward you. If he seems less close to you than you feel toward him, any pressure on your part before you leave might turn him off.

Even though you don't think it is possible, you also could meet someone new. I know that thought could upset you, and I wouldn't blame you for totally rejecting it. But it really is true that absence often can make the heart grow fonder, sometimes toward somebody else.

Cooking Corner

Recipes from country's best culinary wizards

By Naeette Wiser

Restaurant writers in every city are challenged daily to find the best chefs. Finding a stellar dish at one fine dining establishment is like Beluga caviar on Sunday.

Achieving the staying power on the culinary stage is a chef's chief occupation. It's his dish, not his name, you'll remember when you tell someone to visit a restaurant in San Diego for its brusquely elegant creme brulee. Or in Kansas City for legendary sultry-sauced ribs.

If we are what we eat, then a chef's homespun dish is his signature.

From coast to coast, America's chefs are whisking and whipping up the best yet. With a new emphasis on regional ingredients, tantalizingly spiced by Pacific Rim flavors, memorable dishes are abounding.

In the past, the celebrity chef circle featured a handful of restaurateur/chefs, such as Wolfgang Puck and Paul Prudhomme. Just look through today's cookbooks and you'll see a cornucopia of emerging talents, from Mark Miller at the Santa Fe, N.M., Coyote Cafe to the proprietors of the Silver Palate in Manhattan and the Moosewood Restaurant in Ithaca, N.Y.

For those who enjoy entertaining at home, trying out a chef's spectacular dish is like making a journey to a gourmet mecca. We've included some of our favorite chefs from the great restaurants and hotels in America, and their signature recipes here.

TERESA DOUGLAS-MITCHELL, KORBEL CHAMPAGNE CELLARS

Imagine California chevre on apple slices, Atlantic salmon baked in champagne and shallots or chilled poached pears with champagne and chocolate sabayon. As culinary and entertaining director for Korbel and a former San Francisco restaurateur, Douglas-Mitchell combines art with innovative food pairings.

She started baking with her mom and grandmother in their Oklahoma kitchen, and soups and baking are still her passion.

"I enjoy working with the fresh ingredients California has to offer," says Douglas-Mitchell. Her Corn Clam Chowder shows off her best Sunday supper recipe.

CORN CLAM CHOWDER

12 ears sweet corn (white or yellow) or 4 cups canned corn
2 pounds bacon, diced
2 bunches celery, diced
10 medium onions, sliced

1 cup Korbel Champagne
2 1/2 quarts heavy cream (or half and half)
2 teaspoons dried thyme (3 tablespoons fresh)
18 ounces baby canned clams (or 2 pounds fresh small clams)
Salt and white pepper to taste
Yields 4 quarts.

If using fresh corn, remove corn from cobs. Set both aside.
Saute bacon in large pot until brown. Remove bacon with slotted soup spoon and set aside.

Add celery and onions, and cook in bacon fat until almost tender.

Pour in champagne and continue cooking until vegetables absorb liquid.

Return diced bacon to pot, and stir in corn. Add cream.

Add thyme and corn cobs. Simmer gently for 15 minutes to meld the flavors. Remove cobs.

If using canned clams, add, adjust seasonings and serve. But if using small fresh clams, soak them in cold water (shell and all) during soup's last simmer. Add them to soup and continue cooking carefully until shells begin to open. Serve immediately.

GLORIA CICCARONE-NEHLS, BIG FOUR RESTAURANT AT THE HUNTINGTON HOTEL

Her father's busy Continental restaurant in Connecticut was her training ground. Today, San Francisco's elegant hotel reaps the benefits of this young chef's talents. With a background in fine arts and culinary crafts honed at the prestigious Culinary Institute of America, Ciccarone-Nehls has carved her own niche in the culinary world.

"She describes her penchant for 'contemporary Continental cuisine,' taking advantage of seasonal ingredients: 'I try to alter the classical Continental style of recipes to be more health conscious and use lighter reductions rather than stabilizers.'"

Consider her passion for wild game, and you'll understand why her rave dishes, such as Roast Saddle of Antelope with Oregon Morels and Rib Eye of Wyoming-Ranch Buffalo in a Zinfandel-Rosemary Sauce, attract both San Francisco residents and tourists alike. Her Autumn Harvest Soup is just the ticket for a chilly afternoon.

AUTUMN HARVEST SOUP

1/4 cup light brown sugar, loosely packed
1/4 cup softened butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 acorn squash, split, seeds removed

3 sage sprigs, chopped
1/4 teaspoon chopped garlic
1/4 cup peanut oil
1 yellow onion, peeled, roughly chopped
2 celery ribs, roughly chopped
1 small piece gingerroot, peeled and grated (1 teaspoon)
1 leek, washed well, roughly chopped
1 small sweet potato, peeled, roughly chopped
1 small butternut squash, peeled, split, seeds removed, roughly chopped
1/4 cup calvados
1 1/2 tablespoons salt
2 quarts good chicken stock
2 cups heavy cream
1/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
Yields 6 servings.
Preheat oven to 400 F.

Make paste out of 1/4 cup brown sugar, butter and salt. Rub inside halves of cleaned acorn squash with paste. Place them in baking dish, cut side down, with 1/2 inch of water in bottom of dish. Bake for 30 minutes or until soft. Let cool and scrape meat from shell. Set aside.

In 4-quart saucepan, saute fresh sage and garlic in peanut oil for 2 minutes. Add onion, celery, ginger and leek. Saute 2 minutes. Add sweet potato, acorn and butternut squashes. Saute 2 minutes. Add calvados, salt and chicken stock.

Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 40 minutes. Let soup cool for 15 to 20 minutes. Add heavy cream and puree in blender until very smooth. Check seasoning.

Add additional 1/4 cup brown sugar (if needed) and white pepper.

GARY J. DANKO, THE RITZ-CARLTON, SAN FRANCISCO

Catch a rising star of "cuisine vitale," a modern interpretation of classical French cuisine. Seasonal, regional ingredients are simply prepared with delicate sauces that use no flour and little butter or cream.

His plates are stylish and seductive; his marble chocolate creme brulee, a sinful repast. Trained by Madeline Kamman, one of the world's most respected French chefs, he freshened his repertoire at the Culinary Institute of America and Chateau Souverain Winery's restaurant in Geyserville, Calif.

Danko served as guest chef for James Beard's 1989 birthday celebration, and his homes in San Francisco and Napa Valley feed his search for the best of Northern California's garden bounty.

To ward off the blues, try his Pan Steamed Shellfish with Sun-Dried Tomato, Anchovy.

PAN STEAMED SHELLFISH

2 pounds Prince Edward Island green-lip mussels or clams
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 shallot, minced
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 anchovies, minced
1/2 cup white wine — fume blanc or chardonnay
1/2 cup clam juice
1 (6 ounce) jar artichokes,

drained

1/4 teaspoon thyme
12 sun-dried tomato halves, minced
1/4 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons chopped chives
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon salt (optional)
Yields 4 servings.

Soak shellfish in cold water for 15 minutes. Scrub and de-beard mussels. Set aside.

In large stockpot, heat olive oil; cook shallots, garlic, anchovies, butter and salt for 1 minute over low heat. Add wine, clam juice, artichokes, thyme and tomatoes; cook for 5 minutes. Add cream and shellfish and cover. Steam over medium heat until shellfish opens.

In individual bowls, place 1/4 cup of pre-cooked rice or polenta. As shellfish open, place in rice or polenta. Return pot to stove and reduce liquid. Pour remaining liquid over shellfish and sprinkle with chives.

SUZY DAYTON, COYOTE CAFE

Aaah, Santa Fe. The arts, opera and food waltz rhapsodic in this jewel, where blue corn tortillas and their fillings are raised to a high art that rivals the fiery sunsets and rolling thunderstorms.

Just count the great restaurants: Santacafe, Cafe Pasqual's, Grant Corner Inn, the Inn of the Anasazi and the former Greyhound Depot's trendiest resident, the renowned Coyote Cafe.

Modern art, bright flashy colors and folk art figures (make that howling coyotes) are the stage for each day's changing menu where The Cowboy Rib Eye, barbecued black beans and oversize onion rings are just part of the fun.

Dessert chef Suzy Dayton was the pastry chef at the Mondrian Restaurant in Manhattan for two years before arriving in Santa Fe. Her apricot bread pudding is the perfect end to a perfect day.

APRICOT BREAD PUDDING

4 (10-ounce) ramekins or custard cups
4 slices white bread (Pepperidge Farm or Arnold's work well — I use homemade brioches)
6 egg yolks
1/4 cup sugar
1 cup heavy cream
1 cup milk

Apricot Filling (recipe follows)
1 cup fresh raspberries.
Yields 4 servings.
Preheat oven to 325 F.

Trim crusts from bread and cut each slice in half so that you have 8 pieces of bread. Place 1 piece in bottom of each ramekin and top with 1/4 of Apricot Filling. Top with another piece of bread.

In bowl, whisk together yolks and sugar. Add cream and milk; strain. Pour custard over "apricot sandwiches" and place ramekins in water bath. Bake just until set (custard will jiggle slightly), about 40 minutes. Cool.

Serve with fresh raspberries.

Garden Talk

By C.Z. Guest

Look around for nature's free, attractive materials for the holiday season and fall arrangements, both indoors and out. Favorites that make you think of fall include gourds, pumpkins, corn stalks, ornamental corn and bright-colored autumn leaves.

These are just a few of the many interesting and colorful plant materials. So keep your eyes open; you need only a little time and imagination!

For example, gourds can be turned into drinking ladies, birdhouses, containers for sewing kits, and brightly painted gourds can make lovely presents. Of course, they must be properly dried first!

DRYING FLOWERS

Long after the gardening season is finished, flowers picked from the garden can remind us of the summer and our many happy times spent outdoors.

Some flowers can be picked at the peak of perfection and dried to last for months. If picked at the right time and dried correctly, the colors, shape and form of the flower remain as perfect as the day it was picked.

Here are a few tips for picking flowers to dry. In general, it's best to pick at midday, when the flowers are driest.

- Chives: Pick before they go to seed.
- Astilbe: Pick when the pink or bright-red color first appears.
- Allium: Can be picked before or after they go to seed, depending on the form desired.
- Yarrow: Pick when flowers first open.
- Glove thistle: Pick when blue hue first appears.

• Celosia: Pick smaller side shoots. The earlier, larger flowers are harder to dry.

• Statice: Pick when buds first open.

• Blue salvia: Pick when buds first open.

• Teasel: Pick when pods are naturally dried on plant.

• Strawflower: Pick varieties with long, slender, abundant petals, when only one ring of petals has opened and color is scarcely visible. For those varieties with shorter petals, two rings of petals may be open before they are picked. Pick flower heads only, not the stems.

• Gomphrena (globe amaranth): Pick anytime when heads are still moist.

• Ageratum: Pick flower bunches that have just opened and are still deeply colored.

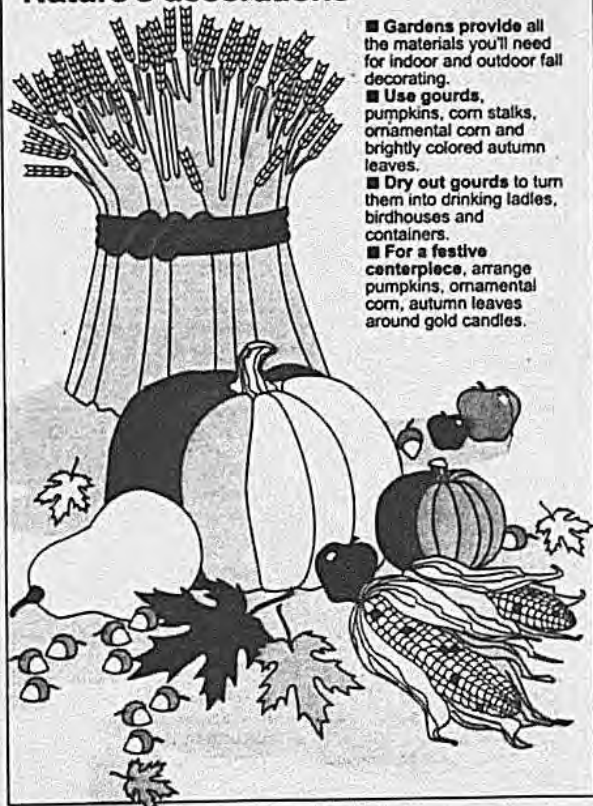

Some flowers, such as gomphrena and ageratum, can be hung upside-down until dried. For best results, choose a cool, dry place to hang them.

Other flowers do best with a drying compound to create realistic results. Sand and borax are far superior for petal texture and shape. Silica gel makes more vibrant petal colors.

In using either of these compounds, cut flower head with about 1½-inch stem. Place flowers carefully in the compound in a tightly covered tin can. Cover the flowers thoroughly with enough drying compound to bury the flower heads.

When dry, wires can be carefully inserted into the flower heads to simulate a stem. The wire can be camouflaged with floral tape.

Nature's decorations

- Gardens provide all the materials you'll need for indoor and outdoor fall decorating.
- Use gourds, pumpkins, corn stalks, ornamental corn and brightly colored autumn leaves.
- Dry out gourds to turn them into drinking ladies, birdhouses and containers.
- For a festive centerpiece, arrange pumpkins, ornamental corn, autumn leaves around gold candles.

Our Children

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Breakfast is key meal for youngsters

Q. My husband and I manage to start the day with just a cup of coffee for each of us. We like it that way. In fact, we both get nauseated at just the thought of the big breakfast habit — you know, the bacon-and-eggs-toast-potatoes-juice routine. Ugh!

The problem is our two children, who are now of school age, watch the television ads and hear from their friends about the breakfasts at their homes.

So far, we've managed to keep their morning food kind of skimpy, not quite matching ours but close to it (small juice, small milk, piece of toast).

Time has run out, though. They actually demand more. So we wonder, is a larger breakfast important for them? If so, why? They seem to eat plenty the rest of the day anyway.

A. To encourage them to conform to, or close to, your eating habits may be about as questionable as forcing yourselves to match the one they would like to have. Not a happy thought for you, I'm sure.

How about making available the cereals and other appropriate breakfast foods they desire, and then, if necessary, leave the room?

Recent research has indicated that children who are well-fed in the morning often score higher on school achievement tests. Moderation is a sound theme to consider.

Respect is a two-way street as far as parents and their children are concerned. It relates to privacy, hobbies — and dietary practices, all within reason and sensible from a health point of view.

You might want to get a professional opinion from your pediatrician or family physician.

Q. Our 15-year-old daughter is so pretty, except when she squints and wrinkles up her face because she thinks that will help her see better.

We have known for a long time that she is nearsighted and needs glasses, but she just will not go that route. Every time I bring up the subject, telling her we will get the prettiest frames available, there is a terrible scene of screaming and crying.

Although I don't like the idea of contact lenses because I feel that no foreign object should be placed in the eyes, I've suggested them to her. She knows how I feel about them and shares my attitude.

Something has to be done, though. The question is, what?

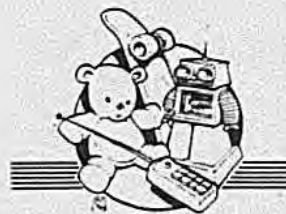

A. With all the advances made in the production and fitting of contact lenses, and their acceptance and use by many thousands of people, your prejudice against them for the reason you gave seems hard to understand. It is too bad that you have shared your negative attitude with her, for now you have two problems that may be difficult to overcome: her bias and yours.

Contact friends and acquaintances of yours who use contact lenses, or have members of their families who do. Try to bring yourself to ask them for the most competent professional they know in this field. Then, please visit one or more of those individuals and do whatever you can to force yourself to leave your negative feelings at home.

You might consider using this same approach of inquiry about regular glasses, so that your information is more complete.

Facts and common sense seem to be what are needed, and I hope your daughter will join you in trying to solve the problem. The information you obtain can help both of you eliminate a hurdle that many others have faced.

It seems important enough to do some exploring, for your daughter's mental health, educational progress and relationships with other young people. And I guess it goes without saying that it is important for your peace of mind, too.

An experimental diet, designed to reduce the risk of heart disease, requires a seasoned kitchen technician to check the oil.

A 15-month-old boy with an inability to metabolize protein needs nutritional tuneups to meet ever-changing growth demands.

And a 6-year-old girl who is failing to thrive is in line for a major menu overhaul and fuel analysis.

In each case, a cluttered, oblong room squeezed into the Clinical Research Center at University of California at San Diego Medical Center, like a strip of bacon in a BLT, is the food service station of choice.

The name on the door reads "Metabolic Kitchen." But there are more books and beakers than blenders and burners, and for every pot and pan you'll find a balance scale, a graduated cylinder (for precise measuring) or a syringe.

"We're really a cross between a kitchen and a laboratory," says Barbara Grasse, a registered dietitian who directs the hospital's ninth-floor Clinical Research Center Nutrition Unit.

Funded by the National Institutes of Health, the 18-year-old kitchen is one of about 70 such facilities at major hospitals nationwide that serve as resources for human dietary research and special patient needs.

Its custom-made concoctions are mixed, measured, packaged and stored on shelves, in refrigerators and in computer memory banks. Then they're delivered to patients or participants in dietary studies.

SMORGASBORD OF SMELLS

On a recent morning, amid a smorgasbord of smells ranging from that of fresh tuna salad to chocolate shakes, Grasse and her assistants were giving a tub of non-fat mayonnaise a lube job.

Some of the mayo would be doused with polyunsaturated oil; some of it with monounsaturated oil. All of it, color coded to distinguish one oil from the other, would go into salads and entrees to be consumed in a six-week study launched by Dr. Peter Reaven, a UCSD Medical Center endocrinologist.

The food's destination: the UCSD campus in La Jolla, where 11 study participants would pick it up in Styrofoam containers.

The study's objective: to further understand low-density lipoprotein, the so-called bad cholesterol. As LDL oxidizes, it encourages the formation of artery-clogging fatty deposits that can lead to heart disease.

In previous studies, Reaven has shown that LDL oxidation is greater in diets rich in polyunsaturated oil (corn or sunflower oil) than in diets rich in monounsaturated oil (olive or canola oil).

For this study, he added vitamin E supplements to both diets to test the effects of this known antioxidant.

Reaven suspects that the vitamin supplementation will enhance the protective effects of monounsaturates and perhaps minimize the oxidative effects of polyunsaturates.

Except for a control group on vitamin E with an unsupervised diet, all those in the study consume food prepared by Grasse, her two full-time assistants and part-time helpers schooled in nutrition.

PRECISE PROPORTIONS

Portions are measured precisely to meet the caloric needs of each individual in the study. Potassium and sodium also must be maintained at a constant level. Percentage of fats in the diet must stay constant at 40 percent, roughly the equivalent of that found in the standard American diet.

"A study of this kind would be absolutely impossible without the Metabolic Kitchen's help," said Reaven, who has relied on the kitchen for two previous cholesterol-related trials.

THE HEALTHY GOURMET

By Kit Snedaker

If ever there was a dual-purpose dish, it's meatloaf. Good the first time as a main event, it is equally delightful — maybe more so — in sandwiches.

Meatloaf isn't hard to make. It's forgiving. Takes a number of variations. Make it in the morning and refrigerate. Put it in the oven when you come in the door at night.

To make a '90s meatloaf, use lean meat, don't add oils or fats. Do add carrots, potatoes even left-over vegetables. The flavor improves and so does the goodness.

Here are a few of my favorites. Try to save some for brown bag sandwiches the next day.

MEATLOAF WITH APPLES

- 1 tablespoon low-calorie margarine
- 2 small, sweet apples, peeled, chopped
- 1/2 cup chopped onions
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 egg whites
- 1/4 cup low-calorie tomato sauce

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Each serving has about 315 calories, 18 grams fat, 70 milligrams cholesterol and 400 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Melt margarine in small non-stick skillet over medium heat. Add apples and onions and cook until onions are lightly browned, about 15 minutes.

In large bowl, combine onion mixture with remaining ingredients, using only 1/2 cup of the tomato sauce. Mix well. Place in loaf pan. Top with remaining tomato sauce. Bake, uncovered, 1 hour.

MEATLOAF WITH CARROTS

- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 2 egg whites
- 1/4 cup finely chopped onions
- 1/4 cup grated carrots
- 3 ounces grated potatoes
- 2 tablespoons ketchup

- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
- 1 clove garlic minced

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Each serving has about 260 calories, 15 grams fat, 70 milligrams cholesterol and 180 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 350 F. In bowl, combine all ingredients. Mix well. Put in loaf pan and place in oven. Bake uncovered for 1 hour.

MEATLOAF WITH RED PEPPER SAUCE

- 1 cup diced bread including crust
- 1/2 cup non-fat milk
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 pound lean ground veal
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon ground thyme
- 1/4 teaspoon ground rosemary
- 1/4 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Red Pepper Sauce
1 red pepper, halved and seeded
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon balsamic vinegar
1/4 teaspoon salt or to taste
1/4 teaspoon cayenne
Yields 10 servings.

Each serving has about 250 calories, 10 grams fat, 114 milligrams cholesterol and 475 milligrams sodium.

Soften bread in milk for 10 to 15 minutes. Meanwhile, combine ground beef, veal, eggs, pepper, thyme, rosemary and Parmesan cheese. Squeeze bread dry and add to meat mixture. Mix well. Put in a loaf pan and bake in an oven preheated to 375 F for 1 hour.

Just before meatloaf is done, steam red pepper over boiling water for 4 minutes or until soft. Put in blender or food processor with olive oil, lemon juice, vinegar, salt and cayenne pepper. Puree. Place in sauce boat and serve with meatloaf.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q. We have a toilet fixture that has a small hairline crack. There is a very slow seepage of water, causing moisture on the floor. Is there any way this can be repaired without replacing the entire fixture?

A. If the toilet tank is damaged and the break leaks water, you can frequently make a temporary repair using a silicone tub caulk available at most hardware or home products stores.

Shut off water to the fixture. Drain and sponge dry. Thoroughly clean area around crack before applying sealant. Apply sealant exactly as directions specify. Be sure fixture is in a warm room.

Don't attempt to repair a cold fixture with a sealant that requires 70 degrees F to set up.

If fixture has a thorough break, or large particles have come loose, apply tub caulk to the outside, and allow to harden for the amount of time directions prescribe before applying tape reinforcement.

After applying tape on outside of fixture, apply tub caulk to inside face of crack and allow to set for time period manufacturer prescribes before turning on water.

If your crack is a hairline crack, your repairs may last for some time. However, for any significant crack and water seepage, it will only be a matter of time until you will have to replace the damaged part.

Q. I have an attractive china vase that was broken during a recent move. The break was at the rim and a small side segment broke off. Can you recommend a glue that would repair this piece and still allow me to use the vase with water?

A. One all-purpose cement is Devcon's All Purpose Weldit that can be used on plastic, crockery, wood, metal, tile, cork, leather, glass, plastic, china and fabric.

It also effectively stops leaks in containers, pipes and hoses. It is excellent for mending chipped plates and broken china. It is available in tubes in hardware, home center, discount and chain stores.

The firm maintains a toll-free number for consumer questions. Call 1-800-227-7950.

Q. I am having trouble cleaning a counter top that picks up newspaper from the daily paper as well as grime from fingerprints. The counter is a plastic laminate. Can you recommend a good, easy cleaner? I have tried a number of liquid cleaning products, but I am not very satisfied with the results.

A. Be sure and stay away from products that contain abrasive cleaners such as scouring powder, Bon Ami and steel-wool soap pads.

One of the best non-abrasive cleaners for kitchen counters, refrigerators, range tops, cutting boards, stainless-steel cookware, microwave ovens, coffee makers and other small appliances, as well as no-wax floors, is Arm & Hammer Baking Soda.

Mix 4 tablespoons baking soda in 1 quart warm water. Baking soda deodorizes as it cleans, and it won't scratch the finish — not even the finish on fiberglass. Because it's a natural food product, baking soda is safe to use on surfaces that food will touch.

Victorian-style bath

Q. We have turned a small bedroom into a huge Victorian-style bath. I thought I'd love it, but I don't — it feels like a barn! Would it help to put wallpaper with a lot of pattern on the walls? What else can I do? — A.L.

A. You're on the right track: Pattern goes a long way toward cozying up cavernous spaces, especially if you use it on the ceiling as well as the walls.

Warm colors, fabrics and furniture are other effective tactics. Color warms (draw from the yellow side of the spectrum, not the blue). Fabrics and furniture not only look comforting and fill space, they also muffle the echoes that bounce off hard surfaces in any bath and make the room sound empty.

In the photograph we show here, all four antifreeze ideas — pattern, color, fabrics and furniture — have been applied with a lavish hand by designers for Laura Ashley, whose "Fuchsia" pattern is used throughout.

The canopied tub is pure fun: The ruffle-topped curtains are gathered on short rods to create the kind of focal point such a large room requires.

Also fun, but practical, too: the desk-cum-dressing table and a cushy chair for reading in the bath (doesn't everyone?).

Q. I hope you won't mind this question, but I don't know who would be the right person to ask.

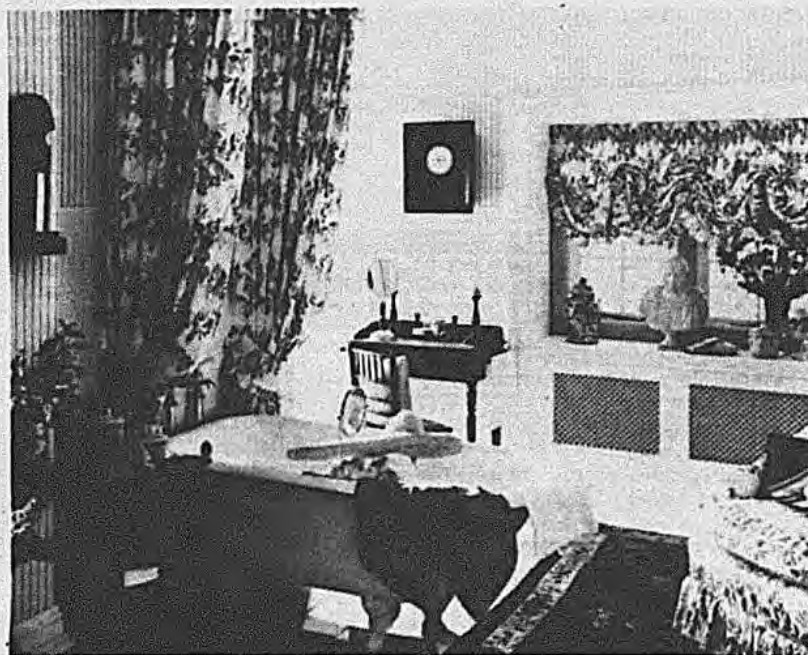

My fiancée's younger brother was killed in a tragic boating accident four years ago. Visiting his parents last weekend, my fiancée had to sleep on the couch so I could have his room. His brother's room is just like he left it, and nobody ever goes in there. Is this weird? I felt just like the sequel to "Ordinary People." — Don't Use My Name

A. You'll be surprised that at least 4 percent of all American parents admit that they've preserved their child's old room almost like a shrine. And these are children who have just grown up and moved away in the normal course of events.

When a child has died, it's easier to understand why grieving parents would keep their son's room as he left it — to them, it must help keep his memory alive.

Obviously, your fiancée would rather sleep on the couch than force the issue just yet, so I'd advise you to relax. The old truism — that time heals all wounds — will come to pass.

CLASSY BATH — Curtain "canopy" and lavish window dressing add character to a once undistinguished attic bath-cum-sitting room.

ANTIQUES

Inherited toilet set is in good condition

Q. Please evaluate my bathroom toilet set. I have enclosed pictures of the set. The mark on the bottom is "Kermit" and "N.C. Co." All of the pieces are in perfect condition. It is very unusual to not have any broken pieces since my grandmother used this set.

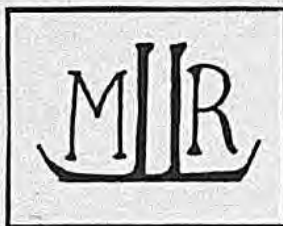

Would you tell me who made it and its value?

A. This toilet set was made by the National China Co. in East Liverpool, Ohio, around 1900 to 1910. "Kermit" is the pattern. It should sell for $365 to $385.

Q. I have a chocolate pot and four cups and saucers. They are decorated in light green with gold trim. The enclosed mark is on the bottom of all the pieces.

Can you identify the maker and give me any information about this set? I also would like to know if it is valuable.

A. Your chocolate set was made by the Martial Redon Co. in Limoges, France, during the 1890s. It would probably sell for $250 to $275.

Q. I have seen quite a few country and kitchen antiques in my visits to antique shops lately. I think I might be interested in this field of collecting.

I am wondering if you could give me some typical items to watch for and some prices.

A. Some items and prices:
• Wooden potato masher — about $25 to $35.

• Tin kitchen cabinets — $500 to $600.

• Round wooden boxes — $100 to $125.

• Washboards — around $75.

• Spice cabinets — about $500.
• Wooden bowls — around $75 to $85.

• Butter molds — $100 to $125.
• Wooden rolling pins — about $50.

• Stoneware foot warmers — $65 to $75.

• Cast-iron bread and muffin pans — $25 to $35.

• Coffee grinders — $50 to $65.

Q. I have a clear pressed-glass plate with a picture of President Garfield in the center. I think it is called a bread plate. It also has "Memorial" across the top rim of the plate.

Can you tell me when this was made and its value?

A. Your bread tray was made in memory of President Garfield, who was assassinated in 1881. It would probably sell for $50 to $75.

Q. I have a 1-liter Mettlach stein, No. 2956. The scene is an old-time bowling alley. One man is bowling while other men are watching.

What can you tell me about its vintage and value?

A. Your stein was made in Mettlach, Germany, during the late 1800s. It would probably sell for $700 to $800 in good condition. This stein was made by Villeroy & Boch.

Q. I inherited a gravy boat and platter from my husband's grandmother. I have always wondered how antique they are and their value. They have yellow, pink and orange flowers with green leaves. On the bottom is "Homer Laughlin" with "Genesee 82 N" and a mark I can't make out.

When were these made and what is their value? They are in good shape.

A. Your gravy boat and platter were made by the Homer Laughlin Co. in East Liverpool, Ohio, around 1926. They are not valuable collectibles.

They might sell for $25 to $35 for the set.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. What causes a dog's teeth to become discolored? Our 8-year-old Pekingese's teeth are yellow, and she has bad-smelling breath. Is there anything that we can do to prevent further discoloration and bad breath?

A. Discolored teeth in dogs is usually due to a soft deposit called "plaque" on the surface of the teeth.

Plaque usually forms at the gum margin. Plaque is produced by the combined action of bacteria, saliva, decaying food and digestive enzymes.

Once plaque is established, mineral salts are deposited from saliva-producing calculus or tartar. The longer the teeth go without cleaning, the thicker the tartar becomes.

The most common cause of bad breath in dogs is the accumulation of plaque and tartar. This also leads to the separation of the teeth from the gums and eventual tooth decay.

Most canine tooth and mouth disorders can be prevented by yearly prophylactic dental cleaning. Regular cleaning of the teeth with toothpaste, powder, mouthwash or antiseptic gel will prevent tooth disease in dogs.

However, this is a chore that many dogs do not tolerate well, and many owners cannot discipline themselves to do it regularly.

Chewing on large bones or many of the new chew toys seems to decrease the amount of plaque and tartar buildup. Dogs should not be allowed to chew small bones because they splinter easily and produce sharp pieces that can injure the mouth or digestive tract.

Dogs chewing large bones too vigorously can fracture their teeth. Dogs should be observed frequently while they are enjoying bones or chew toys.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

It is harvest season on Long Island. Many farms are advertising to have people come and pick their own vegetables and fruits in season.

Last year I went apple picking with my family and friends. This is lots of fun, since the freedom of choice was ours. As soon as we would find the right apple, several others looked even better. Our bushel baskets were filled in no time and we went home with much more than we planned for. We also got to taste as much as we liked.

When we arrived home with our load of apples, we had some serious decision making to do. Shall we make apple pie, apple sauce, apple cake, baked apples, apple brown Betty or candied apples - or should we just eat them plain. We couldn't decide and since we had enough apples, we did all those things!

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

Claimants must present original documents

By William M. Acosta

Q. Will Social Security accept photocopies instead of original documents as evidence to support a claim? — M.A.

A. No. The person processing the claim must certify that he or she has seen the original document. Documents can be altered, and the alteration will not be visible on the photocopy. All original documents will be returned to you.

Q. If I am not entitled to Medicare based on employment, can I buy the coverage?

A. Individuals age 65 or over who are U.S. residents — either U.S. citizens or aliens who have been lawfully admitted for permanent residence — and have resided in the United States for at least five years at the time of filing, can purchase both Part A and Part B, or just Part B coverage.

The monthly premiums in 1992 are $192 for A and $31.80 for Part B.

Q. I plan to retire next year at the age of 62. However, my wife is only 50 years old and we have a 12-year-old grandchild who has been living with us since her birth. Can she receive benefits? — B.S.

A. Your grandchild is eligible to receive benefits if both her mother and father are either disabled or deceased. If you should adopt the grandchild, check with your local Social Security office.

Q. I am disabled and receive Supplemental Security Income checks. If I married a woman who is working full time, would my SSI benefits be affected? — S.P.

A. It is possible. Under the SSI program, part of the income and resources of an ineligible spouse are deemed to be available for the eligible spouse. It is important that you notify the Social Security Administration if you do marry. They will be able to tell you whether your SSI benefit will be affected by this additional income.
