Adopt-A-Pet

April 17

Puppies and kittens, as well as older dogs and cats, will all be available for adoption at the Adopt-A-Pet Day scheduled for Saturday, April 17, at the Town of Oyster Bay Animal Shelter, according to Town Councilman Leonard Kunzig.

The Pioneers for Animal Welfare Society (PAWS) will host the special adoption day at the Shelter, 150 Miller Place, Syosset, between 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. "Everyone who adopts will receive a free collar and leash for their pet," Councilman Kunzig stated. "Adopters will also receive a special dog or cat 'goody' bag with items such as shampoo, cookies, toys, food samples and vitamins."

The Councilman noted that there is a $2 adoption fee for both dogs and cats plus a license fee of $7.50 for a dog.

The Adopt-A-Pet Days have proven to be a great success in furthering the Town's animal adoption efforts," Councilman Kunzig commented. "So why not come down, see our state-of-the-art shelter and maybe go home with a new furry friend."

Naming Safety Zones Delayed Until 1994

By Maureen Tranter

Hicksville residents have long been concerned with the fact that this community is riddled with major roadways, making the walk to school for many youngsters potentially hazardous. East Street PTA President Derrie Bernardo questioned the Board at its March 24 meeting regarding State regulations for designating "hazardous" areas and found that the State regulations did not give residents and districts ample time to take the proper steps toward designation.

Superintendent Sal Mugavero told Mrs. Bernardo that the State set March 1 as a deadline for applying for a hazardous designation, but most districts did not receive the specifics from the State until after the date. Therefore, Mr. Mugavero said that most communities would have to wait "another cycle." He added that prospective "school safety zones" must be voted upon by the community. Individuals also have the option to petition the Town of Oyster Bay for such status. The Legislature has not approved additional funding for such sites, added the Superintendent, and the State will have no obligations to districts which are on austerities.

Further reference to the State was made by trustee Richard Pfander when he noted that the proposed State budget is driven by medicare and welfare. He said that it was still unclear how the State would accomplish an income tax funding of school costs. He questioned a State collection of these taxes, saying "How much is the State going to take off the top?"

"Although the (district school) budget (for 1993-94) is not increasing...education is increasing," declared Superintendent Mugavero. He added that the educational highlights of the budget proposal will be presented at the board's meeting on April 14. Noting that in the 1991/92 and 1992/93 school years the Hicksville district has lost some $8,152,000 in State aid, Board President Helen Lafferty remarked that "Hicksville has not had to cut its educational programs," and that the district is "making improvements and going forward."

Mr. Mugavero reminded residents that last year the district was successful in identifying and eliminating some 75 youngsters attending the high school who were not eligible. This year, the district has excluded another 25 youngsters which Mr. Mugavero attributed to a new comprehensive registration and verification process.

Another area of savings lightly touched upon by trustee Voley Martin in his committee report was the addition of laundry room facilities to cut down the cost of outside laundering. Mr. Martin said that the start up cost in the coming budget would be approximately $13,000 but the savings to the district would be some $6,000 a year, estimating that the district would see a payback of its initial outlay in under three years.

Trustee Martin reported that the Harmony and Community Pride Task Force held its final meeting on March 3 at which its members presented their ideas and recommendations. Mr. Martin said that the recommendations were "so numerous" that they will be taken up for review at a Board work session in April. Items approved by the board included:

- The renewal of the food service contract with Whitsons for the 1993-94 school year, with an addendum to the agreement. Among other points, the addendum states that both parties shall share equally in the profit line and that staffing requirements will be by joint agreement. The board also accepted goals and objectives for the 1993-94 food service program, including, an improvement to the serving system in the Middle School by the addition of a self-serve area as in place at the high school; improvement on the quality control of elementary food, particularly pizza; and monthly meetings between Whitsons and the district at which each team will offer at least five new creative ideas.

- The receipt of the technical survey of Edward Durell Stone Associates which complies with State law requiring structural safety inspections.

- A contract with Fiscal Advisors and Marketing Inc. for the marketing of Tax Anticipation Notes, TAN's (borrowing in anticipation of taxes to be collected) for the 1993-94 fiscal year.

Cigarette Lighter Recall

The Bethpage Fire Department has received word of a voluntary recall of a promotional cigarette lighter called the "Party Lighter." This lighter is not in any way defective and is not dangerous when used as intended.

The recall is in response to Connecticut's Commissioner of Consumer Protection who believes that the lighter is attractive to children and therefore poses a safety risk.

This lighter was attached to two and five pack cartons of Marlboro cigarettes which were available through local stores in this area in 1992. The lighter is a clear plastic with five red LED lights that flash when the lighting mechanism is depressed. The lighter has a Marlboro logo embossed on both sides.

Phillip Morris USA has set up the following recall phone number, 800-241-9005 for disposal information. This number is open 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday. They will send you a postage paid package to mail the lighter back to them plus five dollars. This is a voluntary recall; no incidents have been reported.

Board Appoints

Tax Receiver

The Oyster Bay Town Board has appointed John J. O'Leary of Plainview as Town Receiver of Taxes, according to Town Councilman Thomas L. Clark. Mr. O'Leary fills the vacancy created by the sudden passing of Gary F. Musiello in February.

"Mr. O'Leary is a mechanical engineer, who has been with Grumman Aerospace and Electronics Corp. since 1967, where he served in many capacities, including project manager, on a number of major contracts," Councilman Clark stated. "Prior to that, he was chief mechanical engineer for the Powertech Division of Teledyne Corp."

A U.S. Navy veteran, Mr. O'Leary served in the Korean War aboard the U.S.S. Yorktown. Following his honorable discharge in 1954, he went to Tri-State College (now University) in Angola, Indiana, where he graduated first in his class in 1958 with a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering.

A resident of Plainview for 31 years, Mr. O'Leary has been active in many community and fraternal organizations through the years including the Plainview Little League, the Nassau County Boys Club, the Friends for Long Island Heritage and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Division II. He has also been a member of the Town of Oyster Bay Zoning Board of Appeals since 1977, and, since 1983, has served as Chairman of the Z.B.A.

Mr. O'Leary is married and the father of two daughters.

Yevoli Blasts Tax Receiver "Deal"

Oyster Bay Town Supervisor Lewis J. Yevoli charged the Town Board's appointment of Nassau Conservative Party Chairman John O'Leary as Oyster Bay Receiver of Taxes is "a blatant political deal that used a public office and taxpayer dollars to guarantee Republican candidates the Conservative Party line on the ballot in the upcoming November election." The Town Board voted 6-1 to give O'Leary the $72,000 a year Tax Receivers job which became vacant last month after the sudden passing of Gary F. Musiello.

Supervisor Yevoli, who cast the sole vote against the appointment, said, "Their actions have all the earmarks of a sordid back room deal that would have even embarrassed Louisiana's legendary Huey 'Kingfish' Long. The Town Board literally 'sold' the Tax Receivers job to Mr. O'Leary in return for his promise to deliver his party's endorsement." Mr. O'Leary, a longtime leader of the Nassau County Conservatives, has worked as a mechanical engineer for the Grumman Corp. since 1967 and serves as the part time chairman of the Town Zoning Board of Appeals at a $22,790 salary.

Yevoli said, "Ironically this is the kind of political greed and public be damned mentality all political parties, particularly the Conservative Party, are supposed to be against. It seems as if some local Republicans and Conservatives think it doesn't apply to them. Supposedly, Mr. O'Leary is retiring from Grumman with a comfortable pension; now he will be paid an additional $72,000 by the town, and because of his former position on the Zoning Board be eligible to collect a substantial second pension in a few short years. "The Town Board and Mr. O'Leary are thumbing their noses at the public." Yevoli continued, "When you consider the number of unemployed town residents with families to support who can't find a job and the number of senior citizens trying to make ends meet on social security, you realize how arrogant and insensitive their actions are."

The Crocus and Snowdrops are in bloom. They come up and bloom every year without weather forecasts. But, other things change. Do you remember the lites posts with the arms holding white round globes at the High School (now middle) and the L.I. Nat'l band at the curb. Also the Large Marquise (canopy) from Huestiner's store door out to the curb for the customers. Then there was the canon on the high school lawn until the 40's. Speaking of high school, the 1932 class colors were black & white. The motto was "With the Ropes of the Past we will Ring the Bells of the future" an item from the school Comet by Gertrude Korfizten.

Somewhere, I heard a question. What animal with horns is the most dangerous? Little Willie replied "The Automobile". Seeing parts of a tire on the roadside, recalls the days when many cars used retreads and many trucks had hard rubber tires.

By Richard E. Evers

A United States Army Nurse of the First World War was the principal honoree of this year's Hicksville American Legion "Awards and Ceremonies Night." Joining Mrs. Violet Wohl as recipient of honors by the Charles Wagner Post 421 were four outstanding police officers of the 2nd and 8th Nassau Police Precincts, representatives of Company 2 of the Hicksville Fire Department who rendered fine community service to the village of Bayville, in the disaster period after the great "nor'easter" storm of December, and legionnaires who earned long, continuous membership awards.

Among the honored guests for the Post 421 gala held at the Knights of Columbus Hall were: State Assemblyman Fred Parolis, County Executive Thomas Gulotta, Councilman Thomas Clark, Nassau County American Legion Commander Joseph Murtha and his staff, Commander Dennis Ladislaw of the William Gouse Post (Veterans of Foreign Wars), Grand Knight Joseph Wohl, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wohl of Hicksville.

Also honoring Post 421 and its Annual Awards and Ceremonies Night were Inspectors of the Nassau Police Department Richard Rubin and William Gugherzich, and a disabled hero of the Vietnam War, John J. Taft, Veterans Counselor, Nassau County Veteran's Service Agency.

Commander John Rizos was Master of Ceremonies. A hot buffet supper charmed the palates, and the numerous celebrants danced away the later evening to the syncopation of musicman Joe Ratto.

Preceding the presentation of awards, Post 421 conducted a solemn "Post Everlasting Ceremony" in memory of five post members who died this past year.

Violet Wohl, who was presented with an American Legion Honorary Life Membership in Post 421, was the star of the evening. The lovely, vital lady is in her centennial year. An aura of history and gallantry marked her person. A veteran of service in France as a registered nurse with the American Expeditionary Force in 1918-1919, as a young widow trying to raise her son and endure in her nursing profession, when possible - remarkably still in service as late as 1971 at Syosset General Hospital. Mrs. Wohl is a member of the Elmhurst-Jackson Heights American Legion Post, and a past-president of the post's auxiliary.

Probably Hicksville's last surviving veteran of the First World War, U.S. Army Nurse Mrs. Violet Wohl is the center of attraction for past commander Arlene Howard, Shirley Graven and Veronica Spies (W.W.II Coast Guard veteran.)

Chief Albert Merk (second, right) and members of the Hicksville Fire Department honored for service to the storm-ravaged community of Bayville.

Sixth Grader Wins 1st Place

Senator Spano and Sandra St. Victor.

Holy Family's sixth grade student, Sandra St. Victor. Sandra won first place in the Audio-Video category of New York State's 1st m^on^o GREEN nation celebration, and went to Albany on March 16 to receive her trophy from Senator Spano who took the place of Senator Ralph J. Marino. In a letter sent to Sandra after the award ceremony, Sen. Marino writes "You (Sandra) can be proud of your school and your teacher (Mrs. Pat Phelan) as well. While this is only the second year for this competition, it is also the second time that Holy Family School has given us a first place winner." When asked how she decided on doing a video, Sandra said that while she was visiting Universal Studio in Florida, the idea came to her. After taping the song, she completed the dialogue part when she got back home. She also said she was shocked when she saw the video for the first time...she couldn't believe she did it. When the phone call came from Albany, Sandra felt as if she won the Olympics!

Making Dreams A Reality

by K. Blicker

On Saturday, March 27, the activity level at Hicksville High School was high. That morning, the school's auditorium held the hard working music parents committee who were helping dreams become reality.

The group began to bring a large range of goods and service donations, from area merchants for the long anticipated "Dream Auction." The auction is the brainchild of band director, Jim McRoy, the auction was held to benefit the school's music students to defray the expense of their upcoming Florida performance, in May, in Orlando and at Walt Disney World. Early bird arrivals to the sneak preview saw hundreds of items prior to the official 1 p.m. starting time. 411 items in all. Among the varied products/services auctioned were donations of clothing, toys, flowers, landscaping services, auto services, hair care/nail services, lunches and dinners, tickets to Knicks/Islanders/Giants/Mets/Ranger games, karate and boxing lessons, craft items.

The bidding was fast and furious spurred on by the expertise of energetic auctioneers Randy Schiavone, Andy Boukas, Brian Dunker and Dave Master. Many bargains were carted home by the enthused audience for this worthwhile cause.

The dream auction chairperson, Rose Buffafato, and her family were congratulated as well as the entire committee, for their herculean effort in making the event a winner! Thanks were given to the participating merchants, and to the pastry house for the desserts. And, to those of you who placed a winning bid...We couldn't have done it without YOU! Much effort and dedication has been combined to make May's Trip a dream come true for the music students of Hicksville High. Florida. Here we come!

Researching At Middle School

The past has come alive at John F. Kennedy Middle School in Bethpage. Ms. Carol Morawski's and Mrs. Surelle Heilberger's 8th grade social studies classes, with the assistance of Mr. Hy Pryhuck, study skills specialist, researched topics ranging from the history of the circus to the life of a pioneer woman in the 1800's. Their reports and projects, the culmination of a 7-week unit, graphically displayed the students' understanding of research techniques and their appreciation of the many facets of the world in which they live.

Saint Ignatius Spelling Bee

College, Career Night

College/Career Night for Parents and High School Juniors, a comprehensive overview of the college planning process, will be held on April 13, at 7:30 p.m. in the High School Auditorium. Guest speaker, Brother David Van Hollebeke, from Manhattan College, will help parents and students focus on looking at their needs, interests, abilities and future plans, the variety of college and career opportunities available, and understanding how a college looks at them. "Planning Your Future," a publication of the Guidance Department, will be distributed to parents and students that evening. (Please note the event will take place on April 13, not the 15th as indicated on the district calendar.)

THE QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Do you think President Clinton's tax on energy, oil, gasoline, electricity is a fair tax?

Most Callers Say Support Yeltsin

Most callers to Input believe that we should back Yeltsin in his attempt to continue leading Russia in answer to this question: "How far do you think the U.S. should go in supporting Yeltsin?" Here are some of the answers:

SHOULD SUPPORT

President Clinton is correct in showing the people of Russia that we will support President Yeltsin. He would not be correct, however, in supporting Yeltsin if the majority of the people do not get behind him in his own country. We cannot be in the position of installing rulers for various nations. The U.S. has enough to do in keeping its own house in order. N.D.

NOT OUR AFFAIR

I do not see how it is any of our business to support or not support Yeltsin. The former USSR has chosen to get rid of Socialism and we are happy about that but we are not in a position to support that country with money when our own country is in bad shape. Our support should only be verbal. M.V.

CANT GIVE MUCH

I think we have to realize that we have a lot hanging on whether Yeltsin stays in or the Russians go back to totalitarian rule. Things are not well in the former USSR and they are beginning to show the unrest of people who thought they were going to have a better life only to find out that things are not much better for many and worse for some. We cannot do much. We can give some economic aid but if we do it should have strings attached on how it will be used. We can also give food but they are able to perform farming if they can just get started. V.F.

STAY NEUTRAL

Most people do not understand what is happening in Russia and therefore it is difficult to answer a question on how much help we can give to Russia. If we really knew what Yeltsin's chances are of staying afloat would we know whether it is worth our getting involved. If the hardliners are going to win out in the end then we will have a new enemy. Whereby if we were neutral they would not think of us as an enemy even if they return to the old system. K.D.

LIMITED HELP

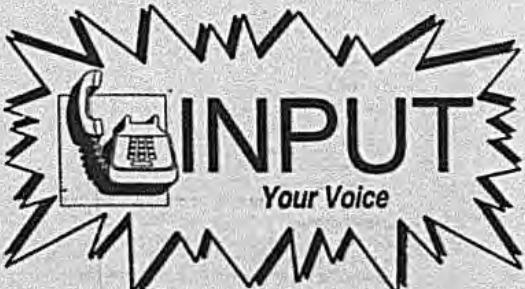

Yeltsin, as I see him, is not really competent. I do not think he has enough ability to pull Russia out of the problems it now has. For this reason I believe in the long run he will not survive. Our help should be conditional and reviewed regularly because we do not want to keep someone in power who is not wanted by his own people. If our help is limited it will make the Russians know that they must earn our help by working on their own problems. N.F.

ALL NOW

The problem in Russia, as in all of the former Soviet countries, is that the people do not understand what democracy is all about and they think that it will be the same as when the government took all of the problems and tried to solve them. They do not know what to do with private enterprise and they therefore are blaming Yeltsin for not giving them the things they used to get from the Government. The price of the handouts was freedom but the Russians do not yet know what value to place on freedom so they are unhappy with Yeltsin. L.G.

GIVE SUPPORT

As an individual, I don't care much for President Yeltsin. Nevertheless, he is the man we chose to support in an endeavor to sell the Russian people on the acceptance of a definite change to a Democratic form of government, and, it was beginning to take hold until some of the "die-hards" started to flex their muscles in favor of alternative candidates to replace Yeltsin. Just what would happen insofar as a change in government philosophy was concerned is not at all clear. However, many of us over here as well as over there were pleased with the direction taken by President Yeltsin. In my opinion, now is not the time to reverse our field but rather to demonstrate to Yeltsin as well as the Russian people our complete support of the direction they have chosen to follow. P.G.S.

Alzheimer: Life Change

By Karen Blicker

For many of the years we have lived on Long Island, Bob loved to frolic with his grandkids at our home. My husband's sister, and her spouse, would bring their own two girls over for a summer barbecue, and Bob would be in suburban heaven, pushing his four grandchildren on swings, swimming with them in our small pool, taking them for walks with the family dog, or admonishing them when they were naughty. Bob was often seen on the sidelines of a youth soccer game, proudly watching his only grandson, the boy who carries the family name, help his team to victory. Bob could be combative at times, but also friendly and talkative. He was a family man who enjoyed the simple pleasures life afforded. But life has changed in a major way. Bob is my father-in-law. Bob has Alzheimer's Disease.

What I know about this illness could be written on the head of a pin. Rita Hayworth had it; so did Angie Dickinson's sister and Shelley Fabares' mother. My own grandfather had been 'senile' but the diagnosis was not as precise then as it is in our high tech world. The onset of Bob's disease probably began a year or two before our untrained eyes recognized it and sought help. He lived at home with Ann, my mother-in-law, and a specialist was consulted. But problems accelerated. He would awaken Ann in the middle of many nights, fully dressed, insisting that he was going to work. The work ethic was Bob's foundation and not even Alzheimer's could still his drive. He would push past his wife, who is under five feet tall, and out into the night. When those incidents, and others happened with more frequency, it was determined that he be sent to a hospital, a halfway facility, where custodial care was given until a nursing home became available. Twice he escaped from that facility. Was he trying to find his way home or trying to get to work? Each time he escaped the facility, the event was duly noted on a report. Ann, and her family, visited at least 15 or more nursing homes in Queens and Nassau County, and it was then realized the attitudes which exist when an Alzheimer's patient must be placed...an Alzheimer patient not quiet and meek. When potential nursing home supervisors viewed his "report," they politely showed our family the way out. Not interested. He was a high functioning individual, yet some homes told us to return when he was wheelchair-bound. Certainly not 'as is.' We rue the fact that if he were more serene, he might have remained home. One lovely nursing home did, indeed, accept him, for a half day. We were elated until they called us to take him home! When I asked why they were turning him away, they claimed they couldn't handle him. Seems they neglected to retrieve his medication and couldn't 'control' him. But luck changed a bit when a nursing home with Alzheimer's facility opened their doors to us. That was the good part. The bad part was that its location was Brooklyn. My mother-in-law, Ann, lived in Queens and didn't drive. My own family lived on Long Island. The logistics of getting from here to there were taxing. I proposed a plan where family members would drive on a rotating basis, but that solution only afforded Ann a once weekly visit for an hour or two. We had our own jobs, kids to ferry back and forth, dinners to prepare, car troubles. And so, frustration abounded. We investigated ways to have Ann driven from Queens to Brooklyn but private taxi services charged almost $40.00 one way. I personally, wrote to the head of the Department of Aging with great hope, explaining the transit dilemma. Disappointingly, all I received back was a form letter with no real solution. My hopes were dashed. Ann phoned many senior help organizations daily to no avail. My mother, who lives in Florida, advised that the elderly are dealt with quite speedily there, I suppose because seniors are a large part of their population. Ann's age alone, she said, would automatically qualify her for free transportation. Here, in New York, Ann was at the mercy of her family and though we tried hard, perhaps we didn't realize just how difficult the separation was for 'Mom.' Compounding her mounting woes, Uncle Sam was gobbling up their life savings and drowning her in red tape and paperwork. She was in social limbo; surely not a widow yet surely not a couple, either.

Bob received adequate care at the Brooklyn nursing home. Staff seemed caring, despite the fact that he occasionally lashed out at them. True to form, he twice escaped from that institution as well. Trying to get home? Trying to get to work? Each time, an APB (All Points Bulletin) was issued by the police. Despite his advancing years, one of his escapes found him at the opposite end of Brooklyn. How had he arrived there? He spoke of taking public transportation but was this true or a figment of his imagination? So, the nursing home increases security, making Bob a mini-celebrity for a moment. My father-in-law now sported two sets of identification bracelets and an ankle ID, too.

When it was my 'turn' for these excursions to Brooklyn, I would occasionally take Ann and Bob to a local diner, watching him hungrily devour pancakes, hot coffee, chocolate ice cream. Anything he wanted. He seemed pleased by those times, always cleaning his plate. Always using utensils properly, then wiping the crumbs from his lips with his napkin. I felt these trips gave Bob and Ann a chance to be together in an ordinary setting, away from institutionalized living.

And so it continued until one recent visit to Brooklyn, where Ann and I found Bob lying in bed. Most unusual. After all, the staff found it nearly impossible to get him to bed for the night much less be found there during daylight. We were told, depending on who told the story, that two days prior, he had either fainted or stiffened up. Now he was in bed, somewhat incoherent. Remember, even in the nursing home, he walked, talked, fed himself, and was fastidious regarding personal hygiene. The next day, he was hospitalized for tests and seeing him would become more difficult than ever.

The hospital was in a crime ridden area. On our first visit to see his Dad, my husband found the four wheel covers from his auto stolen. In the hospital, Bob was tied to his bed in order to keep the monitoring equipment in place. When I first saw him, he sported a grey, grizzled beard, the result of being 'uncooperative' when being shaved. You might find it interesting to note that, upon his admittance, the hospital staff told us he was confused and incoherent, despite spending the entire day and evening in the emergency room. Did they notice that the records stated that he had Alzheimer's Disease? So unusual to become ballyhoo and incoherent? He lost 20 lbs. in the week he spent there, undergoing tests. We were told that some of his brain cells had shrunken. No surprise there. But was he a stroke victim? Had he been overmedicated? And why were his blue-grey eyes now shut tightly, as if he wished to blot out the whole turn of events. His speech was garbled, too. But we never got concrete answers and probably never will. My mother-in-law, noting that he was bedridden, began another earnest search for a facility closer to her Queens apartment and, this time, she found one.

In his new nursing home, Bob has joined the legions in wheelchairs. He calls his wife's name occasionally, or holds our hands. His life has changed yet the feisty spirit still burns within. I have an eerie feeling that this same spirit, which labeled him hard to handle, keeps him going. I once read that Alzheimer's Disease is an illness where the living are mourned while still alive, and I feel that says it all.

This disease has deprived us of the man we once knew. The man who will never join our family unit in the same way. Never watch the Yankees play ball, never sit in our backyard with the sun beating down on his head. My daughter wept when she last saw him, recalling the strong Grandpa who swam with her, celebrated holidays, or just reminisced. Yet, because my own expectations are lower, I can rejoice that his appetite hasn't failed; that he'll eat two helpings of oatmeal instead of one. I find comfort seeing him sitting up instead of languishing in bed; all thoughts of walking temporarily shelved in the recesses of my mind and his. And sometimes, I am on the receiving end of a lopsided grin coaxed from his quivering lips. Sometimes a sentence is perfectly clear. I am grateful.

No, Bob will never make it back to his cozy apartment to help clear the dishes, straighten the closet, or join Ann for evening strolls. In a cruel irony, he sits just a few short miles away. But his spouse is able to visit each day for as long as she wishes, which provides a measure of comfort. Bob is 79 years old and I don't know what his prognosis is but I have learned to appreciate what I have while I have it. And what I do have are in-laws I lovingly call Mom and Dad.

One must question where the 'golden years' really go for ill seniors. One must question the brush off given by some facilities while Bob was still functioning at a high level, which somehow worked against him. One must question why there isn't a better system of transportation if a loved one is institutionalized out of the area. Question the loss of life savings. Perhaps someone, somewhere, right now is fighting to overcome these roadblocks and update the system. We're counting on it. Perhaps more long term care facilities will open Alzheimer's units...without discrimination. If not, watch out, and be forewarned. Or, perhaps, Bob's odyssey will one day be yours.

READING IS FUN WEEK

... A week to stress the importance and fun of books ...

Q. What do you do with the wrapper on a lump of sugar when you are dining out in a restaurant? Do you put it on the tablecloth, in the saucer of your cup, or in the ash tray? —A.M.

A. This is one of those things for which there is no real rule. You just use common sense. I would say put it on the tablecloth, for if you put it in the ash tray it may start a fire, and if you put it in your saucer it may cause the cup to tip over when you put it back in the saucer.

Q. Whenever I go to a restaurant with my husband, the waiter usually brings us to our table, then pulls out just one chair. Why does he do this?

A. The waiter is picking out what he considers to be a choice seat, either because it faces the room, or has a view, or is out of the stream of traffic. The woman takes this seat, unless for some reason she expresses her preference for another.

Q. Have you any tips for parents who take their children to restaurants? These experiences can be hectic, but I feel they are a necessary part of the youngsters' training.

A. Why not pick a restaurant that features children's menus. Avoid places with gourmet food and elaborate service. Choose meals with a few courses as possible. Select foods you know children like—but they are excited and restless, so do not expect them to finish everything on their plates.

Never let children run around the restaurant in between courses and, please, let them enjoy themselves without harping on table manners. Eating out should be fun...for everyone in the family.

Q. How much should wine stewards be tipped?

A. A 15 percent tip based on the wine bill would be correct when wine is personally served by the steward at the table.

Through a special 24 hour phone system, readers will be asked to call in their assessment of each restaurant they visit. Consensus ratings (good or bad) will be published as a continuing part of the guide.

In addition they can make suggestions, compliments or criticisms through the open phone line and messages will be sent through to the restaurant management.

KITCHEN HINTS

Make your own bruschetta.

Here's how to make this tasty Tuscan garlic bread.

1. Slice and toast crusty Italian bread.
2. Rub a clove of garlic just on the edges of the toasted bread.
3. The crust will grate the clove and flavor the whole slice.
4. Add tomatoes, mushrooms and olive oil to taste.

READER RATINGS

Q. Recently I came across a menu expression that was new to me. Can you explain what "A la burgignonne" means?

A. Translated from the French it would mean "in the Burgundy style" and it refers to any dish served with small onions, spices, bacon, mushrooms and, of course, Burgundy wine.

Q. I often eat with friends at a local restaurant known for its beautiful decor and excellent food. However, for some reason the waiters and waitresses seem to wear gloom expressions on their faces. They are not actually rude, but their manner is somewhat curt. Would it be a good idea to say something to the owner?

A. I don't know how the owner will take your comments, but you would actually be doing him or her a favor. It would cost nothing to have the employees a little more gracious and it would most likely increase the restaurant's business. Food and decor are important, but so is pleasant service.

Q. Can you tell me the proper way to eat French fries? At a restaurant recently I saw a young man spear them with his fork and nibble them in mid-air. I found this appalling!

A. The best way to eat French fries is to cut them with the side of a fork into bite-size pieces. You are right—food should never be eaten while dangling in the air.

Q. While visiting France last year my friend and I ate in an elegant restaurant. We noticed that forks and spoons were facing downward on the tablecloth. Do you know why this was done?

A. This is an old French custom which is gradually giving way to the English and American way of facing forks and spoons upward.

Q. Recently when four of us were dining out, two married couples, one of the husbands left the table for a few minutes. The remaining husband, left with his wife and the wife of the other, lit the cigarette first of his wife's friend, then of his own. His wife felt that as her escort he should have lit her cigarette first. Which is correct? R.T.

A. As one woman was left alone, the husband and wife remaining are, in effect, her host and hostess for the moment. Therefore, it was correct for the remaining husband to light the guest's cigarette first, then his wife's.

Q. After finishing a meal at a good restaurant, I had an experience that could have been avoided by the restaurant. When I offered a particular credit card the waiter said that they did not honor that card. I did not have another and barely had enough money to pay in cash. Shouldn't the restaurant have told us in advance which credit cards they accept?

A. Not exactly. You should have inquired in advance if you did not see a decal of the card you had on display. They really have no way of knowing what card you have and it is an accommodation to you that the cards are accepted so you should have borne the responsibility.

MICROWAVE MAGIC

Desiree Vives

Super Bowl Sunday haltime and the beer commercials abound. When you think about it, there aren't many products being advertised so successfully today that have been around as long as beer.

Sumerians were mixing a straw-colored brew 5,000 years ago. In 4000 B.C., Babylonians produced more than a dozen varieties of beer, while the heady brew was featured prominently in the social life and even in the religious ceremonies of ancient Egypt.

In fact, beer has made its mark on the history of this country since its earliest beginnings. The Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock instead of proceeding farther south because they had run low on — you guessed it — beer.

Lots of foods go well with beer: sausages, hard rolls and rich, chewy breads, salty pretzels, soft and flavorful room-temperature cheeses, pickles, meat sandwiches and, of course, pizza.

We all know that wine can greatly improve the flavor of many a dish, but cooks often neglect beer as a useful cooking ingredient.

Marinate meat or seafood in beer for several hours in the refrigerator to tenderize and add flavor before microwaving. Today's Country Roast Beef marinates in a mixture of beer, garlic, onion flakes and liquid smoke flavoring before being slowly microwaved at LOW power to tender perfection.

Anyway, beer's cheaper than wine to cook with. Add it to stews, pot roasts, soups. It's even a flavorful addition to baked goods, like Beer-Cheese Muffins.

Or use beer to simmer sausages and frankfurters. Here's a quick and easy way to heat hot dogs for a crowd: Arrange 1 pound franks in a shallow microwave-safe casserole. Pour one 12-ounce can of room-temperature beer over franks. Cover with vented plastic wrap and microwave 6 to 9 minutes, or until heated through. Let stand, covered, several minutes before serving.

Since cheese that is microwaved at too-high temperatures can be stringy and tough, Welsh Rarebit microwaves at MEDIUM setting to allow cheese and beer to blend evenly and smoothly.

WELSH RAREBIT ON TOAST POINTS

1 pound shredded Cheddar cheese
 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon paprika
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon dry mustard
 Dash pepper
 2 eggs
 1 cup flat beer, at room temperature
 6 large slices French bread, conventionally toasted and cut diagonally
 Paprika (to garnish)
 Yields 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation time: 15 minutes.
 Cooking time: 10 to 14 minutes.
 Oven setting: MEDIUM (50 percent power).

Combine cheese, butter or margarine, Worcestershire sauce, paprika, mustard and pepper in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover and microwave 5 to 7 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time.

Beat eggs in small bowl. Stir small amount of hot cheese mixture into beaten eggs, then turn eggs into casserole. Stir well. Add beer and stir again.

Cover and microwave 5 to 7 minutes longer, stirring well every 3 minutes, until heated through and bubbly.

Arrange toast points in shallow individual serving bowls; top evenly with hot cheese mixture. Dust with paprika to garnish, if desired. And serve immediately.

BEER-CHEESE MUFFINS

1 cup buttermilk biscuit baking mix
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup oatmeal
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup whole-wheat flour
 1 tablespoon sugar
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup flat beer
 1 large egg, lightly beaten
 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
 Yields 12 muffins.

Preparation time: 10 to 15 minutes.

Cooking time: 4 to 6 minutes.
 Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

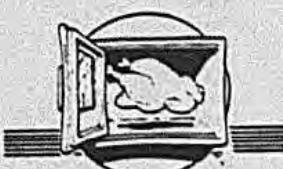

In medium mixing bowl combine baking mix, oatmeal, whole-wheat flour and sugar. Toss with fork. Stir in beer, egg and vegetable oil until blended, then fold in cheese.

Spoon batter evenly into paper-lined microwave-safe muffin cups, filling each $\frac{1}{2}$ full. Microwave 6 at a time, 2 to 3 minutes, rotating pan $\frac{1}{2}$ turn halfway through cooking time. Repeat with remaining muffins.

Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.

MICRO-TIP OF WEEK

For cooking purposes, beer should be flat and at room temperature. To "flatten" beer, microwave at HIGH (100 percent power) setting 30 seconds to 1 minute, then let stand 10 minutes before using.

FOR TEENS

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Kept her dangling

Dr. Abraham: When school starts this fall, it'll be kicked off with a football game with our bitter enemy, so it should be a hot deal. I can hardly wait. Even though I'm a girl, I love the game, especially seeing the guys in those funny outfits.

A couple of my friends are asking boys to go with them, so I did, too, a big, good-looking hunk I've been hoping to know better.

He said, "Maybe," "I'll see," "I'll tell you later," stuff like that which seemed to tell me, "I'll go with you if I can't do better."

After I asked him a few times and kept getting answers like that, I said to myself, "Nuts to him," and asked a guy I've had a few dates with. He's nice enough and not as good-looking, but he accepted right away and seemed kind of excited. He likes football as much as I do, so we'll have a good time.

So then that good-looking hunk called and told me he decided to go with me. I was glad to be able to tell him that I've made other plans, and now I've heard he is mad at me. So are two of my girlfriends, who think that wasn't very nice of me.

What do you think about this? — Football Happy

Football Happy: That wasn't nice of him in fact I'd go further than that. He was rude and inconsiderate to keep you dangling like that.

It only goes to show that good looks might be pleasant to look at and have, but they are far from the whole picture of a human being.

You did exactly right. I hope you have a good time, and that your team skunks the other team like mad.

Dr. Abraham: Here's the story. Renee and Jim are going steady. Jim wants to go to his senior prom. It is against Renee's religion. Jim does not want to go alone. Renee says she will pick the girl for Jim to take. Jim agrees. Renee picks one of her best friends, Ann. Jim breaks up with Renee and blames his mom.

The next night he takes Ann to the movies. He asks Ann to go steady. Renee tells Ann there is a ground rule that you don't date your best friend's boyfriend. Ann agrees, says it was only as friends anyway. Jim and Ann both tell Renee that they won't go to the prom together. Jim and Renee get back together. Now Jim says Ann called him to make sure they were still going to the prom together. He tells her, "Yes."

Do you think Jim should go alone? Should Jim find someone else to take? Should Jim not go at all?

Jim's mom says Jim cheated on Renee. Renee doesn't care to discuss it for fear of losing Jim, but says she is not going to talk to Ann anymore. Renee's mom says he is still cheating on her, lying and dating both girls by trying to keep them both happy.

I think Renee should dump Jim. Forty-five minutes before his first date with Renee, he broke up with his other girlfriend, Sue.

What is your opinion of all this? — Renee's Friend

Renee's Friend: There are many complicating and somewhat conflicting factors in this story of yours. Renee selecting one of her best friends as Jim's prom date, Jim's fickleness with Sue, Renee and Ann, and dating two girls at the same time, the involvement of two mothers; Jim blames his mom; your advice to Renee.

I assume these are not real names. And the impression your story provides is that it sounds like the bare outline of a continuing soap opera.

Dr. Abraham: This may sound strange to you, but my older brother seems to enjoy hurting animals. I mean even to the extent of killing them.

In the past six months I have had three rabbits, two snakes, numerous goldfish and two dogs, and he has killed them all. He butchered the rabbits and burned the snakes, and the first dog I found hanging in a tree.

He says the last dog's death was an accident, but I don't know whether to believe him. If I believe him, then I want to get another dog, but if I don't believe him, will I just be wasting my time if I do?

I can't tell my parents because I am afraid he will turn on me next.

What do you think? Please help me. — Petrified

Petrified, I can't imagine that your parents don't know what terrible things he does. If they do know, they should get help for him because from what you wrote to me he has serious emotional problems.

If they are really unaware of what he does, someone must quickly tell them and encourage them to get professional help for him.

You are right about not being the one to talk to your parents about all this. But what about an adult relative or friend of theirs whom they like and will listen to (and who will keep your name out of it)?

Please act fast. These cruel actions of his should not be permitted to continue.

Cooking Corner

Oysters are pearls in delicate dishes

By Charles Britton

Right now we're in the height of the oyster season, when cold waters in Northern Hemisphere growing regions mean that the shellfish are at their peak and that the hazard of bacterial contamination, unfortunately a chronic problem with seafood, particularly when consumed raw, is the least likely.

Although the Pacific Coast does have its particular varieties, these have long since been depleted so that almost all the oysters grown from there are cultivated. The opposite is true on the East and Gulf coasts, where most oysters are taken in the wild.

Many people feel more secure about eating cultivated oysters, because the farms can be kept under closer supervision by health authorities. Like all shellfish, oysters filter food from the environment. Where the creatures are kept corralled, so to speak, conditions can be closely monitored.

In addition, colder waters, such as those where West Coast oyster farms are found, reduce the danger of natural bacterial buildup.

Another reason for avoiding oysters in the warmer months is that the creatures are less desirable from a gustatory viewpoint. Fine oysters often are described as "fat," a trait noted by those two most famous oyster-fanciers of literature, Louis Carroll's Walrus and Carpenter.

The fat is glycogen, Jeff Daniels, president of Seattle-based Marinelli Shellfish Co., explained.

"This is what gives oysters their sweet flavor," he said. "In the summer, their effort turns from producing glycogen to making gametes. They turn 'milky,' and in the early fall, they 'spawn out' and the meat becomes translucent. Then they begin to eat and grow fat again."

Fat, however, is a relative term. Even oysters in their prime are lean as most flesh foods go — 4 percent to 5 percent fat by calories. As an extra bonus, you might find a pearl inside an oyster served to you. If you do, it belongs to you, but it won't be of gem quality. Fine pearls are produced by certain species of tropical oysters and freshwater mussels.

The same rule does not apply at all in the Southern Hemisphere, where the seasons are reversed with respect to the Northern Hemisphere. During North America's off-season, Marinelli imports oysters from such sites as Coquimbo Bay, New Zealand, and Chile Island, Chile, as well as from some very cold locations in the Canadian Maritime Provinces.

Even the most avid contemporary consumer of oysters must look like something of a piker compared to our great-grandparents. Toward the end of the 19th century, oysters were a staple in the great cities of the Eastern Seaboard and the Gulf Coast.

In New York, customers needn't have bothered to go into the town's many oyster bars; people ate oysters from pushcarts on the street. In this era, the typical American put away some 600 oysters per year, an astonishing figure when you consider that the average counts in rural residents who presumably rarely saw seafood. Those were the days when a few dozen of the bivalves counted as a light appetizer.

Pollution and excessive exploitation put an end to that, but what the oyster has lost in familiarity, it has gained in elegance. Today, many upscale restaurants offer oysters on the half-shell, and some keep a selection on hand.

Such establishments present an opportunity to try the astonishing range of flavors to be found.

"I'm still running across people who didn't know that there is more than one kind of oyster," Daniels said.

In fact, there are several species, and, as with wine grapes, the specific place of origin has much to do with the taste. A distance of a few hundred yards from one oyster bed to another can make a substantial difference.

As a case in point, a pestilence wiped out much of the famous variety grown around Marennes, France. These were replaced by a type from Canada, but connoisseurs said the taste was much the same as the originals.

For true oyster fanciers, the less preparation, the better. Most oysters are consumed on the half-shell, raw. Yes, they're alive.

In this country, a plate of raw oysters typically is accompanied by slices of lemon (so far, so good), hot-pepper sauce and a tomato-based cocktail sauce that in many cases is little else than ketchup.

They arrange matters better in France. Throughout that country, you see restaurants offering oyster tastings degustation de huîtres, which does not mean "the oysters are disgusting." The typical accompaniment would be lemon, a loaf of light brown bread, unsalted butter and, of course, a crisp white wine, a Muscadet, say, or perhaps a Graves. (If you're drinking a California wine, try a sauvignon blanc.) At most, the kitchen might add a Sauce Mignonette.

In England, another oyster-eating country, the requirements are much the same:

"A loaf of bread," the Walrus said,

*"Is what we chiefly need.
Pepper and vinegar besides
Are very good indeed..."*

In the South of France, another oyster-eating custom pertains — cold oysters on the half-shell with hot grilled sausages. Serve this with plenty of crusty bread and a salad to follow. The combination illustrates the interesting affinity of oysters and meat, a fact exploited in this country by their frequent use in poultry stuffings.

Then there's the curious story related by the great American writer and editor H.L. Mencken. At a New York restaurant in the early '20s, he played host to the eccentric Lord Dunsany, once noted for his tales of the macabre. Dunsany said he had always heard of the local oysters, so Mencken ordered a platter.

His lordship promptly dumped the contents of a sugar bowl over the shellfish and proceeded to eat them all.

"Excellent," he pronounced. "But I wouldn't have been as sure of them without the sugar."

The Hangtown Fry was invented in Hangtown, Calif. (now called Placerville), when a miner who struck it rich entered a hotel and told the chef to make a dish with the most expensive ingredients he had. The result was a saute of eggs, bacon and oysters. To make at home, add crumbled bacon bits and fried oysters to a flat omelet and serve in wedges as a frittata.

These are among the oyster varieties, with place of origin, that you're apt to find this time of year. All are cultivated.

• Below: the most famous European oyster, grown in a number of locations from Humboldt Bay in California to Fanny Bay in British Columbia. Very firm texture, slightly salty, distinctive metallic aftertaste, strong in flavor.

• Chincoteague: Virginia offshore waters. Prized salty flavor.

• Dabob Bay: northerly Puget Sound, Wash. Small, delicate, fruity flavor. Samish Bay is similar.

• Denman Island: British Columbia. Delicate flavor some liken to watermelon, fairly salty, tender.

• Eagle Creek: near the Hood Canal, Wash. Crunchy texture, sweet, fairly salty.

• Fanny Bay: British Columbia. Raised from the same seed as Portuguese oyster, popular in Europe. Very salty, plump, cucumber aftertaste.

• Goose Point: Willapa Bay, Wash. Ample fresh water makes for mild flavor. Reddish shells.

• Hama Hama: the Hood Canal region of Washington. An intertidal oyster, delicate, mild, with a fruity aftertaste. Jocaste and Skokomish are similar.

• Hog Island: Tomales Bay, Calif. Plump, salty, smoky-sweet.

• Indian Island: Northern Puget Sound, Wash. Plump, salty, sweet, cucumber finish.

• Kamome: originally from Kyushu, Japan, now grown from Northern California through Washington. Rich, buttery, slightly salty.

• Olympia: a native West Coast variety now raised from Humboldt Bay, Calif., to Puget Sound, Wash. Sweet, firm, slightly metallic.

• Pine Island: Long Island Sound, "Blue Point" territory. Plump texture; crisp, sweet aftertaste.

• Quileceno: Washington. Delicate texture, slightly salty, cucumber aftertaste.

• Snow Creek: off the Olympic Peninsula, Wash. Sweet and plump.

(Many of the following recipes were prepared by Marlene Parrish for The Pittsburgh Press.)

This dish was invented in New Orleans back in 1899 because the combination of oysters, green vegetables and white wine was said to be as rich as John D. Rockefeller, then one of the wealthiest men in the world. The hint of licorice flavor is classic for the dish.

OYSTERS ROCKEFELLER

½ cup chopped shallots or scallions
¼ cup finely chopped celery
1 teaspoon finely chopped chervil, if available
½ cup chopped fennel
½ cup chopped parsley
1 cup (2 sticks) butter, divided use
2 cups watercress
½ cup anise-flavored liqueur, such as Pernod
½ cup bread crumbs
Salt, pepper to taste
Cayenne pepper

Sauté scallions, celery and herbs in 3 tablespoons of butter for 3 minutes. Add watercress and let it wilt. Scrape out into blender, add liqueur and blend 1 minute. Blend with crumbs and remaining butter. Season well with salt and pepper and cayenne.

Arrange oysters on beds of rock salt in metal containers that can be carried to table. Dampen salt ever so lightly. Spoon about 1 good teaspoonful of mixture on each oyster. Bake at 450 F for about 4 minutes, or just long enough for oysters and sauce to heat through.

MIGNONETTE SAUCE FOR OYSTERS ON HALF SHELL

½ cup white wine vinegar
½ cup water
1½ tablespoons minced shallots
¾ teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
Yields ¾ cup (enough for 6 dozen oysters).

In small bowl, combine vinegar, water, shallots and pepper. If made ahead, cover and chill up to 3 hours.

Q. I'd like to know the best time to collect cuttings of fig trees and root them into new trees. How long does it take, and what is the best type of soil to use?

A. New trees can be started in the spring from cuttings or "layering," a process that is used widely to reproduce rhododendrons. It involves bending a branch of the mother plant earthward and making a slanting cut halfway through it, about 9 inches beyond the top. Remove all but one pair of mature leaves from the stem.

After applying a rooting hormone to the cut, insert a splint to keep it open, bury the treated area (still attached to the parent) about 4 inches deep — the top few inches with leaves stays above ground. Provided the ground remains moist (not soggy), roots should begin to emerge from the cut in four to six weeks. The best time to do this is in warm weather.

If you wish to make cuttings, they should come from young (new) wood, in its second or third year.

Remove all leaves or buds except the topmost so that the future tree will be less apt to produce suckers near the base. Pot the cuttings in a mix of equal parts builder's sand, peat moss, perlite and vermiculite. To speed things up, dip the cut ends in a rooting hormone.

Throughout the rooting process, the cuttings must stay moist, so cover the pots with plastic bags, leaving small air holes. In about six to eight weeks, the cuttings will be ready to be potted.

Q. Do you have a list of poisonous plants? I have young children around so I need to be careful.

A. I think it's best to teach young children not to put random pickings from the garden into their mouths. Keep in mind one part of a plant may be OK to eat, but the other may not!

Potentially dangerous plant parts include azalea leaves and flowers, clematis leaves, the flowers and leaves of rhododendron and mountain laurel, English ivy berries, leaves and flowers of the herb tansy, to name a few.

Q. Can you give me any information on the shamrock?

A. The shamrock is a member of the clover family. It is the national emblem of Ireland and is said to have been used by St. Patrick to explain the nature of the Trinity. Leaves divided into three were used as emblems of the Trinity.

To this day, the shamrock is worn in buttonholes on St. Patrick's Day in Ireland as well as other countries in the world.

Our Children

By Willard Abraham

New reads and recordings for parents

some series of useful suggestions to help parents cope with family issues. The book's subtitle is "A Parent's Survival Guide."

Between its first words ("Start with yourself. Stop right now and answer this question without thinking: Do you like yourself?") and the last ones ("Oh, yes. One more thing. Enjoy your child") are countless bits of wisdom.

The alphabetical index indicates how varied and complete the topics are: creativity, cults, drugs, etiquette, fairy, homework, preschools, stress, television and many more.

Dip into this book almost anywhere and you'll find suggestions to help make your and your child's life easier and happier.

The other two products (one a book, the other an audio cassette) will probably be of special interest if birth or early or later childhood are your focal points.

• "Having a Baby" by Patricia Bernstein (Pocket Books). With a subtitle that labels the book as "A Celebration of the Joys of Childbirth," it is a modern history of childbirth from the mother's perspective. Mothers tell their stories in intimate detail and provide a vivid picture of where we've been and what changes have taken place concerning this issue.

With the contributors' names and locations, a list of related publications and a useful list and definitions of terms, this book can be a useful and interesting product for mothers and others anticipating the birth event.

You may not want to read all the participants' full stories of childbirth, so consider skipping around and selecting the ones that appeal to you most.

• "Dr. Spock's Baby and Child Care: The Parents' Part," a 90-minute audio cassette based on a portion of the revised 1991 edition of his book co-written by Dr. Michael Rothenberg (Simon & Schuster Audioworks).

Updated and in this new format it may have a special appeal for parents of this renowned pediatric professional and his colleague.

In 1987, an 18-month-long advertising campaign took the headache to new heights in the public consciousness.

The makers of Excedrin gave us reasons for headaches — Excedrin headache No. 31 — "The boss is on my back" — and hoped we would use their remedy.

The company took a painfully serious subject and injected a little humor, although people who have headaches know they are no laughing matter.

Commercials come and go, but headaches remain a constant, recurring problem to more than 45 million Americans, according to the non-profit National Headache Foundation. The very fact that headaches have a foundation speaks volumes.

Considerable work time is lost, and Americans spend in excess of $4 billion annually on over-the-counter pain relievers, the foundation says.

Excedrin headache No. 8 — "We're spending too much and have to cut back."

Why are all these people suffering from all these headaches and popping all these pills?

In a word — tension.

Approximately 90 percent of all headaches are classified as muscle contraction/tension headaches, the foundation says. Within that category are two types: tension headaches occurring on an episodic basis and those that hang away every day.

Episodic headaches most often are caused by depression or other emotional problems. The other type is due mainly to common complaints in the '90s — stress and/or anxiety.

Excedrin headache No. 26 — "They put me on hold."

Tension headaches are characterized by a dull pain, a feeling of tightness around the scalp and neck, and they commonly affect the entire head.

Stress-related headaches appear to afflict more women than men, says Dr. David McManus, a neurologist/internist with the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine.

Headache gender bias may be due to hormonal differences between men and women — estrogen vs. testosterone — but it could also mean "there's more tension in women's lives than in men's," he says.

Excedrin headache No. 2 — "Too much to do in too little time."

Tension headaches may be the most common, but they aren't the only form of headache.

There are vascular headaches, caused by the constriction or expansion of blood vessels. Migraines and cluster headaches fall into this category.

Tension headaches can mimic a form of migraine headaches, known as common migraines, McManus says, but the differences are marked.

Migraine pain, which occurs on one side or the back of the head, can last an hour, but it's more likely they'll go on for a day or two, making the person very ill.

A migraine headache can occur once or twice a month, he says, and, in women, may be linked to the menstrual cycle. Migraine pain normally does not respond to over-the-counter pain relievers.

Tension headache pain is not as severe as migraine pain, nor does it last as long. A tension headache may occur daily, but the pain usually lasts for hours, not days, and responds to non-prescription pain relievers.

Migraines, which affect some 16 to 18 million people, have two types: classic and common.

"Classic migraines are very scary for a lot of people," McManus says.

Classic migraines, also known as migraines with aura, may begin with bright, flashing or zigzag lights or black spots before the eyes and/or distorted peripheral (side) vision. There may be tingling or numbness of the arms or scalp, as well as dizziness.

Many people who experience classic migraine symptoms believe they are having a stroke. But strokes occur in a matter of seconds, whereas the onset of classic migraine symptoms is slow, about five to 15 minutes. The headache pain usually begins as the symptoms subside. With the pain sometimes comes extreme sensitivity to light and sound, nausea and vomiting.

Given the visual disturbances and other symptoms, it's almost as if nature has provided the sufferer with a migraine early warning system.

Drugs are now available that can, when taken immediately with the onset of symptoms, prevent the pain, McManus says. Other preventive drugs are taken daily.

There is no early warning with the common migraine, or migraine without aura, but some anti-depressants in low doses have proven effective for the pain. Narcotic pain relievers are sometimes needed.

A blood pressure medicine or a drug given for manic depression has been effective in treating cluster headaches, which affect about 1 million Americans, mostly men. The pain of cluster headaches is like no other and can be severe enough for the person to contemplate suicide, according to a report in the journal, Internal Medicine.

Therefore, cluster headaches, so named because they occur in a cluster of days, should be treated as an emergency, the report says.

Another type of headache could be a sign of a serious disorder, McManus says. The temporal arteritis headache, affecting people over age 50, is caused by an inflammation of the arteries feeding the brain. Anyone with tenderness of the arteries, fever and unexplained weight loss should consult a doctor, McManus says.

I came back from a two-week cruise, Singapore to Bangkok on the Seabourn Spirit, several pounds up. Aboard ship eating is a form of entertainment. The minute I got home I planned a series of meals around soup. For me it is the ultimate diet food, and studies have shown that people who find diets that work for them and don't rely on diet plans take weight off faster and keep it off.

So it's soup for me, often for lunch and dinner, as well. This takes a bit of doing lest meals get boring. I waded through my cookbook library and decided the most successful soups for this were ethnic — Chinese, Spanish, Italian. Chicken soup is for colds; cauliflower soup is for company. For my weight-loss plan, the best soup was exotic.

HOT AND SOUR SOUP

1/2 cup dried lily buds
1/2 cup dried wood ear fungus
2 ounces cooked chicken, shredded
1 teaspoon cornstarch
6 cups low-sodium chicken broth
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons rice or cider vinegar
1 tablespoon low-sodium soy sauce

2 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 cup water
1/4 pound bean curd (tofu)
1 egg white, lightly beaten
1 teaspoon Oriental sesame oil
Yields 4 servings.

Each serving has about 80 calories, 3 grams fat, 7 milligrams cholesterol and 280 milligrams sodium.

Soak lily buds and wood ears in warm water to cover for about 2 hours. Rinse and drain. Shred wood ears. Mix shredded chicken with cornstarch and set aside.

Combine stock, pepper, vinegar and soy sauce in saucepan (steel or glass) and bring to boil. Stir 2 tablespoons cornstarch into 1/4 cup water, blend and stir into soup. Add bean curd, shredded wood ears and lily buds to soup and cook over low heat for 8 minutes. Slowly stir in egg white. Remove from heat and add sesame oil. Serve at once.

Here's How

Q. I recently had some concrete work done, which included a patio and walkways. The job was not finished satisfactorily. The entire surface was to have been textured and the contractor left it in a mess.

I notified the contractor that I was withholding payment until the job was corrected. Instead of redoing the surface, the contractor started foreclosure proceedings. I had to pay the contractor or risk losing my home.

I fail to understand how this can legally happen. Can you explain, and warn others about this possibility?

A. The contract you signed with the contractor must have included a "lien sale" provision, which is not uncommon. This clause allows a contractor to foreclose on a house if the customer fails to pay his bills. It is often abused, however, by dishonest or incompetent contractors.

Before hiring a contractor, a homeowner should check on the contractor's reputation and previous customers, and with the Better Business Bureau. You also can demand the addition of a lien release clause to the contract.

Q. I have a vinyl no-wax floor that feels sticky. I use a cleaner that is made for no-wax floors. Do you know of a cleaning method that will correct this problem?

A. Even though the cleaning product you are using may not call for rinsing with clear water, it is best to do so. This can prevent a sticky film that builds up over a period of time.

Some older vinyls and those of less quality also can deteriorate. In this case, the best method of restoration is to strip any previous cleaning product or wax from the floor by washing with a solution of ammonia and water.

Rinse with clear water and then apply an acrylic floor coating such as Future, sold in supermarkets.

Q. I am remodeling my kitchen and plan to install new flooring. I would like to use a vinyl, but I am concerned about dents from our breakfast table and chairs on this type of flooring. That happened on the old floor, which was vinyl.

Do you have any suggestions on how to prevent this?

A. Most floor covering or hardware stores, or even furniture stores, sell a variety of furniture glides that attach to almost any style leg. These will help protect your new flooring.

In addition, the type of vinyl you purchase is important. Often, the more resilient (cushiony) the floor covering, the more subject it is to dents and spike-heel marks. Occasionally, the underlay or improper installation is to blame.

An exception is the newer cushioned vinyl that actually has a springy foam layer on the underside. This flooring, although more expensive, is very comfortable and is resistant to normal indentation.

The more expensive line of vinyls also resist dirt better, and many of the no-wax varieties live up to their name, requiring damp-mopping with a mild detergent as their only upkeep.

Height of room bothers reader

Q. I don't know what to do about the family room in our new house. It has a cathedral ceiling with windows high on the wall. I'm planning to leave those bare, but it's the height of the room that bothers me. It's like sitting in the bottom of a well.

What can you suggest? — H.J.

A. Darlene Henderson, a Decorating Den designer in Florence, N.Y., had a similar problem to solve in the room we show here, and her ideas may be helpful.

To take the hard, square edge off this high-ceilinged room, she played all the angles, insetting the "area" rug on the diagonal in the carpet and arranging the furniture around it. Even the cocktail table has a new slant on life.

The cords she swags over the window cornices are a whimsical — and softening — touch.

About those windows high on the wall. As much as we all adore the light and sunshine, builders have, in my opinion, gotten a bit too frisky in the abundance of windows they toss almost anywhere in a wall.

It's a poor pun but a definite truth to say they're giving homeowners a lot of pane when it comes to dressing all that glass.

Q. I'd love to have a faux-painted finish on the wall in my hall, but when it comes to doing anything artistic like that, I'm hopeless. Can you give me any other ideas — and don't even bother to tell me how "easy" faux painting is! I wouldn't ever try it myself. — All Thumbs

A. All right, no proselytizing. Just take yourself to the nearest wall-covering store, where you'll find no end of "painted" finishes ready to roll right onto your wall (I trust being "All Thumbs" doesn't inhibit your ability to hang wall covering).

NEW ANGLE — Opposing diagonals generate visual energy in a sun room with a high ceiling.

Try Italian-style Easter lamb

By Carol Cutler

President and Mrs. Clinton are getting advice from just about everyone on just about everything. Even the very formal state dinners have come under attack. Chefs, food writers, restaurateurs and just about anyone else connected with the food industry wants the menus to be American.

So what's American? One answer that comes back is that it's the use of seasonal products. Tell that to the French, who would never eat asparagus except in the springtime or strawberries except in the summer. Tell it to good Greek cooks, who make dolmas only with fresh grape leaves. In the winter, they use cabbage leaves.

Truth be known, it's only recently that American chefs have been filling their kitchen larders with only what's in season. Because of our vast transportation system, it was considered much more chic to eat out-of-season produce. Perhaps the extra price tag helped explain the snobbishness.

And when American families sit down to the dinner table, what is served depends on the family's roots. Immigrant families that have been here for three generations still serve much of the food their ancestors did. Be it blini, borscht, shrimp stir-fry, Yorkshire pudding or stuffed cabbage, they are now as American as, say, apple pie or tarte tatin.

These thoughts come to mind when considering a menu for Easter dinner. Ham or lamb is traditional. But what flavorings are added and the way they are cooked vary enormously. A recipe that bears a place of honor on the holiday tables comes from a remarkable new cookbook, "The Splendid Table" by Lynne Rossetto Kasper (William Morrow).

This well-researched tome concentrates on the cooking of Emilia-Romagna, the heartland of northern Italy and a cuisine considered by many to be the best of Italy.

Kasper's recipe for Lamb With Black Olives has all sorts of advantages in addition to its deep, soul-satisfying flavor. This leg of lamb is cooked on top of the stove, releasing the oven for other baking. Stove-top roasting dates back to times when ovens were scarce in home kitchens. The lamb can also be cooked in advance and reheated at serving time, a boon for any busy cook.

The author suggests serving boiled potatoes or creamy polenta with the hot lamb. Both provide a mild-flavored starch to balance flavors, not to absorb the sauce, of which there will be very little. Emilia-Romagna cooking tends to produce very concentrated, rich flavors. So it is with the olive sauce.

Keep the first course light. Artichokes are especially plentiful now and would make a good beginning. Serve them cold with a creamy vinaigrette. For a more festive presentation, trim the globes down to the flat bottoms, poach them, and fill with a small shrimp salad. Follow the lamb roast with a crisp salad of mixed baby greens.

A fresh fruit tart makes a sparkling finale. But if you want to maintain an Italian theme, look for a bakery that makes the sweetened yeast dough cakes called colomba (dove). These fruit- and nut-studded bird-shape cakes have been a tradition since the 12th century.

A new Easter tradition can start in your home with Lynn Rossetto Kasper's Lamb With Black Olives. It's a tradition worth starting.

LAMB WITH BLACK OLIVES

(Agnello alle Olive)

- 1 6- to 7-pound leg of lamb, trimmed of fat
- 2 3-inch sprigs fresh rosemary OR 2 generous teaspoons dried rosemary leaves
- 1 large clove garlic, peeled
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste
- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- Salt to taste
- ½ medium red onion, chopped
- ½ cup plus 3 tablespoons dry red wine
- ½ cup well-drained canned tomatoes
- ½ cup small black Ligurian or Nicoise olives, unpitted
- ½ cup good homemade chicken stock

Yields 4 to 6 servings.
If lamb leg has shank, have butcher crack it and tuck under thick part of leg; also save sirloin end for another use. The final compact meat package should weigh about 5 pounds.

Strip rosemary leaves into mortar. Add garlic and crush to paste. With paring knife cut small slits in leg of lamb and fill them with crushed herbs. Set lamb on plate, sprinkle with pepper, lightly cover with plastic wrap, and refrigerate 8 to 24 hours.

Select heavy 4- to 5-quart saucepan large enough to hold meat very snugly. Heat oil over medium heat. Add meat, salting it lightly, and take about 1 hour to slowly brown it on all sides. Turn meat with wooden spatulas, lowering heat if necessary to keep it from scorching.

Add red onion to meat and brown it, still turning meat so that it is crusty on all sides. Pour in ½ cup of wine and tomatoes. Bring liquid to slowest of bubbles. Cover lightly with foil, but do not seal foil to pot; or cover with lid set ajar.

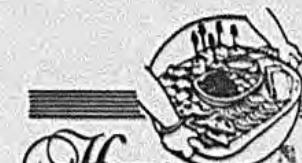

Cook over low heat 2 hours. Turn lamb frequently as it cooks, basting it with juices. At end of 2 hours, the sauce should be only a thick film at bottom of pan. Stir in 3 tablespoons of wine and olives. Slowly bubble, uncovered, another 30 to 45 minutes. The lamb should reach an internal temperature of 140 F. Add ½ cup stock if pan juices threaten to dry up.

Carve the lamb into ¾- to 1-inch-thick slices. Arrange slices on warm platter and moisten them with little bit of pan sauce. Spoon black olives over meat. Serve hot.

Note: If cooked ahead, the lamb can be rewarmed over medium-low heat, taking care not to cook it beyond an internal temperature of 140 F.

KITCHEN HINTS

Cracking a lobster claw.

Whole lobster claws are a tasty part of the crustacean, but it's tricky to pull the meat out in one piece.

1. Break lobster claw from body.
2. Twist small pincher and pull it off claw.
3. With heel of chef's knife, crack claw across its broad middle.
4. Twist knife back and forth until shell cracks and starts to break.
5. Open shell; claw meat will pull out in one piece.

Buddy 'L' ice truck

Q. Enclosed is a picture of my Buddy "L" ice truck. It is 25½ inches long and 12 inches high, and has a canvas cover in the rear.

I would appreciate your opinion as to its value.

A. Your truck was made between 1928 and 1931; in very good condition, it might sell for $325 to $335.

Buddy "L" toys were first manufactured by the Moline Pressed Steel Co. in Moline, Ill., in 1921, and were named for the son of the owner, Buddy Lundahl.

The early toys made between 1921 and 1932 are the most valuable.

Q. This mark is on the bottom of a porcelain celery dish. The dish is 13 inches long and 4 inches wide; it is decorated with red flowers with foliage.

Can you tell me anything about its origin and current value?

A. Your celery dish was made in Baltimore, Md., by the Edwin Bennett Pottery Co. about 1890. It might sell for $50 to $60.

ANTIQUE OR JUNQUE

Q. What can you tell me about a can for talcum powder marked "Baby Powder" and "California Perfume Co.?" It has a picture of toy soldiers on the front.

A. This is quite a find! The California Perfume Co. was the original Avon Co. Your baby powder can is worth about $125 to $135 in good condition.

Q. I have a Royal Doulton plate, D-5175, titled "The Artful Dodger." It is 10½ inches in diameter and depicts a character from Dickens.

When was this made and how much is it worth?

A. This plate, depicting a character from "Oliver Twist," was made in England during the early 1900s and would probably sell for $125 to $135 in good condition.

Q. We recently cleaned our attic and found a watch I had when I was a little girl. It is a 1963 Barbie wind-up watch. I had it repaired; it still works and has the original band.

I would like to know its value.

A. Your watch might be worth about $25 to $35 in good condition. It lists for $50 in mint condition in the original box.

Q. I have an 11-inch-diameter cake plate with handle holes. The mark is "C. Tieisch — Germany." It is decorated with lilies of the valley and violets with gold trim.

Please tell me when it was made and the value.

A. Carl Tieisch operated a porcelain factory in Altwasser, Germany. Your cake plate was made about 1900 and would probably sell for $35 to $45.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. Our 12-year-old spayed basset hound is getting very fat and lazy. We feed her canned dog food and a few table scraps as treats. I am trying to limit the amount of food that she gets. However, she is not losing any weight. Are there diet dog foods available? Would exercise help her?

A. Obesity in middle-aged to older dogs is a common problem. The incidence of obesity in dogs increases with age and decreased physical activity. Dogs tend to become obese due to decreased physical activity, and they tend to decrease physical activity due to obesity.

Obesity is most common in spayed females, castrated males and dogs fed home-prepared foods and table scraps. Some authorities feel that dogs on "all-meat" diets are more likely to become obese.

The reason for this is that diets composed of exclusively animal tissue, particularly the beef varieties, result in the food having a higher calorie density than most other canned dog foods. Dogs eating all-meat diets usually consume approximately 20 to 40 percent more calories than dogs eating similar amounts of "balanced-ration" dog foods.

The most common reason for obesity in dogs is simply over feeding. Obesity related to hormonal or other metabolic disorders in dogs is relatively rare. Usually with these disorders, other obvious signs of illness are present.

Obesity is extremely detrimental to the health of our pets. The dangers of obesity include increased incidence of cardiac, respiratory and arthritic problems. Obesity reduces tolerance to hot weather and exercise. Many obese pets are depressed and have poor appetites.

To lose weight, pets, just like humans, must use more calories than consumed each day. Before putting your dog on a diet, you should take her to a veterinarian for a thorough physical examination. Your veterinarian can then outline a diet plan suitable for your dog.

Special prescription diets are available to help in weight-loss programs for pets. The feeding of table scraps should be stopped. Mild exercise is often helpful in weight-loss programs.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Last weekend I bought some planting soil to start some seeds. I wanted to plant them inside so they would not be washed away in the spring rain and so I could watch their progress. I planted stringbeans, tomatoes, spinach, cucumbers and some flower seeds. Much to my surprise three of the stringbeans have popped their heads out of the soil. The tomatoes are also sending up some filmy stems.

Who knows perhaps I'll be picking stringbeans and tomatoes before I get a chance to plant them directly in the garden!

Your friend,
Aunt Tilly

The World's Most Beautiful Grandchildren

Christopher and Ryan were the reasons for moving to Garden City, after our 7 year assignment in Europe. Visiting them and their parents, Irene and Bruce Torino of Garden City, once a year just wasn't enough time spent with them. We missed seeing them and being around them. While their maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold House, formerly of Port Washington, now reside in Florida, Ralph and Margo Torino, their paternal grandparents, intend to stay in Garden City.

Ex-wife entitled to full benefits

By William M. Acosta

Q. I have been drawing Social Security benefits since I turned 62. My ex-wife has been drawing them on her own account since she turned 62. She has not remarried. After my death would she be entitled to 100 percent of the amount that I was drawing at the time of my death? Would that entitlement change in the event she remarried after my death? T.T.

A. Your ex-wife would be entitled to 100 percent of the amount that you were drawing prior to your death, if it is higher than the amount that she receives on her own account. If she remarries after your death, her benefits would continue, as she is over age 60.

Q. My son, who is disabled, receives Supplemental Security Income (SSI) checks. He wants to find a job, but I'm afraid that if he goes to work, he will lose his Medicaid benefits. Is it possible for him to work and keep his Medicaid coverage? M.L.

A. Yes. Your son may continue to qualify for Medicaid even if he earns too much to receive SSI benefits. To keep his Medicaid coverage, he must continue to be disabled, meet all other SSI eligibility requirements, be dependent on Medicaid coverage to continue working and be unable to purchase similar medical care.

Q. I will be 70 in June, 1993. Do I have to report my earnings after I turn 70, if I exceed $10,560? E.W.

A. No. You only need to report earnings up to the month of your birthday. If you are self-employed, you should prorate your earnings — that is, you should total the earnings for the year and divide by 12 — and report the prorated amount for the months before your birthday. People who are 70 or older all year don't have to file a report.

Q. I have been receiving a Social Security benefit since my dad died four years ago. Although I just turned 18, I won't graduate from high school until June. Will my Social Security benefit stop when I turn 18? J.E.

A. No. Social Security benefits can be paid as long as you attend high school or until the month you graduate or reach age 19 — whichever occurs first.
