Federation Gift To Women Vets

Nassau County Federation of Republican Women (N.C.F.R.W.) President, Annette Ferrara of Hicksville, right, and Community Service Chairwoman Menetta Modica of Bethpage, center, receive thanks from Marge Duryea, RN, Northport Veterans Hospital Women Veteran Coordinator, for the continuous support of women veterans by the Federation. She also thanked the N.C.F.R.W. for their generous gift which was used to purchase Canteen books for the women veterans in the hospital.

Burglary Arrest In Hicksville

Second Squad Detective William Compatiello reports the details of a burglary arrest in Jericho on January 21, at 9:30 a.m.

Russell Badolato, 23, of 31 Horizon Lane, Levittown, is charged with burglary 3rd degree and will be arraigned at First District Court.

Maintenance workers at an office building located at 375 North Broadway, Jericho (Speigel Associates), said that Badolato had entered a locked bathroom in the basement of the building, then climbed up into the ceiling and made his way to a woman's bathroom. Badolato then removed some ceiling tiles in the woman's room in order to view the room. Police believe that this had been going on for approximately 5 months.

Badolato is not an employee at the office building. He gives his occupation as a bus driver.

Postal Customers Reminded To Clear Ice, Snow

A word that brings to mind carefree childhood days, when we couldn't wait to go out and play in that wonderful white stuff. Images of snow angels, snowmen and sleigh rides flash through our minds for a second... until we realize that there is a more serious side to winter: slips and falls caused by snow and ice on walkways.

Now is the time to prevent these regrettable accidents for letter carriers and delivery personnel. "Prevention is simply a matter of clearing, salting or sanding the stairway or pathway to provide safe access to the mailbox or front door," said Edward Gamache, District Manager, Long Island District.

Letter carriers cannot make door or curb deliveries when the approach to the mailbox is hazardous because of snow or ice. Carriers are not allowed to attempt door delivery when there is a heavy build-up of snow and ice on sidewalks, steps or porches. They are not allowed to dismount for curbside boxes blocked by snow and ice build-up. Snow must be cleared to the curbline for at least six feet on both sides of the mailbox so the carrier may approach and leave without backing up.

Gamache stressed, "Ice is particularly dangerous on steps and any walking surface, especially painted wood or concrete, such as stoops and porches. In open areas, watch for drifts and pile-ups from snowplows. When there's a warm spell, and the melting snow runs or pools, a salt freeze can make a cleared sidewalk slicker than ever."

Snow is a beautiful thing... as long as we keep it safe.

Attorney Talks To Sr. Citizens

The Bethpage Senior Citizens announce that Sonia Burges Crannage, Esq. of Sinnerich & Crannage, Plainview, will address the group on Elder Law, on Feb. 3, at the Bethpage Firehouse at 11 a.m.

Ms. Crannage serves as a volunteer in a program presented in cooperation with the Bar Association of Nassau County. Her lecture is presented as a public service, for which she receives no fee.

Ms. Crannage will address our seniors on Spousal Impoverishment Act, protecting your assets, etc. followed by a brief question and answer period.

Demands Return Of L.I. Status

Oyster Bay Town Councilman Leonard Kunzig is calling for an immediate reversal of the U.S. Office of Management and Budget's decision to rescind Long Island's status as a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area.

"A long hard fight was waged in the seventies to secure Long Island's justified status as a region unto itself," said the Councilman. "Rescinding this status and lumping us in with New York City, Westchester, Rockland and Putnam Counties, 14 counties in New Jersey, one in Pennsylvania, would spell disaster for Oyster Bay as well as all municipalities on our Island."

According to Councilman Kunzig, Long Island will lose Federal community development funds as well as other Federal and State monies. "We will also lose our unique identity and once we are statistically lumped together with New York City, we'll become an extension of the City in the eyes of businesses, investors and groups considering relocating here."

Garbage Contract Will Save Taxes

Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Lewis J. Yevoli has announced the awarding of an upcoming garbage hauling contract that will save town taxpayers $10.16 per ton from the present agreement which expires on Feb. 18. The Supervisor said that Tully Construction Company of Flushing, New York has agreed to ship out town garbage for $66.85 per ton, down from the current cost of $77.01 per ton by Browning Ferris Industries.

"I am very pleased to be able to make this announcement which marks the second consecutive record low price for garbage removal in my administration," Yevoli stated. Tully was the lowest of six bids submitted to the town last Fall, with the highest bid at $74.39 per ton. Yevoli, who led the battle against a proposed town incinerator for six years through 1991 said, "the action allows the town to concentrate further on an inter-municipal agreement with the Town of Hempstead to dispose of the 650-tons of non-recycled garbage it collects daily at the Hempstead Resource Recovery plant in Garden City."

Yevoli added: "Once again we have good news for the hardpressed taxpayers who are looking to their officials to lower the real property taxes whenever and wherever possible. Additionally, we will continue to expand our rate of recycling into the rest of the decade." The signing of the new contract will provide Oyster Bay with one of the lowest waste removal plans in the state.

Two Bank Robberies In Plainview

Det. Michael Kuhn of the 2nd Squad reports the details of a bank robbery that occurred in Plainview on January 11, at 2:05 p.m.

Two male whites wearing hooded sweatshirts entered the Home Savings Bank of America at 144 Manetto Hill Road, and handed the teller a note demanding money. The teller handed over cash and the males fled. There were no guns displayed there were five employees and one customer in the bank at the time.

The 2nd Squad and Robbery Squad are investigating.

Det. Joseph Aliperti of the 2nd Squad reports the details of a bank robbery that occurred in Plainview on January 15, at 1:30 p.m.

A man entered the Fidelity Bank, 52 Manetto Hill Road, and handed the teller a note stating he was armed and demanding money. The teller gave the subject cash from her drawer and he then fled the bank in an unknown direction.

There were eight employees and three patrons in the bank at the time of the incident. No one was injured. The Robbery Squad and the 2nd Squad are investigating.

To the Editor:

On January 20, Police Officer Bill Toelstedt of the Hicksville P.A.L., conducted Awards Night for the Hicksville Fire Football and Cheerleading Program. This was the Football and Cheerleading program's first year in existence. The program was a big success. Twenty-five Hicksville boys (age 11) and 15 cheerleaders were involved.

The Awards Night went well with every football player and cheerleader receiving a trophy. The event was catered by Bretton's Deli of Bethpage and the evening was topped off with a special guest speaker. The guest speaker was Gary Marangi who was a four year professional Quarter Back in the N.F.L. Gary played three years as a Quarter Back for the Buffalo Bills and one year for the Cleveland Browns. Gary talked about all the levels of Football, from midget play to the professional game. He also cautioned on the dangers of steroids and drug abuse. Gary's talk was very impressive.

Bill Toelstedt hopes to expand on this program next year and get more of the Hicksville youth involved in cheerleading and football.

Town Extends Recycle Contract

The Oyster Bay Town Board voted to extend Omni Recycling of Westbury's contract for the recycling of commingled glass as well as ferrous and non-ferrous materials, according to Town Councilwoman Ann R. Ocker.

"After reviewing last year's results and making sure that their price is still competitive, it was decided that Omni's recycling contract will be extended through December, 1993, an option stipulated in the original contract," Councilwoman Ocker said. "Last year, we recycled approximately 7,000 tons of commingled glass, ferrous and non-ferrous materials. Under our contract with Omni we paid, and will continue to pay, $19.59 per ton to recycle, as opposed to the $77.01 per ton that it would cost to add those items to the municipal solid waste stream."

Councilwoman Ocker added that contract details remain the same. Omni Recycling is required to haul Town recyclables from the Bethpage Transfer Station to their facility in Westbury where sorting and distribution to appropriate markets takes place.

Northwest Civics A New Year

The Northwest Civic Association started off the year with a well-attended meeting on January 4 at the Burns Avenue School.

A major subject under discussion, was the impending hearing by the Oyster Bay Town Board concerning the future status of the Twin County Recycling facility located on West John Street. All concerned persons should make every effort to attend this open meeting at the Town Hall in Oyster Bay on March 9, at 8 p.m. Also discussed, was the prospects of the members of Northwest Civics to participate in The Neighborhood Watch Program.

Speaker Robert Dwyer, Fire Commissioner of the Hicksville

Fire Department, spoke to the members about the festivities being planned for the 100th Anniversary of the Department. The celebration is scheduled for June 9 through 13, and will take place at the parking field across the street from the Main Street firehouse. Northwest Civics is planning to participate in the festivities. The next meeting of the Northwest Civic Association will be Monday, February 1, at 7:30 p.m. at the Burns Ave. School located on Burns Avenue.

Dutch Lane December Activities

Dutch Lane Elementary school was very busy during the month of December. The PTA was active organizing the Holiday Boutique for all the students at Dutch Lane. The selection ranged from very inexpensive items to some really fine, but practical gifts.

Many volunteers were up at school to help. Even the youngest students picked out gifts for their grandpa's, grandpa's, parents and siblings.

Later in the month Mrs. Napolitano's kindergarten class made Frosty the Snowman out of pretzel sticks, marshmallows & gum-drops and had a chance to get blindfolded & take a swing at a pinata filled with all sorts of treats. It was interesting for the students to learn how children in other lands celebrate the holidays.

The week ended with a glorious winter concert. The concert began with a woodwind & brass ensemble led by director Hilary Sperber. The Chorus came on singing strong. Let It Snow! Let It Snow! Let It Snow! Let It Snow! directed by Daniela DiBenedetto. The string ensemble directed by Andrea Frisch began with the beginner violins and violas plucking Mary Had A Little Lamb. It was a lovely morning and many family members were able to come and hear how talented the children at Dutch Lane are.

Vic Theatre At Bethpage Library

On Sunday afternoon, January 31 at 2 p.m. the Bethpage Library invites you to attend a performance of the play, Guilt by Conscience by Richard Levinson & William Link presented by the renowned Other Vic Theatre Company.

This is a play of suspense in two acts in which Arthur Jamison a renowned criminal lawyer... brilliant, charismatic and treacherous in and out of the courtroom is in the process of a divorce from his wife. This divorce will leave him financially devastated so Arthur, never a procrastinator, begins plotting to kill her. In the courtroom of his mind he creates various scenarios and pits himself against an imaginary prosecutor. Don't miss this wonderful afternoon of theatre at the library. All welcome - Admission free.

The Bethpage Public Library is located at 47 Powell Avenue, two blocks off the Seaford-Oyster Bay Expressway (Route 135), phone 931-3907.

The Christmas Boutique was a big success and students Jonathan Pappas, Shellika Garcia, Caroline Corrigan, Christopher Powell, display some of the items the PTA had on hand.

Mrs. Napolitano's kindergarten class had a great time putting together their snowmen; Elizabeth Rothbard, Meaghan Monahan, Katelyn Eric, Christopher Gleason, Megan Schack, and Megan Cook finish their project.

The chorus directed by Daniela DiBenedetto hold up the Snowflakes and sing Let It Snow! Let It Snow! Let It Snow!

String ensemble: beginning violins, cello, and violins play The Crunchy Cookies.

Mrs. Hilary Sperber's clarinet and trumpet trio play Up On The Housetop while parents watch and listen.

The chorus made up of fourth and fifth grade students; Sean Corrigan, Alison Selinger, Bobby Becker, Terry Anderson, Cindy McCarthy, Jason Fleischman, Victoria Shack, Heather Hudson, Edward Foley, Theresa Diffendale, Kathleen Fuentes, George Remy, Barbie Broshart and friends singing Glee A Little Love At Christmas.

Jottings From Yesteryear

While talking to a friend, they mentioned now receiving the milk home delivery. How one thing jars your memory to past days of milk delivery and the cows grazing in nearby areas! Then, I thought of popular names for cows like Borden's "Elsie" and her daughter "Beulah" at the New York Worlds Fair 1939-40. How many memories the Tylon and Perisphere, admission 50 cents. People from all over, some came on the Queen Elizabeth or the Queen Mary and the French liner Normandie. Railroads were busy including the L.I.R.R. and the La Guardia Airport which had just opened. I saw the King and Queen of England ride by at the Fair. Coca-Cola - five cents; you could see yourself on TV at the R.C.A. Pavilion and a picture on the telephone sample. The General Motor Bldg. was great as well as the 3D show at the other car building. Some of the people were Mayor La Guardia, Grover Whelan, Lowell Thomas, Eddie Cantor and Bing Crosby, to name a few. The G.E. man-made million volt lightning, the parachute jump (now at Coney Island), the Charleston dance, and there was Lifebuoy soap for BO. A Philco cathedral radio was popular. The New York City Building (still stands) after the Fair closed in October 1940. The United Nations used it for a full assembly meeting. Gosh! I guess I forgot myself and ran on too long. I'll go look at some of my collection.

Subha Dhanaraj, Student Of Month

Bethpage High School honored Subha Dhanaraj as its Student of the Month. Ranked number two in the Senior Class, she is a highly organized and deeply motivated person who will have taken not only every Advanced Placement test that the school offers but is also preparing privately for two others on her own.

She has always been deeply interested in Biology and Chemistry and has participated in the Medical Explorers program at Mid-Island Hospital and attends a Saturday Honors Program in Columbia University described as an introduction to Neuro-Science. One summer she also attended an institute on Math and Science at Syracuse and even built her own superconductor.

An immigrant from Madras, India, Subha's family came to the United States 15 years ago, seeking a better education for the children. Her father opened a pharmacy and moved the family first to Westbury and four years ago came to Bethpage. Subha works in the pharmacy often and helps with the medical billing. She became interested in the Red Cross and volunteered as an HIV/AIDS Educator who would go into schools and agencies to talk to after-school clubs. She also volunteered as a Disaster Services worker helping out in the Mineola Center or the Oyster Bay shelter for a few hours each week.

As a sophomore, she was chosen as the Hugh O'Brien Leadership Scholar for the school and, for the past two years, she has served on the Nassau County Youth Board as one of four student representatives reviewing special programs. In addition, she has been on the Nassau County Youth Participation Project serving on a variety of committees dealing with issues from the Homeless to Racial Problems.

Subha is an active, energetic person with a clear sense of herself and goals. She feels inspired and challenged by her parents who made a difficult decision in coming to the U.S. and is determined to succeed in every area. She will make a superb doctor or lawyer or whatever avenue opens in the future. She embraces challenges!

Notable Neighbor At Library

On Thursday, February 11, at 7:30 p.m., at the Library you can get the fascinating inside story of a welder's progress in the trades, on the unions of the day and on the special people who built New York's skyline. The Friends of the Bethpage Public Library have invited Sal Miceli, February's notable neighbor to present "A Welder's Eye View" of some of New York's major constructions, including the Greenpoint Gas Tanks and Smoke Stack, the third tube of the Lincoln Tunnel and the New York Coliseum before the collapse. As an avid photographer, he will present slides and photographs taken on many job sites dating as far back as the 1950's. Join The Friends and your neighbors at this unusual evening!

All are welcome and the admission is free.
The Library is located at 47 Powell Avenue, two blocks west of Exit 8 on the Seaford-Oyster Bay Expressway (Route 135), phone 931-3907.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU THINK YOUR CHILD IS ON DRUGS.

The Telltale Signs

- Chronic eye redness, sore throat or dry cough.
- Chronic lying, especially about whereabouts.
- Wholesale changes in friends.
- Stealing.
- Deteriorating relationships with family members.
- Wild mood swings, hostility, or abusive behavior.
- Chronic fatigue, withdrawal, carelessness about personal grooming.
- Major changes in eating or sleeping patterns.
- Loss of interest in favorite activities, hobbies, sports.
- School problems - slipping grades, absenteeism.

Take a deep breath.

You're not a failure as a parent. You're not helpless. And you're not alone.

If you think you're a failure, consider this: There are many kids with neglectful parents who never use drugs. There are also children with seemingly model parents who do use drugs.

So the first thing to accept is that drugs, while indeed dangerous, are one more problem for youngsters to handle. And they'll do it better and faster if you're aware, involved, and don't stick your head in the sand.

THE AWARE PARENT IS THE GOOD PARENT.

Part of awareness and a major deterrent to experimentation is to talk to your kids about drugs.

But even with a lot of parental involvement, there are no guarantees. So it's important to know the symptoms of drug use and to take action if you see your youngster displaying them.

THE WARNING SIGNALS.

There are no symptoms that are absolutely reliable. But there are clues (see box).

Most of these symptoms tend to be gradual which is why parental awareness is so important.

But don't jump to conclusions.

Many of the warning signs for drug use are the same as those for depression or for the ups and downs of being a teenager. There's also the possibility it's a physical or emotional problem.

But whatever the problem, we're talking about a child who needs help. Right now.

First, you'll need an evaluation from a health professional skilled in diagnosing adolescents with alcohol or drug problems.

You may want to get involved with an intervention program to learn techniques that will help convince a drug user to accept help.

For the user, there are self-help, outpatient, day care, residency, and 24-hour hospitalization programs.

The right program depends entirely on the circumstances and the degree of drug involvement. Here, you'll need professional help to make an informed choice.

Another point: If a program is to succeed, the family needs to be part of it. This can mean personal or family counseling. It may also involve participating in a support group where you learn about co-dependency and how not to play into the problems that might prompt further drug use.

If you don't know about drug programs in your area, call your family doctor, local hospital or county mental health society or school counselor for a referral. You can also call the national helpline - 800-662-HELP - for advice and a referral.

WHATEVER YOU DO, DON'T GIVE UP.

That child who upsets you so much is the same little boy or girl who, only yesterday, gave you such joy. They're in way over their heads, and they never needed you quite as much as they need you now. No matter what they say.

For more information on how to talk with your kids about drugs, ask for a free copy of "A Parent's Guide to Prevention." Call 1-800-624-0100.

START WITHIN THE FAMILY.

Nothing beats the power of love and family support. That has to start with a frank discussion.

Don't make it an attack. And don't try to talk with your child if he or she seems under the influence.

Wait for a calm moment and then explain that you're worried about certain behavior (be specific) and give your child every opportunity to explain. That means really listening, not doing all the talking.

At the same time, it's important to speak frankly about the possibility of drugs. And it's particularly important to talk about your values and why you're dead set against drugs.

If your youngster seems evasive or if his or her explanations are not convincing, you may want to consult your doctor to rule out illness and to ask for advice.

You may also want to have your child visit a mental health professional to see if there are emotional problems.

FURTHER ACTION MAY BE NECESSARY.

If your child seems non-responsive or belligerent, and you suspect drugs are involved, immediate action is vital.

How to buy the best computer

By Sharon Achax

If a PC isn't perched on your desk at home, you've at least seriously thought about placing one there.

Technological advances continue to make personal computers affordable to the masses — and the masses are responding by embracing them for home and school use as never before.

The biggest question on everybody's lips no longer is "Should I buy a computer" but rather "Which is the best for me?"

The first step in answering that question is to thoughtfully and carefully consider how the computer will be used. If you're interested only in word processing, for instance, you won't need as much computing power and speed as someone who plans to do desktop publishing, database management or number crunching.

For successful shopping, experts suggest you make a list of all the different ways you hope to use the computer over the next several years — from game playing to report writing to tax preparation to Christmas label printing. Begin to shop by researching what's available at well-known computer stores. Their knowledgeable salespeople can use your list of needs to help identify the machines that best match your processing and software needs.

Want to start up a desktop publishing business at home? You'll need a machine with enough memory to operate all the drawing, pagemaking, clip art and extra font software you're bound to desire.

Want to interact with an on-line service such as Prodigy, The Sierra Network or an electronic bulletin board? A fast modem is a must.

Planning to catch up on work at home? Chances are your employer has an IBM-based system, so you'll want to purchase an IBM or compatible. While clones can be a real money saver in this market, they also can be a disaster of cheaply made parts. So, if you're shopping for a clone, watch for name brands inside the computer, like Seagate hard disk drives, Teac floppy disk drives and AMI motherboards.

Buying a computer for a student? Find out what kind of computer the school he attends uses. Many elementary schools are equipped with Apple II systems that often are considered obsolete, but for which there is more software than for any computer ever built — including word processors, databases, spreadsheet programs and draw, paint and design programs.

Before you run out and buy an Apple II for a child, however, find out if it really matters whether the computer at home is compatible with the one at school. Many kids are computer whizzes so comfortable with computers of all kinds that they might prefer to have something different to use at home — a computer that may better meet the needs of other household users.

The computer of choice on many college campuses is the Macintosh — not only are they easy to use, but there are highly sophisticated word processors for the Mac that make a snap of term paper literary chores such as footnotes.

Another virtue of the Mac is that most models are smaller than a typical desktop IBM-compatible or clone, which can make a difference in a cramped dormitory or student apartment.

The best solution to limited space, however — and to working on the road — is a notebook-size laptop. These compact computers frequently pack as much power and memory as their larger counterparts.

For traveling workers, laptops traditionally were paired with a modem that connects computer to computer via telephone line. Now, however, these small wonders can be used with radio frequency-based modems — devices that transmit signals over airwaves instead of phones for instant communication, anytime, anywhere.

If opting for a standard-size desktop computer — no matter the system — the wise consumer will pay the extra cost to purchase a color graphics card and monitor. Color systems are much more interesting to work on and play games on, and so may be well worth the investment to get on-the-fence parties interested in computing.

After you've narrowed your choice of machines, it's time to shop around for the best buy — not only at computer outlets, but also at department stores and with reputable mail-order firms.

No matter the system to be purchased, ask about the availability and cost of obtaining after-sales support, both from the dealer and from the product manufacturer. Is there a toll-free number to call?

When you finally buy a system, make certain you have a receipt detailing all of the system's components for tax purposes should you want to take deductions for an at-home business or plan on later donating the machine to a charity.

In addition, the usual shopping suggestions apply, such as paying with a credit card for greater resolution resources should problems arise, keeping all correspondence, noting the names of the salespeople who help you and so forth.

Know also that what's state-of-the-art today may be obsolete six months later. So, try as you might to get the latest and greatest innovation, you're sure to fail. Don't let that hinder your decision to buy, however, since often innovations are much more than the casual user ever needs.

In addition, the computer industry has hit upon a solution of sorts to tackle the obsolescence dilemma: upgradable personal computers.

The idea is that when computer owners start to feel that their PCs aren't fast enough, don't have enough data storage or don't have enough memory to run new software, they can simply swap an old part for a more powerful new component.

Be aware, however, that upgradable PCs cost slightly more than similarly equipped non-upgradable models, and it may actually be less expensive simply to trade in an old machine for a new one rather than upgrade anyway. That's because, while an upgraded processor costs only about one-quarter the cost of a whole new machine, chances are you're also ready for more memory, a bigger hard-disk drive, a monitor with better resolution, a new mouse or keyboard.

By the time you've purchased all those new parts, it may make more financial sense to buy an entire new system and donate the old one to a school or charity.

If you're not really sure whether your family will use a computer, rent before you buy. It's cheaper to pay $150 a month or so for rent than $1,500 to $7,000 to purchase a system that sits gathering dust — and some firms allow consumers to apply rental payments toward purchase.

Other good reasons to rent: To complete temporary projects at work or to postpone capital costs during the start-up of a home-based business.

By Gordon McComb

Pass! Want a real bargain in a good computer?

The real deals are in used computers.

As long as you don't need the latest and greatest, buying used can save you 50 percent or more over purchasing the same goods new. And, like a new car that has to be tweaked by the dealer to get out all the kinks, a used computer has already been through the bug wash.

In most cases, you can just buy it, plug it in at home, and start computing, right away.

Of course, buying a used computer takes some planning. After all, you don't want to be stuck with someone else's lemon. Here's how to avoid the headaches in used computer shopping.

FINDING THE DEALS

Used computers are mostly found in the classified ad section of local newspapers. Check there first. If your area is serviced by a specialized ad paper — a publication expressly for the purpose of publishing classified ads of all types — be sure to look there, too.

Get the paper early, and scan the ads immediately. Don't wait, because the good deals go fast. Know what you're looking for before you start, so you can zero in on the ads that interest you the most.

For example, if you're looking for a used Apple Macintosh II computer, you can skip the ads for Commodore, Amigas and IBM PCs.

Most ads provide a phone number. Call and get more details about the machine, like:

- How old is it?
- What other hardware does it come with?
- Are you selling any software with it?
- Does it have a transferable service contract?
- Does it have any known problems (is anything broken)?
- Why are you selling it?

If the computer still sounds like a good bargain, get an address and make an appointment to see it. Don't wait too long: this is a first-come, first-serve business, even if you were the first person to call and make an appointment. If possible, try to see the computer immediately, or at least no later than the same day as you call.

WHAT ABOUT PRICE?

If a price is mentioned in the ad, double-check it, in case there's a typographical error. Don't attempt to negotiate price on the phone, especially if the ad has just come out. The seller has no way of knowing if the computer will sell at the asking price, until he receives more phone calls and offers.

A popular computer listed at a reasonable price sells quickly — often a matter of just a few hours after the ad hits the streets, so don't count on haggling on price when the price is already more than reasonable.

That doesn't mean haggling is recommended, or even necessary.

Some sellers overestimate the true value of their used computer, and try to sell it for just a few dollars off list price. Try to negotiate a better price if you feel the seller is asking too much. But be aware that some sellers are just too boneheaded to realize they've overpriced their goods. Don't waste your time arguing; go on to the next ad.

How do you spot a reasonable price when you see one? That's a tough question, because you need considerable knowledge about computers and current prices to make an informed decision.

However, you can get a good idea about price by scanning the other ads. Calculate an "average" selling price for the same or similar model, taking into account extras like printers, monitors and software. The better deals are the computers sold at or under this average.

You can negotiate after you've personally seen the computer. If you feel the seller is asking a decent price, go ahead and pay it. But if you feel the price is too high, make an offer.

AVOIDING THE LEMON

Used computers don't come with a manufacturer's warranty, so there is no guarantee the beast will still be working a week from when you buy it. This is the single, largest risk of buying a used computer: What do you do when it breaks down?

There is no way to completely avoid a computer that someday cracks apart, but you can avoid buying a lemon in the first place. Look for signs of abuse and amateurish repairs. Avoid machines that appear like they've been on the repair rack one too many times.

Never buy a used computer without first turning it on, and personally testing it. If possible, turn the computer on and off a few times, and watch for any troubles it has starting up.

Arrange with the seller a limited "warranty": your money back if the computer breaks down in X number of days. You can try for seven or 14 days, but you may have to settle for just a couple of days.

Whether you pay by cash or check, be sure to get a receipt. The receipt should include the name of the seller, a phone number, the merchandise sold (all optional components should be itemized) and the selling price.

FREE SOFTWARE?

If the seller has included software (the software is already installed on the hard drive, for example), be sure to get the original diskettes and manuals. This might include programs like Lotus 1-2-3, WordPerfect or Microsoft Windows.

If the seller doesn't have these, or refuses to give them to you, then you can consider the software not legally transferred to you. In that case, the software should not be considered in the price of the computer.

Some sellers attempt to "sell" you software with the computer, while retaining the original diskettes and manuals themselves. This is illegal, and it also puts you in the awkward position of paying for something you don't really get.

A NEW HOME

Once the computer is yours, feel free to make it your own.

If the previous owner installed a menu utility, redo it to suit your needs and tastes. Or remove it and replace it with something more to your liking.

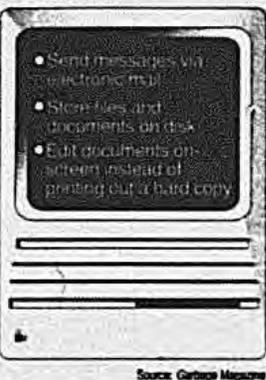

Do the same with any applications programs that came with the computer, like word processors and electronic spreadsheets, as well as with the hardware.

You may wish to start out with a clean slate: reformat the hard drive and install your own software from scratch.

K Of C Award

Oyster Bay Town Councilman Thomas L. Clark, second from right, presents a citation to Stephen Stiehle, Immediate Past Grand Knight of the Joseph Barry Council No. 2320 of the Knights of Columbus in Hicksville, recognizing his years of commitment and dedication to the organization. On hand for the occasion were Stiehle's wife Janice and Ray Pfeiffer, New York State Knights of Columbus Council State Deputy.

Historical Society's Winter Social Jan 31

In a delightful prelude to this Sunday's Superbowl Game, the Hicksville Historical Society will hold its annual Mid-Winter Social Meeting Jan. 31 from 2-4 in the Kenneth Barnes Community Room of the Hicksville Public Library. Members and the general public are cordially invited to join in the socializing and camaraderie which is typical of this gathering of those who cherish and enjoy Hicksville and Long Island historical recollections.

Refreshments will be served in an interesting and musical setting. On display in the library's Community Room will be two exhibitions of art work.

Other Vic At Bethpage Library

On Sunday afternoon, January 31, at 2 p.m., the Bethpage Library invites you to attend a performance of the play, "Guilty Conscience" by Richard Levinson & William Link presented by the renowned Other Vic Theatre Company. This is a play of suspense in two acts in which Arthur Jamison a renowned criminal lawyer...brilliant, charismatic and treacherous in and out of the courtroom is in the process of a divorce from his wife. This divorce will leave him financially devastated so Arthur, never a procrastinator, begins plotting to kill her. In the courtroom of his mind he creates various scenarios and pits himself against an imaginary prosecutor.

Don't miss this wonderful afternoon of theatre at the Library.

Hearing On Change To Retail Zone

A request for a change of zone in Hicksville will be the subject of a Tuesday, March 23, public hearing by the Oyster Bay Town Board, according to Town Councilman Thomas L. Clark.

"The applicant, Herbil Holding Co., is seeking a change of zone 'D' Residential to 'F' Business (Neighborhood Business) District to construct a retail building in Hicksville," Councilman Clark explained. "The property is located on the northeast corner of Newbridge Road (Route 106) and Barter Lane."

The meeting will be held in the hearing room of Town Hall East, Audrey Avenue, Oyster Bay, beginning at 7 p.m. The first hour of the meeting will be devoted to general public comment on any subject. Starting at 8 p.m., the regular Town Calendar, including the above mentioned hearing, will be called.

Pedestrian Killed Crossing Rd.

Det. Michael Kuhn of the 2nd Squad reports the details of a fatal auto accident that occurred in Hicksville on January 19 at 6:05 p.m.

Dolores Pine, 59, of 600 Franklin Ave., Massapequa, was crossing Newbridge Rd., at Duffy Ave., when she was struck by a 1991 Ford Tempo being driven by Edna Perez, 65, of Hicksville. Another auto, a 1990 Nissan being driven by Monte Seid, 40, of Hicksville, also struck Dolores. She was pronounced dead at the scene by AMT Gurlides.
No charges were filed.

Hicksville Students In Orch. Conference

Connie Young, a Junior at Hicksville High School, has been selected to the Music Educators National Eastern Division Conference Orchestra. Connie was one of a few students in New York State to receive this exceptional honor as the result of her performance in the recent All-State Orchestra at the New York State School Music Association Conference.

A member of the High School Orchestra, the String Ensemble, and the String Quartet, Connie studies the viola with Mrs. Patricia Rudolph and Mrs. Amy Noll. The orchestra will perform at the Eastern Division Conference on March 21 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Hicksville Public Schools was well represented at the prestigious 1993 All-County Music Concerts. Ninety-nine Hicksville elementary and secondary students, an unprecedented number, were selected to perform. The students were selected based on audition and teacher recommendation from over a thousand music students in Nassau County. The Festival was held at the Tilles Center at C.W. Post on Jan. 8 through 10. The following students received this honor.

Hyponotherapist At Road Runners Club

The featured speaker at the Tues., Feb. 16 meeting of the Plainview-Old Bethpage Road Runners Club will be Jan Krivosheiw, the prominent Syosset clinical hypotherapist and behavior therapist who has devoted her efforts to helping athletes to improve their athletic performance through "visualization."

The meeting will be held at the Plainview-Old Bethpage Public Library, 999 Old Country Road in Plainview, starting promptly at 8 p.m. The general public is cordially invited to attend.

Ms. Krivosheiw will help those in the audience make their own athletic workouts more effective through visualization techniques, and will enable them to learn why the top athletes in the country are so natural in achieving their optional performance. It's not only for runners - cyclists, swimmers, tennis players, and participants in every other sport can benefit from learning what Ms. Krivosheiw has to teach.

For more information call POBRRC President Mike Polansky at 433-0919.

Carmine A. Somma
On January 11, the VFW nominated and elected to the Board of Directors, Shelly Okin, Lester Iehle, Fred Palumbo, Henry Gongolewski, Anthony Ferrara and Victor Ribando. Also serving on the board are William Frohnhoefer, Conrad Steers, Carmine Somma, Joe Artale and Joe Messana.

Officers of the Board are Chairman Shelly Okin, Vice Chairman Joe Artale, Treasurer Lester Iehle, Assistant Treasurer Joe Messana, Secretary Victor Ribando, Trustees Wm. Frohnhoefer and Anthony Ferrara. We want to extend our heartfelt thanks to Pat Mercurio and George Walden for the services rendered during the year and for their assistance. They are both leaving the Board of Directors, their expertise will be missed. A special thanks goes to outgoing Board Chairman Vincent Edwards who is also leaving the Board of directors. During his tenure in office as Board Chairman a great deal was accomplished such as interior remodeling and improvements during the past two years. A deal of time and effort was put forth by Vinnie and the Post appreciates his accomplishments. Good luck Vinnie.

Congratulations to a new member who joined the Post, Eugene Baldwin, U.S. Navy WWII. Congratulations to Geraldine and Fred Palumbo on their 49th Wedding Anniversary and to Anita and Lou Foster celebrating their 51st Wedding Anniversary.

Antarctica Trip At Library

Naomi and Jesse Taub will take you on a photographic cruise to Antarctica on Wednesday, February 10, at the Bethpage Library. Join the Taubs as they recount their exciting trip to the South Pole. Through the eyes of their camera you will sail close to the icebergs and swim with the seals and whales. Take a walk with the penguins and their chicks, and fly with the albatross, petrels and other sea birds in a land that teems with unusual life!

After the show, the Taubs will be happy to answer your questions as you discuss Antarctica's past and explore its future.

Admission is free and all are welcome.

The library is located at 47 Powell Avenue, two blocks west of Exit 8 on the Seaford-Oyster Bay Expressway (Route 135), phone 931-3907.

Touch Football

Pierrot Consort In Plainview

On Sunday, January 31, at 2 p.m., the Town of Oyster Bay, "Distinguished Artists Concerts" series, will present The Pierrot Consort at the Plainview-Old Bethpage Public Library, 999 Old Country Road in Plainview, according to Town Councilman Leonard Kunzig.

"The Pierrot Consort," directed by Susan Deaver, Cellist and Maureen Hynes, Flutist, is the faculty ensemble-in-residence at Long Island University," said Councilman Kunzig. "Both talented musicians, Ms. Hynes and Ms. Deaver, established the Summer chamber Music Festival eleven years ago. This three week Festival offers young musicians intensive study of standard chamber music repertoire."

Councilman Kunzig noted that the "Distinguished Artists Concerts" series is being sponsored by the Cultural and Performing Arts (CAPA) Division of the Town's Department of Community and Youth Services. All concerts are being offered free to residents of the Town of Oyster Bay.

Notable Neighbor Program

On Thursday, February 11, at 7:30 p.m., at the Library you can get the fascinating inside story of a welder's progress in the trades, on the unions of the day and on the special people who built New York's skyline. The Friends of the Bethpage Public Library have invited Sal Miceli, February's notable neighbor to present "A Welder's Eye View" of some of New York's major constructions, including the Greenpoint Gas Tanks and Smoke Stack, the third tube of the Lincoln Tunnel, and the New York Coliseum before the collapse. As an avid photographer, he will present slides and photographs taken on many job sites dating as far back as the 1950's. Join The Friends and your neighbors at this unusual evening!

All are welcome and admission is free.

The Library is located at 47 Powell Avenue, two blocks west of Exit 8 on the Seaford-Oyster Bay Expressway (Route 135), phone 931-3907.

In Service

Navy Airman Robert Silvia, son of Kathleen Silvia of 18 S. Elm St., Hicksville, is in the Persian Gulf with Air Anti-Submarine Squadron-37, San Diego, where U.S. and coalition aircraft recently attacked Iraq in response to continued Iraqi violations of U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Silvia was also recently off the coast of Somalia supporting the international relief effort Operation Restore Hope. These taskings demonstrate the mobility, flexibility and capabilities of forward deployed naval expeditionary forces. On short notice, these forces are poised to respond to crisis in distant lands, from the sea.

The 1990 graduate of Hicksville High School, joined the Navy in November 1990.

HHS Science Fair Winners

Hicksville High school students presented over sixty experimental projects at the school's Annual Science Fair. Students work independently under the supervision of Science Department teachers on their projects; projects are not part of their classwork.

Judges selected eleven outstanding projects for recognition. Michael Chang received first place award for his project entitled "The Effects of an Altered Atmosphere Upon Grain Storage and Grain Packaging." Second place award was shared by Todd Master and Puneet Chandhok, while third place was presented to Hae Sung Jung and Betsy Thomas. Honorable mention was given to Jason Benowitz, Meredith Bogart, Jamie Boyle, Syeda Hossain, Paul Jan and Greg Sherman.

Representing Hicksville High School, the students will go on to compete for national recognition at the Long Island Science Congress.

Science Fair third place winner, Hae Sung Jung, presents his project "How Does The Electro-Magnetic Field Affect the Appearance of Oscillatoria?"

Middle School Geography Champion

Hicksville Middle School student Ian Rasmussen, an eighth grader, recently won the school championship of the National Geographic Bee. The National Geographic Society sponsors the Geography Bee for students in the fourth through eighth grades in more than 45,000 schools across the United States, the District of Columbia, and five United States territories, as well as the Department of Defense Dependent Schools around the world. The National Geographic Society has as its mission the increase and diffusion of geographic knowledge. The Geography Bee is intended to excite young people, motivating them to study geography.

Ian will advance to the next level of competition, a written examination. All school winners are eligible to win the national championship and its first prize, a $25,000 college scholarship. Second prize is a $15,000 scholarship, and third prize, a $10,000 scholarship.

The National finals will be held May 25 in Washington, D.C. Alex Trebek, host of "Jeopardy," will moderate the National finals which will air as a prime time special on the Public Broadcasting System.

At the school level bee, students answered oral questions on geography. Ian survived a strong challenge from sixth grader, Elias Lie.

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Do you think that President Clinton should attempt to mediate the government problems in Haiti rather than allow refugees to enter the U.S.?

"It's not drowning or sharks I'm afraid of . . . It's the reprisals we'll face if we're returned."

Mixed Ideas On What Clinton Should Do First

There were mixed ideas on what Pres. Clinton should do first now that he is in the White House in answer to this question: "What do you think should be President Clinton's first order of business after he selects his cabinet?" Here are some of the answers:

ALREADY STARTED

President Clinton has already started. He has repealed the "gag" rule and other items in Bush's war against women. Next he should push through Congress bills for family leave and freedom of choice to overcome the present government by religious fanatics. Next on international affairs he should hold conferences on international affairs with Saddam Hussein, the leader of Serbia and other world oppressors at some neutral spot telling them exactly what we will not stand. Once agreements are made there he should start withdrawing our troops that now garrison the free world. We will no longer then be expected to act as policemen of the world. With international affairs stabilized he should concentrate on a health care system that is a complete renewal not just modifications of the present mess. C.C.

LARGE DEFICIT

I think that we should expect Clinton to do something about the large deficit which his party has for several years said is the Number One problem. We have been disappointed with Clinton in that he promised a middle income tax cut and was campaigning on a platform that he was going to keep taxes down by socking it to the rich. No one appeared to add it up during the campaign and call him on the fact that if he wiped out the rich completely that it would not make a very big dent in the deficit. Clinton has come into power on false credentials. I hope he has something that will work, he should start with cutting the deficit and then get back to cutting taxes. G.F.

ECONOMICS FIRST

In spite of all of the rhetoric to the contrary, Clinton will be unable to do very little different than Bush did on the foreign front. We do not want to get involved deeply in a foreign war and we do not want to let Saddam Hussein get away with things that will pull us into war. The Serbs and Croats would be better left to the U.N. The real reason Clinton was elected was because of the economy. I think that if he had a way to help the private sector to do better and have a chance of making a profit for the money it will have to risk to get us really out of the recession that this should be his first effort. F.V.

CABINET SHOULD HAVE PRIORITIES

It would seem to me that President Clinton's first order of business after he selects his cabinet is to instruct each of those members to do what this "Question of the Week" asks - define their individual first order of business. I am sure every one of them has established a priority list of things which need immediate attention headed by one item which stands out as deserving of top priority. Needless to say Clinton must have a priority list of his own on which the should consult with his Vice President Gore to develop a program which should be shared with his Cabinet. In my opinion, the number one item has got to be a plan of action to be initiated immediately with respect to the national deficit - everyone recognizes the problem but is unable or afraid to come to grips with it. Perhaps it is much too big a problem for individual attention and therefore it should split into several spheres to be delegated to a number of the President's staff with terminal dates for constructive solutions and plans of action. Needless to say, the international situation will also demand priority attention which is unavoidable but not at the expense of immediate efforts to solve our national debt. P.G.S.

PAST ISSUES

SCHOOL INCOME TAXES

The fairest way to collect revenue for school districts would be to use a combination of three methods. Partly by tuition, partly by an income tax and partly by a property tax. Parents should bear a responsibility in the cost of educating their children. A tuition charge of maybe $500 or $1000 per school year is appropriate. Parents who send their child to private or parochial school would be exempt. They would already be paying tuition to the schools the children are attending and reduce the revenue needed to maintain the public schools. Secondly collecting revenue partly by an income tax would be fair because it would put more of the burden on higher income persons who can afford to pay more taxes. Third, although collecting revenue by property tax has been around a long time it is not the fairest tax. Homeowners who never had children are being forced to pay the same or higher taxes than other homeowners who have several children attending school. Many homeowners forgo having children today because of the huge expenses required to properly raise children and also own a home. These homeowners are being cheated when schools are mainly supported by property taxes. No one method is 100% fair. But by partly using the above three methods we are at least being more fair. J.M.

No No No to Governor Cuomo's request to allow school districts to use an income tax for a property tax to collect revenues. This policy of having the higher income residents pay for everything is chasing business and eventually jobs out of N.Y. State. This is one more log on the fire of hidden taxes. It does not guarantee that the majority of residents would pay less only that the more affluent will pay more.

Far Beneath Still Waters

By Donna Marie Koblica

(An introspective account of dealing with infertility)

Our cherished dream of having children had almost disintegrated. After six years of futile attempts, countless doctor visits, endless examinations, painful batteries of tests, anxiety producing surgeries, alternating moments of eager anticipation shattered by intense disappointment leading to periods of desperation, along with occasional marital stress, it had turned into an arduous ordeal. Sometimes it amazes me that so much time has gone by, and that I've been able to cope this long. And yet when I consider the problems (far greater than mine) which other people must face, I marvel at their innate strength in dealing with theirs so well. As I empathize with them, my inability to conceive seems less in comparison. However, these vacillating revelations do not remove my difficulty, they merely serve to alleviate my plight temporarily.

Unfortunately, infertility seeps into the essence of one's soul and tries to strangle it, unless you learn how to fight back. It is a curse that leaves no dimension of any emotion unscathed. This emotional upheaval has been likened to a rollercoaster's ride, creating a metaphor that suggests a quick pace of extreme highs and lows. Yes, it does entail the entire gamut of emotions, but at an unbearably slow speed.

When I first began this worthwhile endeavor, I was very naive as to the complex nature of conceiving a child. At the time, I had observed that most people were trying to prevent unwanted pregnancies. Thus, it seemed that birth control was more difficult than planning a family. My best friend had experienced infertility, but I thought she was a rare case.

After a year without success, I began to worry: Why weren't our lives progressing as we had planned? Everything, up to this point, had fallen neatly into place. We had fulfilled our aspirations of graduating from college, getting married, and buying a home. What was preventing us from achieving the next step? I felt suspended in time, as others were moving forward. I reasoned that every success we had attained was acquired through hard work and perseverance. Thus, it became extremely frustrating not to have our present efforts rewarded. It was tantalizing to discover that we had no control over it.

We decided to see an infertility specialist to determine its cause. The tests I underwent took a few years to complete, partially because most of the tests had to be performed during certain, precise times within my menstrual cycle, and because each test conducted was inconclusive. Since all of the results were negative, I thought my husband was the only one with a special condition. While I waited for him to decide to have a varicose (Varicocelectomy) operation, I became an expert with basal thermometers, their charts, and ovulation detector kits. Our spontaneous romance was replaced with scientific schedules. Humor would tend to ameliorate the situation, since routine lovemaking is not conducive to enhancing one's mood.

The next emotional hurdle became one of surprise and anger. We were surprised, because we didn't want to admit that there really was a problem. Subconsciously, we hoped the doctor would say: "Oh, don't worry! It was just a matter of bad timing." Now, we couldn't escape the denial process any longer. We were faced with the fact that a problem did definitely exist, and it was more severe than we had expected. Then the anger crept inside me, attempting to suffocate me, intermittently for years, as I would ponder: "Why me? What am I being punished for?" The world transformed itself into a frightening enigma! Teenagers were having unwanted babies or abortions, and some mothers who were blessed with children were abusing them. The irony of it all, contradicted my common sense and violated my perspective of a fair, decent life.

Time went on and on and on. Our families wholeheartedly assured us that everything would be all right if we just learned to relax. The more I heard that piece of advice, the more nervous I felt, since that insinuated that it was our fault. I know the suggestion was given with loving concern, and I even appreciated their thoughtfulness, but it left me feeling that somehow I was to blame. Perhaps, it was due to the underlying guilt already incurred by the realization of being different from the norm of our society. My husband never shared this tormenting sense of guilt. He maintained a healthy attitude regarding all of its injustices and incongruities. Obviously, this stems from the fact that he is a realist and I am an idealist.

Our friends listened patiently and compassionately, while they comforted us and offered optimistic viewpoints. Each time I thought I would drown in my own sorrow, their guidance saved me.

And yet, there were moments when I deeply regretted having told anyone anything because they would unsuspectingly bring up the subject when either I was in a good mood and didn't want to spoil it, or when I was already so sad that I couldn't bear to talk about it and advertise my grief again. Luckily, these were transient feelings, since most of the time I felt truly fortunate to have developed quite a few close friendships that I could always depend on. In fact, one of the benefits of having this condition is that you develop the aspect of sincerely appreciating the good things in your life, more than you ever did before, because you learn the lesson "Never take anything for granted" the hard way. You can never again expect that life will (or should) deal you a fair set of cards. You have acquired the necessary awareness that although mankind has an encompassing desire to grow and expand, improve skills, conquer goals, and ultimately succeed overall, you cannot overlook the reality that fate will inherently play a part in every pursuit.

Our marriage fluctuated between harmony and despair. At certain points, especially in the early years, we seemed to be traveling in opposite directions. Resentment and a strong taste of futility gave new meaning to the word depression. We struggled with this nightmare together and yet privately alone. It was a most delicate balance of wills. I could not allow my will to have a family to supersede my will to obtain a solid, intimate marriage. I had to avoid condemning my husband for not sharing the same intensity of emotions which I was going through. Although he sympathized with my sorrow, he could not always understand its depths.

I became enveloped in fear since I was unable to envision a childless future. I didn't consider a marriage to be a family in and of itself. I felt a void which forced my life to seem incomplete. My right to immortality had been robbed. Who would come to visit me in my old age when I became sick and weak? Who would carry on my beliefs, after I was gone and forgotten? What would my husband and I do to fulfill our lives without the impressive accomplishment of creating and nurturing a life from our love?

The psychological suffering hurt more than any physical ailment I have ever had. I couldn't manage to release myself from it, no matter how diligently I tried. Television shows and commercials based on families would haunt me. Babies were popping out of the woodwork, as my wounds kept festering. The sight of a pregnant woman would annoy me with jealousy. When my girlfriends became pregnant, I would feel relieved after they gave birth. I relentlessly analyzed this peculiarity of mine and discovered that it was due to the fact of my being unable to relate to being pregnant. However, I could identify with the more common experience of loving a new baby, the joy I eventually felt was a soothing replacement of the initial self-pitying envy.

One of the hardest feelings to get rid of was the sense of mourning a loss. To everyone else, including my husband, I was just unlucky each month as my cycle continued its pattern. People would say: "Don't worry! There's always next month." Well, when those months roll into years, you cannot hold that attitude any longer. Although I never had a "true" miscarriage, there were many times when I felt as though my child had died. Each month I would build my hopes so high, that I would fantasize about how delightful the whole prospect might be. In essence, what I was really mourning for was the death of my dream, since the longing to have a child made the possibility of becoming pregnant within my reach, no matter what obstacles were in my way. My grasp on reality was overwhelmed by an obsession to reproduce.

Two years after my husband underwent his surgery, and I still wasn't pregnant, I decided to get a second opinion on my mysterious "undetermined" condition. Within four months, after a Laparoscopy, my new doctor detected the root of all my trouble, Endometriosis, which is a backflow of the endometrial tissue that adheres to ovaries and other organs. Mine was so massive that the doctor could not remove it during the Laparoscopy. I had the necessary surgery performed and I am very pleased with the highly successful results. They were able to clean out this excess tissue and cysts without damaging a large portion of my ovaries. It's been three months since the operation and we've just begun trying to conceive again, but it's all so much different now.

Finally knowing what my problem was caused by, has filled me with an inner peaceful acceptance of my destiny. Even though I do not have a child, to a great extent, in my mind, this dilemma has been resolved. The nagging uncertainty which formed the origin of

Q. Is it considered bad manners to take anything to drink to your lips while there is still food in your mouth?

A. Yes, because this may leave particles of food in the beverage or leave an unattractive smear on the glass. Your mouth should be empty before you take anything to drink. Certainly you should avoid the effect of "washing down" food that is already in your mouth. It is amazing how many people are guilty of this breach of etiquette.

If Your Restaurant is First Rate,
 We have a message for you.

Each week Litmor Newspapers presents a select dining guide called Reader Ratings to its readers. The guide presents the messages of outstanding restaurants in this area and it also is a forum for readers to tell other readers about why they like certain restaurants.

Reader Ratings, although it is read by up to 100,000 readers is an inexpensive way to meet the public and have the public meet you. Throughout many years, Reader Ratings has helped build loyal followings for some of the best restaurants in the area.

If your restaurant qualifies as a leader in the area we want to talk to you about being included in our guide. The cost is nominal and the results can be great.

Q. Where restrooms have a person handing you towels, what is the proper amount to tip?
 A. In many cases the attendant operates on a concession basis, taking the tips in return for keeping the restrooms clean and maintained. If you are feeling generous a dollar is enough and will cover any subsequent visits to the restroom. However, you are not obligated to tip the person.

Q. At a restaurant where there is valet parking and you do not have a reservation, what do you tip the person when you cannot get a table and decide to leave?
 A. Depending on whether you frequent the restaurant regularly, the tip is optional and the attendant will understand if you pass him up this time.

Wine Talk

By Richard Nalley

"Mountaineers are always free" is a motto from Latin. Put a bunch of mountaineers around a conference table and you get "The Organization of Anarchists," a phrase from Duane Cronin of Cronin Vineyards.

He is referring to the old Santa Cruz Mountains Vintners Association, a collection of free spirits known both for appealing wines and for its cheerful inability to agree on much of anything.

The Santa Cruz Mountains anarchists are a bit more organized these days — the winemakers' association and grape growers' association have recently merged, with an eye toward promotion — but the attitude remains.

The 30 or so wineries scattered around the half-million square acres of California's official Santa Cruz Mountains appellation make wine the hard way, pulling harrowingly small yields of intensely flavored grapes from the thin mountain soil. They tend to have their own ideas about how to do it.

You won't hear Santa Cruz Mountains winemakers complain about the conformity of thinking at the University of California, Davis. Unlike their counterparts in Napa and Sonoma, few of them have darkened a classroom at that West Point of wine.

"Believe me, 90 percent of the world's great wine is not made by oenologists," says former Stanford philosophy major Paul Draper of Ridge Vineyards, one of the most influential California winemakers of his generation. "It's made by people who gain an understanding, a feel for what makes great wine by making it."

And there is truly great wine being produced in the Santa Cruz Mountains — by Ridge, Mount Eden, Bonny Doon, Kathryn Kennedy and Cronin — and very good wine by labels like Cinnabar and Ahlgren. At first glance, these wineries appear to have little in common.

In a business where a few hundrated feet or twist toward sun exposure can make a marked difference in the product, these wineries are several hours' drive apart, their front doors looking out on scenes as various as lower San Francisco Bay, towering coastal redwood forests and dry scrub hills of manzanita and sage brush.

They are not even all on the same tectonic plate. Ridge Vineyards is geologically part of North America while the rest of the Santa Cruz Mountains appellation, across the San Andreas fault, grinds northward on the Pacific plate.

Yet there are observable common threads among the wines and wineries here. All but Kathryn Kennedy, a special exception on the Santa Clara valley floor, are perched at elevation, most well above the 400-foot fog line.

Like the best mountain grape wines, they tend to be relatively firm-bodied, intense and slow to develop. In many of the estate-produced reds — most famously in Ridge's luxury priced Montebello bottling — there is a noticeable earthy, mineral component that one finds more often in the wines of Bordeaux's Graves region than elsewhere in California.

Very low yields prompt most Santa Cruz Mountains wineries to supplement their estate-bottled offerings with wines made from grapes bought elsewhere. Typically these non-estate wines are well-priced and display the distinctive touch of the winemaker (assuming he or she has one) if not the mountain character of the estate wines. These are not "me-too" wines, or "me-too" winemakers — montani semper liberi.

Some Santa Cruz Mountains labels to look for:

• Ridge Vineyards is the flagship winery of the region, and one of the handful of most reliable, top-quality labels in California.

Founded in 1950 on the site of a 19th century winery, it is hidden way up on a mountain road so twisty and vertiginous the original owner died from injuries after his carriage went over the side.

Ridge's pride and joy is the Montebello, a Bordeaux-style, Cabernet Sauvignon-based blend made from the winery's home vineyards. Typically complex and mouth-filling, with spice and mineral nuances, the wine is absolutely gorgeous in the excellent vintage of 1990.

For less than half the Montebello's $40-plus price tag, Ridge's Santa Cruz Mountains Cabernet Sauvignon, from Montebello and Jimsonare vineyard (just down the mountain), is worth seeking out as well.

Ridge's Paul Draper is legendary for his Zinfandels, and Ridge is arguably the most famous producer of the true, spicy red stuff. The Geyserville (see Pick of the Week, below) and Lytton Springs bottlings made from very old Sonoma vines are among the great examples of this wine.

• Bonny Doon Vineyard, nestled among the redwoods above the Pacific Ocean, was Wine Talk's 1992 Winery of the Year. Though only a modest portion of the many wines Bonny Doon produces (each in small quantities) come from their Santa Cruz Mountains estate vineyards, Proprietor Randall Graham fits right in with the eccentric spirit of the region.

Graham is California's — maybe the world's — most ebulliently inventive winemaker, turning out everything from Rhone-style reds like the famous "Le Cigare Volant" (the French idiom for flying saucer — there's one pictured on the label) to Italian-style wines to "ice wines" frozen in a freezer, to potstill brandy, grappa and eau-de-vie.

Virtually everything I've had from Bonny Doon has been at least interesting, and the best wines (including Le Cigare Volant, Pinot Meunier Blanc de Noir, Le Saphire and the estate Syrah) are world-class.

When tasted this winter, Bonny Doon's wines seem to have reached a new plateau of maturity and excellence in which all the show-off is in the funny labels. Graham is also committed to producing fine inexpensive wines, and his Clos de Gilroy and Graham Crew reds and Vin Gris de Cigare rose are among California's best wine bargains.

No. 1 Restaurant
C.P. Michaels, a Floral Park Restaurant located at 41 Covert Ave., was listed as the #1 Restaurant for casual dining, in a recent N.Y. Times food critics review of restaurants of 1992.

The review went on to say, "The name of C.P. Michaels sounds like a pub, and that is exactly what it looks like, with Tiffany lamps, brass railings, stained glass, overhead fans, a pressed-tin ceiling and walls of brick and wood. But in the booths there are flowers on the tables, and bountiful breadbaskets appear almost the moment customers are seated. The menu offers an array of dishes that are not usually found in casual cafes. A three-course a la carte meal of American food with a French accent averages $15 to $20. Daily specials bring the cost down still further."

C.P. Michaels is owned by East Williston resident, and Williston Chamber President, Peter Russo, and partner Michael Ventre, a resident of New Hyde Park.

Q. My brothers and I are giving a dinner dance in honor of our parents' 50th wedding anniversary. What should the party hours be? For how long should the orchestra play? This isn't exactly a rock 'n' roll group that will be in attendance.

A. How lucky you are to have parents celebrating their 50th! Have the orchestra wait to play until dinner is completely finished. (Only the very young generation likes to eat dinner to loud music and thus be unable to talk during the meal!) You might plan a scenario along these lines:

Invite guests for cocktails at 7:30.

Serve dinner at 8:15 or 8:30. At approximately 9:30 dessert and champagne will be served.

At 9:40 the children toast their parents, the honorees toast each other and then the other guests toast them.

By 10 p.m. toasts should be over. The orchestra strikes up a happy tune. Your parents dance alone for three minutes, then a son and a daughter cut in on them, then everyone dances.

At midnight: The party's over for the guests (and maybe before that for the guests of honor!)

all my other feelings has been obliterated completely and eternally. This new state of mind has uplifted my spirit to a higher level of elation based on a secure framework of contentment. Evidence of this new outlook appears every day. When I see a pregnant woman I can smile; when I see a touching movie or television show with a theme on families, I can enjoy it. I can now regard my husband and I as a real family unit; my anger has totally dissipated; and I know without a doubt that I should not feel the least bit guilty over something that was way beyond my control. I am no longer afraid to live my life without children. I'm sure they could enhance our lives considerably, but I do not need to depend upon its supposed inevitability as I did before.

Life is beckoning me to explore other alternatives to find various means of achieving satisfaction. I am happy with my life and for other people's lives as well. I feel exhilarated enough to renew my quest, but not to ever allow it to be the central crux of my entire inner being. I am free from that parasite which nearly consumed me. My frustration has been weeded out and I am left with a calm, steady flow of confidence and indomitable courage. Adversity often forms strength, if you can overcome its ramifications. Our marriage did not just survive, it blossomed beautifully.

My soul has journeyed through an overwhelming catharsis, as I am no longer torn apart by what is and what could be. I now take pleasure in what is and what will be.

Who knows what purpose we each have on earth? For many years, I thought my role was to be a very good mother. Maybe not. Perhaps, my role as a school teacher will have a greater impact on and enlighten more lives. Thus, my contribution to society will still be significant and in some small way I will be immortal when my philosophies are remembered.

Far beneath still waters, there lurked a silent force growing steadily to overwhelm my existence, but I conquered it - and returned to find my entity had evolved into a better state than ever before.

About The Author

The author originally wrote this article a few years ago. During which time, she and her husband, John, consulted with her third infertility specialist who had almost given up hope. He proposed a choice of the last two alternatives left to consider, namely, in-vitro fertilization or adoption.

While waiting to reach a decision regarding these options, they were blessed with a remarkable discovery, Donna had already conceived naturally! Last year she gave birth to their son, John Michael, after an eight year struggle.

READER RATINGS

Q. We are not wine drinkers. If we're giving a party, what kind of wines should we stock in order to take care of our wine-drinking friends' pleasure-from cocktail hour through dinner? T.R.

A. For the cocktail hour you might have on hand dry or sweet sherry, or dry or sweet vermouth, or any of the popular "aperitifs." Many choose a glass of dry white wine at the cocktail hour (either chilled or "on the rocks").

For the first course, or to drink with any fish, salad, chicken, veal, or fruit, a chilled white wine is nice (such as a Chablis, Soave, Riesling, Chenin Blanc, Pinot Chardonnay).

For the meat or game course (or the salad with cheese), serve a Burgundy, Bordeaux, Chianti, Cabernet Sauvignon, or Zinfandel at a cool room temperature (from 60 to 70 degrees).

Rose wines should be chilled, like white wines. A rose is best served with a light dish and is more popular in hot weather than in cold.

For dessert you may serve the same wine you had from the previous course. Or if it's something festive like an anniversary, dessert time is the moment to bring on the champagne (the drier the better!).

Some people enjoy a sweet wine with dessert, such as port or a sweet sauterne or sherry, but one seldom sees this custom followed anymore in this country.

Q. Who is served first at table and when is the proper time to begin eating? F.P.G.

A. The hostess is not served first unless she is the only lady at the table or is alone with her husband and children. If grandmother or even a young girl guest is present the dishes are first presented to her after inspection by the hostess. When the hostess is serving from in front of her place, with or without the aid of a servant, she is served next to last and her husband last. For her to serve herself earlier will mean her food will be cold and her filled plate in the way.

After several people have been served, urged by the hostess, guests begin eating so their food will not be cold. And, except at breakfast, the polite husband waits until his wife has been served before beginning to eat.

Down-home dumplings warm winter nights

By Sharon Achatz

On the coldest of nights, I often seek the culinary comfort of down-home dumplings simmered atop a fragrant stew.

Twenty minutes is all it takes to cook the biscuitlike batter — 10 minutes uncovered for lightness and 10 minutes covered to cook them through.

While I sometimes use my grandmother's basic dumpling recipe, Bisquick baking mix boxes publish a suitable and simple substitution.

Either of these recipes can be modified with the addition of ¼ to ½ cup of grated cheese or ¼ to 1 teaspoon dried herbs.

Either dumpling recipe also sits well atop Sausage Stew, a 15-minute sensation that combines sautéed fresh vegetables with smoked sausage and canned beans.

Begin mixing together dumpling batter during the last 5 minutes of stew simmering time, then drop on the dumplings for a dinner that's ready to serve in 35 minutes.

GRANDMOTHER'S DUMPLINGS

- 1½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- ¼ cup milk

Yields 10 dumplings.
 Preparation time: 25 to 30 minutes.

Mix together flour, baking powder and salt; cut in shortening until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Stir in milk until soft dough forms.

Drop dough by spoonfuls onto boiling stew. Cook uncovered over low heat 10 minutes; cover and cook 10 minutes more.

BISQUICK DUMPLINGS

- 2 cups Bisquick baking mix
- ¼ cup milk

Yields 10 to 12 dumplings.
 Preparation time: 25 minutes.
 Mix ingredients until soft dough forms.

Drop dough by spoonfuls onto boiling stew. Cook uncovered over low heat 10 minutes; cover and cook 10 minutes more.

SAUSAGE STEW

- 1 onion, sliced
- 3 carrots, sliced
- 3 zucchini, sliced
- 4 stalks celery, sliced
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 (15-ounce) can cannellini beans, drained
- 1 (15-ounce) can tomatoes
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1 teaspoon dried basil
- 4 cups chicken broth
- 1 pound smoked sausage, cut into 1-inch sections

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
 Preparation time: 15 minutes.

Saute onion, carrots, zucchini and celery in oil in large sauce pot until tender, about 5 minutes. Add beans, tomatoes, garlic, basil, broth and sausage; cover and simmer 5 minutes or until heated through.

QUICK TIP

Read through an entire recipe before you start to prepare it and assemble all the ingredients called for. This way you'll have everything at hand for the quick preparation possible.

If there's anyone who doesn't love lasagna, I haven't yet met them. As far as I'm concerned, it's impossible not to be tempted by tender strips of pasta smothered in a thick tomato sauce rich with herbs and garlic, offset by mild ricotta or cottage cheese, and topped with chewy mozzarella. Lasagna is saucy and savory, hearty and filling — the ultimate comfort food.

If you're a lasagna lover, as most of us are, there have probably been times when you'd have loved to serve lasagna for dinner — but you just weren't up to preparing it.

Maybe you cherish Grandma's handed-down recipe, the one everyone in the family makes for special occasions. But if you do things like Grandma did, it can take you half a day to prepare. Unless you're willing to put in the hours required for some of these older (and admittedly delicious) recipes, forget it.

With a microwave, however, you can turn out quite satisfactory modern variations on the lasagna theme in much less time than you'd think. Lasagna in less than an hour? Yes, from start to finish.

One way to save time is to cook lasagna noodles conventionally, as directed on the package. While noodles boil, use your microwave to cook ground beef or sausage, or to prepare marinara sauce. (Purchase commercially bottled sauce to make it even easier on yourself.)

Pasta can certainly be cooked in your microwave, but you won't save any time, since it takes just as long to rehydrate noodles in your microwave as it does on the stove top.

Also, since it's difficult to use as much water in microwave containers as is needed to cook pasta, microwaved noodles can be pasty and sticky in texture.

If you do choose to micro-cook your lasagna noodles, sprinkle ¼ teaspoon salt over the bottom of a 13x9x2-inch glass baking dish. Add noodles from 1 (16-ounce) package. Cover with hot tap water and add 1 tablespoon vegetable oil. Cover with plastic wrap, turning back 1 corner to vent. Microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) setting 13 to 17 minutes, rearranging noodles every 7 minutes. (For 8 ounces of noodles, follow same directions but microwave 10 to 14 minutes.) Let stand in water 3 minutes, then drain.

Today's Easy Mock Lasagna gives you the flavor of lasagna, but with much less trouble. The recipe uses wide egg noodles, which you toss with rich cream cheese, evaporated milk and grated Parmesan cheese. Top with a marinara sauce of ground beef, tomato sauce and purchased spaghetti seasonings.

Or try the more traditional Italian Sausage Lasagna (substitute 1 pound lean ground beef for the sausage, if you prefer).

It's easy to add crumbled ground beef or Italian sausage to any microwave recipe. Just crumble meat into a microwave-safe casserole (remove casings from sausage) and microwave at HIGH setting 3 to 7 minutes per pound, stirring to break up every 3 minutes. When a recipe calls for meat and you don't want it, simply omit for a vegetarian version.

If you have a smaller family or live alone, there's no need for a huge pan of lasagna to feed 16. Instead, try Single Serving Lasagna Rolls. This recipe uses two conventionally cooked lasagna noodles rolled up lengthwise with filling into a sumptuous serving for one. Recipe can be doubled for two (see instructions below).

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

EASY MOCK LASAGNA

- 4 cups wide egg noodles
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 (15-ounce) can tomato sauce
- 1 (1½-ounce) packet spaghetti seasoning mix
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- 1 (3-ounce) package cream cheese
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper
- ¼ cup shredded mozzarella cheese

Yields 6 to 8 servings.
Preparation time: 15 to 20 minutes.

Cooking time: 16 to 23 minutes (plus 5 minutes standing time).

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power); LOW (30 percent power).

Prepare noodles according to package instructions; drain and set aside.

Crumble beef into 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Add onion and garlic. Microwave at HIGH setting 4 to 6 minutes, stirring to break up after 3 minutes, until meat loses pinkness. Drain off excess fat.

Add tomato sauce and spaghetti seasoning mix; stir to mix well. Cover with wax paper and microwave at HIGH setting 3 to 5 minutes, until sauce begins to thicken.

In 11x7-inch microwave-safe baking dish combine evaporated milk and cream cheese. Microwave at LOW setting 2 to 3 minutes, stirring every minute, until soft enough to stir smooth. Stir in cooked noodles, Parmesan cheese, salt and pepper. Spread out evenly over bottom of dish.

Spread meat sauce mixture over top of noodles, then top with shredded mozzarella. Cover loosely with wax paper and microwave at HIGH setting 7 to 9 minutes or until heated through and bubbly, rotating dish every 3 minutes. Let stand, covered, on heat-proof surface 5 minutes before serving.

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Bad habit

Dr. Abraham: I have a habit that I've never told anyone about, and I'm lucky that no one has caught me in the act.

At home I snatch coins from the pile my father empties out of his pockets every night. After he and my mom go to bed, I quietly open the refrigerator and eat some of the sweet stuff (mainly ice cream) that I'm too fat to keep on eating. At school I sneak away with things (pencils, erasers, pads of paper) I see on kids' desks and that I don't even need or use.

Lately I've been making off with small items in stores when no one is looking.

I know I'm headed for trouble and I need your help. I didn't know where else to turn. — No Name

No Name: I agree with you, and I'm so glad you recognize the extreme dangers you're facing. As you probably know, getting caught could result in a criminal record from which you may find it hard to break away.

Help is needed, and immediately, from your parents or school counselor or both, and a professional person to whom they might guide you. Those who know you, will respect your confidence and are willing to and are capable of helping you are the kind of advocates you need.

Shoplifting is a serious practice that must be broken, so please seek help as soon as possible. A delay could be a disaster for you, and the longer you wait the more serious your situation could become.

Dr. Abraham: Whenever I baby-sit with this one family, the kids like me to read to them before they go to bed. That was OK at first, but it's really a drag now.

The problem is that they always want me to read the same old books and that's just plain B-O-R-I-N-G to the point that I could scream.

I know this family is pretty poor by their furnishings, the empty fridge and no children's books but those two. I go there only about once a month or less, but that's too much.

I don't get much money from them, but even that little bit comes in handy. So I probably won't quit, but I wish I could.

What do you think I should do? — Unhappy Reader

Unhappy Reader: Why not think about using part of your baby-sitting income to buy them a book occasionally that they will help you pick out? It could be only as frequent as your limited resources may be able to stretch. Also, consider taking them to the library once in a while (depending on their ages), again letting them help with the choice.

In addition, if they insist on your reading the same ones, you might perhaps bring a little variety into the situation by you and they acting out parts based on characters in the stories. If you do this, try not to expect too much and try also to make it enjoyable for all of you.

Dr. Abraham: I know I'm too fat, so what? After all, I have plenty of time to take off weight when that is more important to me than it is now.

The boys I know like me the way I am so why make a big deal over my weight like my parents do? I just wish one thing most on all — bug off and stop nagging me.

I'm 13 and feel OK about myself so what's their big deal over nothing? — Satisfied

Satisfied: Perhaps you are like many other teens in looking ahead and having an attitude like Scarlett O'Hara did in the great movie, "Gone With the Wind." Her attitude was, "I'll think about that tomorrow."

The "big deal over nothing" that you mentioned is probably a serious concern they have over something quite important — your health. Although it is often difficult for some teens to think about the future, let me try to get into this topic in a practical way.

I'm helped by a recent research study that appeared in the highly respected medical publication, The New England Journal of Medicine.

Included are these findings regarding the adult health dangers that teens like you may face:

- Overweight teen-agers are more likely than their thin friends to face serious adult problems like heart disease, colon cancer and arthritis. Even if they are not overweight later in life, fat teens often have poor health in later years.

- Women suffer a variety of additional health problems if they were overweight in their youth. Those who were overweight during their early years are eight times more likely to have trouble with household tasks that include climbing stairs, lifting and even walking modest distances.

- Men who were fat adolescents begin to die at a higher than expected rate by the time they are 45. (That's a long time from now, but your thoughtful, serious male friends might be interested in this fact.)

Fluff off all this with a "Not me" attitude if you want to, "Satisfied," but maybe you'll be smarter than that if you think about it.

Dr. Abraham: I'll admit it, I'm hooked on Nintendo video games. Although I've read a little stuff about them, I'm always looking for more. So I hope you can help me.

If you have some suggestions that I already know about, so much the better.

By the way, your column is terrific. — Nintendo Fan

Lowly produce is worth the digging

By Charles Britton

Root vegetables are the drudges of cuisine always available to fill in a plate, to play a supporting role to the more glamorous ingredients (which include almost anything else), to serve as bulk in the diet.

Still, like those who stand and wait, root vegetables serve a vital function. Without them, many of our favorite dishes would scarcely be possible — indeed, we ourselves might not be possible. This is the time of year when, in traditional societies, people dine on root vegetables to get through the winter.

Without modern transportation, green vegetables would pretty much disappear by late fall in many regions, and communities would have to look to their larders. Many root vegetables have the quality of keeping for a long time because the plants themselves use the root to store nutrients. People simply came along and took advantage of this benefit.

While today most produce items are available year-round, this is the right season to be mentally checking through our repertory of root vegetables, many of which reach their peak when a chill is in the air and the hours of daylight shrink.

If you have a root cellar — which is no more than a cool, dry, dark place with good ventilation — now is the time to use it; many root vegetables will keep better in such conditions than in the fridge. In general, do not wash root vegetables before storing.

• Beets: Available year-round. To store, remove tops, which are good cooked as greens. Wash roots and refrigerate in plastic bags for a couple of weeks.

• Carrots: Available year-round. To store, remove and discard tops. Refrigerate in plastic bags for a few weeks.

• Celery root (celeriac): In season October through April. Refrigerate in a plastic bag for about a week.

• Jicama: Peak season runs October to June. Whole jicama will keep in a cool, dark, dry place for about three weeks. Cut pieces should be refrigerated in plastic bags for about a week. Jicama is almost invariably eaten raw.

• Jerusalem artichokes (sunchoke, topinambour): In season October through April. Refrigerate in a plastic bag for about a week.

• Parsnips: In season November through March. Refrigerate in a plastic bag for about 10 days. In ideal circumstances, parsnips will hold much longer; before potatoes arrived in Northern Europe, parsnips provided much of the bulk in the diet.

• Potatoes: Yes, we know that potatoes aren't roots — they're tubers, but they are always grouped in this category. Available year-round.

Thin-skinned potatoes of the boiling type do not store well but hold in the ground; sometimes, people would put them in canisters and bury them. Today they should be stored in a cool, dry, dark place for a couple of weeks. Thick-skinned russets keep longer.

Potatoes should not be stored in plastic bags. If kept very cold, potato starch will turn to sugar, to reverse the process, store at room temperature in a dark place for a few days. If exposed to light, potatoes may turn greenish; discard if vegetables show more than a trace of green, which should be cut away.

• Radishes: Available year-round. Remove and discard tops. Refrigerate in a plastic bag for a week or so. Large Daikon radishes will last longer.

• Rutabagas: Peak season is October to March. Store, unwrapped, in a cool, dry, dark place for two months. Unwrapped, they will keep at room temperature or refrigerated for about a week.

• Sweet potatoes and yams: Both are tubers. Yams are the darker of the two and more moist when cooked; sweet potatoes are pale in color, with a dryer texture.

Peak season is October through March. Unwrapped in a cool, dry, dark place, sweet potatoes and yams will last a couple of months; at room temperature, they will hold only a week or so.

• Turnips: Peak season is October to March. Remove leaves, which may be cooked as greens. Unwrapped in a cool, dark, dry place, they can last for weeks. Refrigerate in a plastic bag for a week or two.

The most famous of beet dishes is, of course, Borscht, most associated with Russia and Ukraine. Of innumerable versions, this one takes a midway position between the very thin type and the hearty recipes that contain cabbage.

BORSCHT

- 2 pounds fresh beets, peeled and coarsely chopped
- 2 onions, chopped
- 1 potato, peeled and quartered

- 1 quart water
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - Lemon juice to taste
 - Sour cream for garnish
 - Boiled potatoes (optional)
 - Yields 6 servings.
- Place beets, onions and potato in pot with water. Simmer 1 hour or until vegetables are very tender.

Strain cooking liquid into another pot. With spoon, remove about half cooked beets and set aside. In blender or food processor, puree remaining beets, onions and potato, adding a little of liquid if needed.

Place pureed vegetables and reserved beets in pot with liquid. Season with sugar, salt and lemon juice. Heat until almost boiling if soup is to be served hot.

This borscht may be served hot or chilled. Serve with sour cream and hot boiled potatoes, if desired.

This potato salad departs from the traditional pattern.

HERBED POTATO SALAD WITH PEPPERS AND TOMATOES

- 12 medium white potatoes
- 1 cup olive oil
- ¼ cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon chopped fresh dill, or to taste
- 1 teaspoon chopped fresh mint, or to taste
- 1 teaspoon chopped fresh basil, or to taste
- 1 teaspoon chopped parsley, or to taste
- ¼ teaspoon chopped fresh garlic, or to taste
- Salt, pepper to taste
- 1 red onion, peeled and chopped
- 1 mild white onion, peeled and chopped
- 1 bunch scallions, cleaned and sliced
- 1 green bell pepper, seeded and chopped
- 1 red bell pepper, seeded and chopped
- 1 large tomato, seeded and chopped
- 2 stalks celery, sliced
- Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Boil potatoes in their skins until just tender. Drain and peel as soon as cool enough to handle. Cut into large chunks in bowl.

Combine olive oil and lemon juice. Add herbs, garlic, salt and pepper to taste. Pour over potatoes and toss lightly.

Add remaining ingredients and gently toss to combine. Serve warm or at room temperature.

Jerusalem artichokes, needless to say, aren't artichokes (although they do taste vaguely like them) and they aren't from Jerusalem. In fact, they are the enlarged roots of a member of the sunflower family. Though they have been on the market for decades, they remain unfamiliar to many cooks.

CREAM OF JERUSALEM ARTICHOKE

- 1 pound Jerusalem artichokes
- 1 small onion, peeled and chopped
- Butter
- 3 cups chicken stock
- 6 tablespoons heavy cream plus more for garnish

Salt, pepper to taste
Cinnamon or nutmeg
Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Boil Jerusalem artichokes in water to cover for about 20 minutes or until just tender. Rinse in cold water. Gently saute onion in butter in heavy saucepan until transparent. Meanwhile, peel artichokes and chop. Add to onions and saute together a few minutes.

Add chicken stock and simmer for about 10 minutes, until the vegetables are tender. Mash vegetables with potato masher or puree in food processor, adding heavy cream; the soup should retain some consistency. Bring soup to simmer; season with salt and pepper.

Be careful not to overseason soup and thus drown out the delicate flavor of the Jerusalem artichokes. Drizzle with additional cream and sprinkle lightly with cinnamon or nutmeg.

Celery root is a member of the celery family that has been bred for the root — well, that makes sense, doesn't it? The roots, which are ugly and ungainly looking when unpeeled, have a pronounced celery taste. One way of using them is to mash them with potatoes.

MASHED CELERY ROOT AND POTATOES

- 2 large celery roots, about 1 pound each, peeled and cut into cubes
- 2 or 3 baking potatoes (russet type), peeled and cut into cubes
- 6 large garlic cloves
- Salt, white pepper to taste
- A dash of grated nutmeg
- 2 tablespoons butter, or to taste
- Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Place celery roots, potatoes and garlic in saucepan with water to cover; bring to boil. Simmer 20 to 25 minutes, until very tender. Drain, reserving liquid.

Using your favorite technique for mashing potatoes, mash vegetables into smooth puree. Some people like to use a ricer, others use a whisk. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Add butter and enough of the reserved liquid to result in a consistency to your taste.

Return saucepan to heat, beating until puree is heated through.

Variation with rutabagas or turnips: Instead of or along with celery root, use peeled, diced rutabagas or turnips.

Variation with cream: Instead of reserved liquid, use milk or cream to thin puree.

Whether you are arranging them for your house or to give to a friend, follow these tips to make cut flowers last longer and look fresher.

• Harvest either early morning or evening but never cut flowers in midday sun.

• Carry a pail with water and place each flower (especially roses) into this immediately.

• Cut stems at a slant to maximize the water-absorbing surface and to prevent a stem from resting flat against the bottom of the pail. It's usually best to cut stems a bit longer than you think will be needed.

• Back in the house, fill a clean, deep container with tepid water, recut each stem and place in the container for several hours or, even better, overnight if possible.

• Always handle flowers carefully by their stems at every stage. When you lay them out on a table, let the heads hang over the edge to prevent crushing.

• As you make arrangements, once more recut each stem on a slant to the desired length and remove all leaves that will end up below the waterline of the vase.

• Change the water every day or two, and as they fade, remove dead flowers.

INDOOR GREENERY

If you like indoor greenery but have little time for gardening, here's a list of the easiest indoor houseplants to grow: philodendron, spider plant, grape ivy, ferns, snake plant, wax plant and wandering Jew.

SPRING PLANNING

The ground is solid with frost so plan now for renovations to be made in your garden this spring. Plan also for the coming season's planting.

It is a great time for reading catalogs, order the newer introductions; supply often is limited. Examine your begonias, dahlias and gladioli for damp or rot. If dry, sprinkle lightly with water; check again in a few weeks.

Don't forget your birds; keep feeders cleaned and filled and put out pans of water.

WINTER BEES

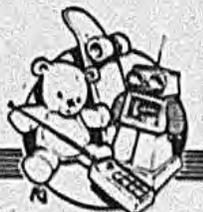

Keep your beehives covered until the snow has melted and it is warm enough for them to leave their hives safely. If they happen to venture out while the air is still too cool, they may catch a chill and die.

Our Children

By Willard Abraham

Communicating with a teen-age girl

Q. I've read and heard how difficult it is to live with an adolescent, but when you come face to face with it, it's really tough.

A. Our sweet little girl who was always so open, saying what she wanted to and even listening most of the time. Now that she is nearly 15 years old she is a totally different person.

The main problem is that she just won't communicate. I'm so tired asking her about school, her friends, what she eats at school and so much that I want to know that I'm ready to give her the silent treatment she gives me.

Can you help me out, please?

A. Improving communication in a family takes time, so trying to be patient is important but not easy.

However, there are other steps you might take. Here are some of them: Concentrate on her interests instead of yours; try to talk with her at times that are convenient for both of you; talk to her as an adult (even though she is young) rather than as a child, and use compliments when appropriate, related to clothing she wears, habits she has and interests of hers that you know about.

A recent publication titled "The Little Girl Book" (Ballantine) includes some practical ideas beyond the little-girl level. You would probably be interested in the last chapter with sections on "Adolescence: The Great Divide" and "Special Problems of Adolescent Girls." The authors are David Laskin and Kathleen O'Neill.

Two widely used books are "P.E.T.: Parent Effectiveness Training" written by Thomas Gordon (Peter H. Wyden Inc.) and "Between Parent & Child" by Haim Ginott (Macmillan).

You might also want to at least skim through other books on adolescence at a nearby library or bookstore. There are many recent, as well as older dependable ones. By the way, any books by Thomas Gordon and Haim Ginott are among the older ones, but they still are very useful.

Your task may be difficult, as you probably already know. You perhaps hear about tough adolescent situations of other parents, too. But there may be some consolation in the thought that this, too, shall pass. Believe me, it often does.

Q. We are two parents who are very alert to the values and limitations of television, especially for children. Ours are young, both at preschool age, and we do our best to include carefully selected TV watching in their experiences.

Despite our limited time (we both work) we take seriously the need to monitor what they watch as well as what we read to them and their games, toys and outside activities.

I think we know pretty well what worthwhile television programs are available, but we hope you'll tell us of new ones that may be appropriate and that might have slipped by us.

Thanks very much for your help.

A. It is always refreshing to receive letters from concerned, careful parents like you. There are many more in that category than some people think, and their knowledge of children's needs and development is becoming more extensive all the time. So you're in good company.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting states that public television programming targeted toward preschoolers increased recently by an estimated 25 to 37 percent, so that's also encouraging.

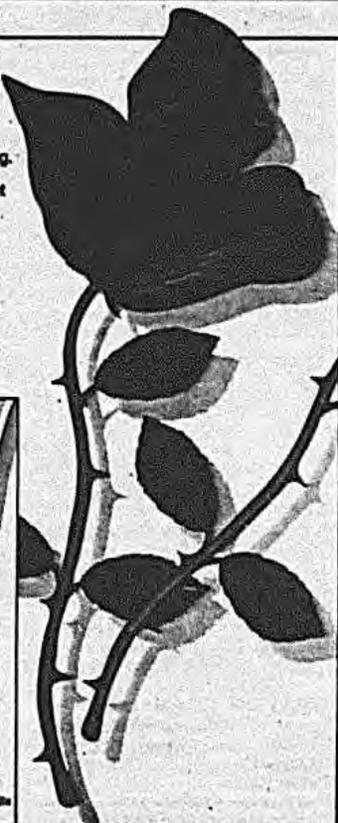

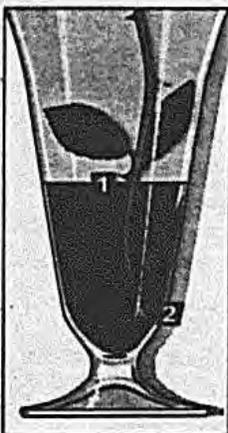

Two popular series aimed at younger viewers are "Lamb Chop's Play Along" and "Barney and Friends," both funded by CPB. That corporation committed up to $4.5 million to fund the first season of a children's program called "The Puzzle Factory." It won't be aired until 1993, so watching the television columns could be worthwhile in the meantime.

We seldom find anything that'll match Miss Frances' (Dr. Frances Horwich's) "Ding Dong School" that taught and fascinated preschool children for so many years all across the country.

GARDEN TIPS

Long-lasting cut flowers

- Harvest blooms early in the morning or in the evening.
- Immediately place cut flowers in a pail of water. Cut off any leaves below the water line (1).
- Cut stems at a slant to maximize water-absorbing surface (2).
- Leave flowers in a cool, dark place for several hours before arranging. Always handle cut flowers by their stems.

If you have trouble waking up refreshed, cuddle up with your partner before you go to sleep.

That bit of advice is one of the suggestions on waking up refreshed that are advocated in the book "The Complete Guide to Your Emotions and Your Health: Hundreds of Proven Techniques to Harmonize Mind and Body for Happy, Healthy Living" (Rodale Press).

"If you cuddle up with stress, you may wake up feeling ready for bed," according to the staff of Prevention magazine, which edited the manuscript.

Other suggestions for a better night's sleep include:

• Drink only non-alcoholic nightcaps.

• Reduce excessive noise.

• Maintain a moderate room temperature.

• Stop smoking. Nicotine is a central nervous-system stimulant.

• Wake up slowly, like a cat.

"Dogs and cats do a slow, luxurious, full-body stretch every time they get up from a nap. Your body tells you that's the right way to start the day, too — body and soul need a little time to cross the threshold of this world from another," say the authors.

The 600-plus-page opus is billed as having hundreds of proven techniques to harmonize mind and body for happy and healthy living. Readers can also learn how fine-tuning their feelings and emotions can improve their well-being.

"Thoughts and emotions are the nutrition of the mind," claim the authors.

"Our attitudes and emotions can either act as a shield against illness of all kinds — from headaches to cancers — or, conversely, can bring on all manner of aches and pains — all the way up to the pain of a heart attack."

AEROBIC EXERCISE

Physical activity — particularly running, swimming or other aerobic activity — has been found to strengthen emotional well-being, tone mental capabilities and even work out psychological problems such as depression, note the editors.

"Exercise is emotional aerobics," says Dr. Bob Conroy, a psychiatrist at the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan., where he organized a cardiovascular fitness program to boost sagging spirits. "Any good aerobic routine (that speeds up heart and breathing rates) carried on a minimum of three times a week for 30 minutes each session pays big dividends."

Aerobic exercise is found to build emotional hardness in at least nine ways, including relieving tension and anxiety and improving concentration and memory.

"Like a well-tuned engine that uses less oil, a well-tuned body uses less energy to perform daily functions," say the authors, adding that a fit person is better able to withstand stress.

Every time you work out hard, you're helping to release pent-up tension, according to Dr. Kenneth Cooper in his book "The Aerobics Program for Total Well-Being" (Bantam).

Cooper advises that you should schedule your workouts after work, before dinner.

"At that time, exercise helps release tensions that have accumulated during the day."

As a bonus, he says, exercising at that time is an appetite depressant.

THERAPEUTIC PETS

A University of Pennsylvania study revealed that heart attack patients with pets had one-third the death rate of petless patients.

"Having a pet did improve a patient's chances of surviving and did in some way help the patient to be healthier," say researchers Alan Beck and Dr. Aaron Katcher in their book "Between Pets and People" (Putnam).

In another study, Katcher and psychologist James Lynch found that pets were viewed as less threatening or judgmental than people, which makes them more relaxing company.

"Pets can shift our attention away from negative preoccupations that produce anxiety and threaten our emotional and physical well-being," says Clark Brickel, a pet researcher at the University of Southern California.

However, the researchers all stress that pets help facilitate — not replace — therapy.

"Pets offer love no matter what," emphasize Elizabeth and Samuel Corson, a husband-and-wife team of scientists at Ohio State University.

"They don't care if you're sad or happy, ugly or beautiful, old or young. They don't criticize you or try to change you. And they love to be loved, to be touched and held. When a person has this simple, relaxed outlet for emotional involvement, negative emotions fade into the background."

MIND AND BODY

How you think can have an effect on your physical and emotional health. People who see themselves in a negative light work themselves into a state of low self-esteem and depression.

Negative thinkers also burden their bodies with stress, and frequently suffer from stress-related ailments, such as headaches and high blood pressure.

The purpose of anger is to make a grievance known.

"Expressing anger is necessary for good health. But it doesn't mean a brick over the head," according to Marjorie Brooks, research director at the Center of Autistic Children and an assistant professor at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. "Anger is a normal emotion that is a result of our genetics, upbringing and culture patterns."

THE HEALTHY GOURMET

By Kit Saedaker

When days are short, there's lots of darkness and cold and the holidays are over, it's time for comfort food.

This means beef to a lot of us. It means pot roasts and stews and old-fashioned main dishes that reheat into equally good leftovers.

Once we needed the calories to face the beginning of the year. Now we want the beef fix, but insist the calories and fat stay within reason.

Here are decent recipes for such old favorites as Pot Roast, Beef Curry and Sauerbraten. All three say, "Everything is going to be all right and spring is on the way."

BEEF CURRY

1 flank steak (about 1 pound)
1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce
1 teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon cold water
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 onion, sliced
1 stalk celery, sliced
1 carrot, peeled and sliced
2 cloves garlic, chopped
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon turmeric
1/4 teaspoon coriander
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon red pepper or to taste
1 cup water

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Each serving has about 300 calories, 19 grams fat, 59 milligrams cholesterol and 250 milligrams sodium.

Cut flank steak into cubes and place in bowl. Add soy sauce and sugar. Whisk cornstarch and water together until smooth. Add to beef. Add 1 tablespoon of oil and mix to combine. Heat other tablespoon of oil in skillet. Add onion, celery and carrot and saute for 1 minute. Add garlic, cumin, ginger, turmeric, coriander, cinnamon, red pepper and water. Cover and cook 5 minutes.

Now scatter beef cubes over vegetables in skillet, cover and cook for 1 minute. Increase heat to high, remove lid and cook, stirring until sauce thickens and beef darkens. Serve at once.

POT ROAST

2 teaspoons olive oil
1 bottom round roast (about 3 pounds)
1 tablespoon water
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped carrot
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped white mushrooms
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 clove garlic
1 can (28 ounces) Italian plum tomatoes with juices
1 bay leaf
Pinch salt
Freshly ground pepper

Yields 10 to 12 servings.
Each serving has about 300 calories, 6 grams fat, 66 milligrams cholesterol and 300 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 325 F. Place 1 teaspoon of oil in Dutch oven or any stove-top-to-table pot with lid. Add roast and cook turning until browned on all sides — about 10 minutes. Remove from pan and reserve.

Add other teaspoon of oil and water and stir in onion, carrot, celery, mushrooms and parsley; cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until almost tender, about 10 minutes. Uncover and add garlic; cook until vegetables begin to brown, about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes, bay leaf, salt and pepper. Heat, breaking up tomatoes with side of spoon, until boiling.

Return meat with its juices to pan. Spoon vegetables over, cover and put in oven.

Cook about 2 hours, turning meat once or twice. Remove from oven. Remove meat and put it in warm dish. Remove bay leaf from vegetables and puree vegetables and juices in food processor. Taste sauce for seasoning. Cut meat across grain into slices and serve with vegetable-puree as gravy on top.

SAUERBRATEN

1 onion, sliced
1/4 cup white vinegar
1 1/2 cup water
1/4 cup white wine
1 carrot, sliced
2 tablespoons pickling spice tied in cheesecloth
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
Pinch salt
1 1/4 pounds bottom round steak
3 tablespoons gingersnap crumbs

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
Each serving has about 300 calories, 11 grams fat, 100 milligrams cholesterol and 270 milligrams sodium.

In large enamel or glass casserole put onion, vinegar, water, wine, carrot, pickling spice, lemon rind and salt and bring to boil. Turn heat down to simmer and cook, uncovered, for 5 minutes. Cool. Add beef, cover and when liquid is cool, refrigerate.

Keep in marinade for at least 3 days, turning often.

Preheat broiler, remove beef from marinade. Pat dry and place in shallow baking pan. Broil until brown on all sides. Turn oven down to 350 F.

Put casserole with marinade on stove and bring to simmer. Add beef. Cover, put pot in oven and cook for 2 to 2 1/2 hours until beef is tender. Slice beef and arrange slices on heated platter. Keep warm.

Remove bay leaf from marinade and puree cooking liquid with gingersnaps in food processor. Pour sauce over meat and serve at once.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q. How can we remove grease and oil stains from a concrete driveway that is almost new?

A. Saturate the area with mineral spirits or paint thinner. Then cover with an absorbent material such as dry portland cement, talc, cat litter, Fuller's earth, cornmeal or cornstarch. Let stand overnight and then sweep away the cover. Repeat if necessary.

If this method fails, use trisodium phosphate (purchased from a paint dealer, not the supermarket). Pour boiling water over the area, then generously sprinkle the wet surface with trisodium phosphate. Using a stiff-bristled broom, scrub the mixture vigorously. Let dry. Hose down the treated area, leaving enough water to absorb dry portland cement when sprinkled over the dampened area.

Use a push broom to again scrub the area with this mixture, then allow to stand two to three hours. Rinse well with clear water.

If the stains remain, use a strong poultice made by mixing one part sodium citrate crystals to six parts of water and six parts of commercial glycerine. Add sufficient whitening powder to form a thick paste.

A coat of this paste should be kept on the stain for one week, and new paste added when it dries out. Flush the dried-out second layer, away and the stain should be gone. The cleaned area may look lighter than the surrounding concrete because this solution can bleach concrete.

There also are some good commercial proprietary degreasing products on the market, available at auto-supply stores. Their application should conform to the manufacturer's instructions.

Q. I need to know how to remove tire marks from a concrete driveway. My beautiful concrete driveway with red brick ribbons is marred by tire marks made when braking.

A. You can try the concrete-cleaning methods described above.

If this doesn't remove the marks, the recommended treatment by the Portland Cement Association is flame-cleaning, which requires special equipment.

Flame-cleaning is often used to remove substances such as dried oil, old paint and dirt from concrete surfaces to give a new look or to improve bond with a new surface coating.

Flame-cleaning is accomplished by moving a special multiflame blowpipe over the concrete surface. The blowpipe burns acetylene and oxygen, producing a hot flame that causes the surface layer of the concrete to spall and shave off the aggregates.

Oil, paint and other imperfections are burned away while the moisture in the surface is evaporated. The high-pressure gas blows away the loose material and exposes a clean surface.

A manual blowpipe is available for smaller surfaces, while a rolling carriage blowpipe is used for cleaning larger surfaces. The operator of the flame equipment must wear protective clothing, gloves and a hardhat with neck protection and visor and, if necessary, welding goggles.

This type of cleaning project is best left to professionals. In your case, great care will need to be taken not to damage the brick in the process.

'Souvenir' collection

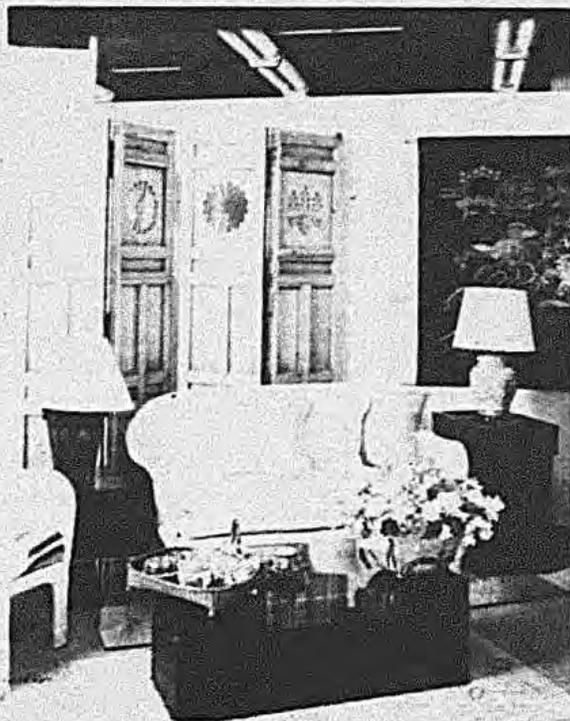

Q. We travel a lot since my husband retired and have accumulated a houseful of souvenirs, including some furniture and a great deal of pottery from India and Mexico. Displaying the pottery is easy. We had a wall of lighted shelves built in the family room.

Can you give me ideas on what to do with some of the other things? Is it OK just to mix everything in with our regular (mostly American traditional) furniture? — A.P.

A. Absolutely. That's the way it has always been done. In fact, the Chinese export porcelain and Oriental rugs we think of as indispensable in English traditional rooms were actually 18th century "souvenirs" brought home by roving sea voyagers. And nothing could be more deliberately mixed than the whatnots the Victorians adored showing off.

The more bizarre and remote their provenance — implying travel and wealth — the more status they imparted to 19th century parlors.

The room in the photo we show here is a graceful amalgam of souvenirs from Japan: The end table is a bamboo travel case, the glass-topped coffee table once served as an accountant's desk, the wall hanging is a reproduction of a futonji (wedding bed cover) and the standing screen is assembled from antique cypress doors that may have come from a small Japanese temple.

The photograph itself is from a book filled with such innovative ideas, "At Home With Japanese Design," written by two Americans, Jean Mahoney and F. J. J. Landers Rao (available from Charles E. Tuttle Co. Inc. in Rutland, Vt.).

The authors' premise is just what we're talking about: Integrating treasures from other cultures into your home. A few more ideas that might apply to your cache of souvenirs:

- Back antique fabrics (an obi, for example) with plywood, then mount on sliding glass or French doors. Or, tie small pieces of fabric around sofa and throw pillows.

- Raise chests or baskets to the height of Western furniture by making a simple wood stand as support.

- Display a collection of baskets like works of art on one wall. Deep baskets, mounted upside out to form a shelf, can show off other small collectibles.

Learning from Chinese food choices

As complex as tea-smoked duck, as subtle as steamed chicken and always reflecting the resourcefulness of the culture from which it comes — that's Chinese food.

There's no more fitting way to celebrate February's National Heart Month and Chinese New Year than to eat in traditional Chinese style, one of the most healthful cuisines available.

From Cornell University's long-term research project comes striking preliminary data that illustrate how far we Americans could go with vigorous exercise and a prudent diet.

The average Chinese in a rural setting eats 20 percent more calories than an American yet measures 20 percent thinner. The typical diet in agricultural China shows scarcity still dictates food choices.

Compared to Americans, the Chinese get a third less protein. The Chinese diet averages only 15 percent fat calories, much less than the all-American's 37 percent fat level.

Rice, wheat, soybeans and other plants form the core of the Oriental diet — agrarian Chinese derive more than three-quarters of their calories from carbohydrates, compared to Americans who eat only 45 percent of their calories as carbohydrates (with half of those carbohydrates in the form of sugars).

The typical Chinese fiber intake in a day can be more than three times what Americans manage. Rural Chinese also consume high levels of certain nutrients such as beta-carotene, available in green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow produce.

Yet, rare are reports of osteoporosis and iron-deficiency anemia, and no cases of fiber-generated mineral deficiencies have been observed.

The Chinese enjoy health consequences we Americans could live with — one-seventeenth the American males' rate of heart disease death (blood cholesterol levels in rural Chinese men average less than 160 but it's 210 in American males).

The Chinese are also two to three times less prone to develop colon cancer and much less likely to suffer diabetes, develop cancers in the reproductive organs and die of heart attack. Death from breast cancer is one-fifth the U.S. rate and from cervical cancer, one-eighth America's mortality.

Interestingly, as non-urban, impoverished Chinese move to the more industrialized regions of China and improve their economic standing, their blood cholesterol levels start to rise, and with this rise comes an increase in the diseases of affluence, such as coronary heart disease and cancers of the colon, lung and breast.

Much more work must be completed before any conclusions can be made about the processes by which the Chinese and Americans promote health or premature death through lifestyle choices. Certainly genetic differences form part of the puzzle.

The key to wellness is not simply to patronize Chinese restaurants more often. The Americanized Chinese dishes favored by many in this country are a far cry from peasants' low-fat fare: chow mein with deep-fried noodles, fried rice.

The common rural Chinese diner will savor as his meal half an ounce of fish, half a pound of rice, half a pound of starchy vegetables such as sweet potatoes and half a pound of vegetables, all for about 10 percent fat calories.

It's been said the Chinese will eat anything with four legs except a table and anything that flies except an airplane. Although you might not feel this adventurous the next time you do Chinese, adhere to the principles of true Oriental dining — load up on plants-tuffs.

Gung hay fat choy (Happy New Year!) May good health be yours in the Year of the Rooster.

SZECHWAN EGGPLANT

- 1/2 cup defatted, reduced-salt chicken broth
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon reduced-salt soy sauce
- Dash black pepper
- 1 1/4 pounds Oriental eggplant or 1 large eggplant
- 2 whole green onions, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon minced fresh ginger
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 2 small dry hot chili peppers
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1 teaspoon sesame oil
- Yields 4 servings.

In small bowl, combine chicken broth, sugar, vinegar, soy sauce and pepper; set aside. Peel eggplant; cut into strips 2 inches long and 1/2 inch thick (do not peel if using Oriental eggplant).

Spray large non-stick skillet with non-stick cooking spray; place over medium-high heat. When pan is hot, add eggplant; stir-fry 3 minutes, stirring continuously to prevent burning. Remove from pan.

Heat pan; add onion, ginger, garlic and chili peppers. Stir-fry about 2 minutes. Return eggplant to pan, pour in chicken broth mixture, cover and cook over medium-low heat until eggplant is tender, about 6 minutes.

Blend cornstarch and water; pour into pan and cook, stirring, until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in sesame oil just before serving.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never known to fail).

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God. Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me, I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days, the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. Thank you Blessed Mother." T.D.C. wj5

ANTIQU OR JUNQUE

By James G. McCollam

Paper umbrella is in good condition

Q. Enclosed is a picture of my umbrella; it is made of paper. As you can see, it came from the Chicago World's Fair.

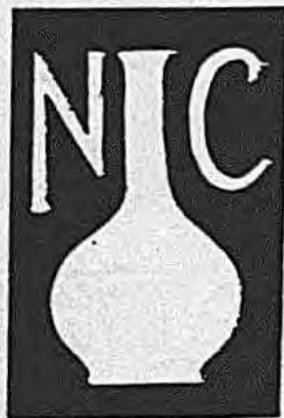

Could you please tell me if it is worth anything?

A. This paper umbrella appears to be in remarkably good condition for its 60 years. It would probably be worth about $65 to $75.

Q. This mark is on the bottom of a ceramic bowl that measures 9 inches in diameter and is 3 1/4 inches deep. It is also marked "A.F.S." It is decorated with green trees in a meadow against a blue sky.

Can you tell me who made it, when, and what is its value?

A. This bowl was made in a pottery class at Newcomb College in New Orleans in the early 1900s. It was decorated by a student, Anna Frances Simpson.

Since all of these items were one of a kind, the value is quite high; your bowl would probably sell in the $1,000 range.

Q. I have a covered butter dish marked with an "L" within a crown over "Oscar Schlegelmilch." Would this have any value?

A. Oscar was a cousin of Erdmann and Reinhold Schlegelmilch of RS Prussia fame. He operated a porcelain factory in Langewiesen, Germany, from 1892 to the late 1900s.

Your butter dish would probably sell for $50 to $60.

Q. Can you please tell me anything about a cup and saucer with the following marking? It's a wreath with "O. & E. G. — Royal Austria." The decorations are yellow roses, leafy vines, gold rims and handle.

A. Your cup and saucer were made in Altroblan, Austria, by Oscar & Edgar Guthers in the early 1900s. They would probably sell for $20 to $25.

Q. I am seeking information about a Royal Doulton figurine called "Fair Lady" — HN 2193. I would like to know its vintage and value.

A. Doulton Ltd. in Burslem, England, introduced the "Fair Lady" figurine in 1963; it is still in production. The current value is about $200 in good condition.

The same mold was used with different colored clothes — HN 2832 and HN 2833. These also sell for about $200.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. Our Siberian husky was recently diagnosed as a diabetic. She is still at the veterinary clinic, where the veterinarian is determining the correct dosage of insulin for her. Will it be difficult to live with a diabetic dog?

A. Caring for a diabetic dog takes a lot of patience. However, it is well worth the effort. A lot of diabetic dogs live nearly normal lives once a proper feeding and treatment schedule is determined.

Many of the signs of diabetes in dogs are similar to those seen in humans. These include increased water consumption, increased urination, loss of weight even though the appetite is normal and weakness in the rear legs. The coats of many diabetic dogs look dull and unhealthy.

More chronic signs of diabetes include an acetone odor to the breath, frequent vomiting and eye diseases, including corneal ulcers and cataracts. If left untreated, the diabetic dog will eventually go into a coma and die.

Diabetes in dogs is usually diagnosed by checking the level of sugar in the blood and urine at specific times following eating. Following diagnosis, it is usually necessary for the dog to remain at a veterinary clinic for a few days while the proper diet and insulin treatment plan is determined.

The treatment after taking the diabetic dog home is similar to that of humans with diabetes. This includes daily insulin injections, special diets, controlled exercise and testing of urine for sugar levels once or twice a day.

The same kinds of insulin that are used to control human diabetes are used in dogs. Usually the injections are given with very small needles in the nape of the neck. Most dogs adjust very well to these routine injections.

Although the care for a diabetic dog is fairly simple, it does require a strong commitment by the owner to feed and give injections at specific times throughout the day. Provisions must be made for care of the dog while the owner is away on vacation. Your veterinarian can further advise about the amount of special care that your dog will require.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

January is a rather slow month compared to all the excitement and preparation for the holidays the month before. By now you've gone through all your new toys and it's too cold most of the time to go out and play.

I find this an ideal month to reorganize. Start by going into your room. Look under your bed or in your closet or drawers. You'll find old books, magazines, scrap books and collections. There will be clothes you've quickly outgrown and best of all forgotten toys that used to amuse you for hours. You'll be sure to find lots of things that bring back fond memories. You'll find stuff to pass on to younger brothers or sisters and things to just throw away to make room for the new.

Almost always you will find a forgotten toy that you'll end up playing with for the rest of the day. For my son it was his Lego blocks or Star War set.

Don't forget to put your new found treasures away in a nice tidy place where you can easily find them again.

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

The Medicare hospital insurance deductible

By William M. Acosta

Q. What is the Medicare hospital insurance deductible in 1993? — S.T.

A. In 1993, the Medicare hospital insurance deductible is $876. If your income is about $7,500 or less ($10,000 for a couple), your state may pay your Medicare premium, deductibles and coinsurance.

To find out if you qualify, contact your state or local Medicaid agency.

Q. My father, who has been receiving Supplemental Security Income for several years, is having his case reviewed again. His case has been reviewed several times in the last few years.

Why is this necessary? — K.P.
A. SSI cases are subject to periodic reviews to make sure that the person continues to meet the eligibility requirements and to verify that the payment amount is correct.

A change in the household, income or resources could affect the payment amount. Any changes should be reported promptly.

Q. My husband was married before and I know that his ex-wife is getting Social Security benefits on his record. I will be 62 this year and will also be applying on his record.

Will my benefits be less because his ex-wife is receiving benefits? — M.G.

A. No. Divorced spouse's benefits fall outside any family maximum limitations and have no effect on the amount of benefit you will be paid.

Likewise, your entitlement will not have any effect on your husband's ex-wife's benefit.

Q. My husband was receiving Social Security Disability benefits. He was imprisoned for committing a felony. Will he and the children still receive their benefits? — T.L.

A. Social Security must be notified immediately if a beneficiary is imprisoned for committing a felony. Benefits will not be paid to him during his months of imprisonment, but family members eligible for benefits will continue to receive them.
