Board Closes Year; Honor Wolfe Rudin

By Maureen Trasler

As an annual event, the Hicksville Board of Education honors district retirees and 25-year employees at its June meeting. It is also at this time that the Board welcomes its newly-elected trustees and says farewell to those who will be leaving.

Noting that Carole Wolfe has served as a representative on the Federal Relations Network, State Legislative Network and lobbied for more state aid, Board President Helen Lafferty thanked Mrs. Wolfe for her six years of service. Mrs. Lafferty added that Mrs. Wolfe has served as President, Treasurer, Secretary and Committee Chairperson for policy, curriculum, facilities and finance. Mrs. Wolfe acknowledged that during her tenure, the board had been through "a lot of turmoil and a lot of agony." She added that she was proud that she helped bring Superintendent Mugavero to the district.

Praising Arlene Rudin for her six years of service, Trustee Voley Martin said that Mrs. Rudin had provided him with "sound advice" and had always given him "reason to think." Mrs. Rudin replied with a wish to new trustees... "the hope that they achieve the delicate balance needed to serve our entire community."

Moving ahead on a new venture, Superintendent Mugavero recommended to the board that an after school child care program be scheduled at Old Country Road School in the fall. He reported that enrollment for the district-sponsored program to be administered by SCOPE fell short of its desired goal. The majority of the 34 enrollees came from OCR. Mr. Mugavero further recommended that the district provide transportation to Old Country Road School for those enrollees attending the other five district elementary schools. He concluded that he hopes the program can be expanded in the future to be housed at each elementary school. The board unanimously voted to accept the Superintendent's recommendation.

The program will operate in the school library. Mrs. Lafferty noted that the room "fulfills the basic requirements," containing a VCR, tables, an open carpeted area, easy access to the gym, play area and parent entrance.

Mrs. Lafferty reminded the trustees that at a previous meeting the board was addressed by a representative of Holy Family School, which is also contemplating the initiation of a child care program in the fall. It was requested that the school district provide transportation to in-district students who wished to attend a Holy Family program. Mr. Mugavero reiterated his earlier concern for the district's liability, and said that his current recommendation deals with "public-to-public school service."

District Counsel Gregory Guercio commented on the timeliness of the request being submitted prior to the April 1 deadline for transportation requests as required by State law. If the request is deemed legitimate, then the district would have to provide transportation to Holy Family or any other school within the district's boundaries. Mr. Guercio also noted that if requests from parents are received subsequent to the April 1 date, the district can waive the deadline if there is the existence of a rationale.

Trustee comments included Mrs. Lafferty's concern that this "taxi-like service" could be a costly proposition. Dave Staton questioned the district's responsibility, to which Mr. Guercio responded that if the district acts responsibly, responsibility ends at dropoff. Mr. Staton was also concerned with the fact that the district may not know the person welcoming the students each day at Holy Family. To this, Mr. Guercio replied that if the choice of this person is out of the district's control, then it is not liable.

Trustee Richard Pfaender said that granting transportation may "open a can of worms," and suggested that the district may wish to provide only a pilot program at Old Country Road School this year for those students attending school there. Jim Black disagreed, and Mrs. Wolfe said that the district should provide such a program "equally and freely to all students."

A motion to rescind the original motion failed. Mrs. Lafferty then summarized that the vote would stand, and if a problem arises, the board will then address it.

At several recent meetings, the board tabled discussion of the attendance lines drawn at the time of the vote to close East Street School this fall. In this light, Trustee Rich Pfaender motioned to Hicksville's Fire Dept. was honored in its Centennial Year for "outstanding service to the community" at the recent well-attended Awards Night of the Joseph Barry Council of the Knights of Columbus. Receiving the Knights' Annual Community Service Award from Grand Knight Joseph Leo was Chief Patrick Scanlon of the Fire Dept.

Among other Joseph Barry Council awards, scholarships and special moments of recognition were four scholarships to Hicksville primary and secondary school graduates and prizes to the winners of the Knights of Columbus "Free Throw" basketball competition. Present to thank the Hicksville Knights for the Council's generous distribution of its annual charitable and benevolent fund drive monies were leaders of various Nassau and local social and child welfare agencies. In 1992-93, the Barry Council provided over $3700 aid to good causes.

The evening's honors and festivities were the closing event of Grand Knight Joseph Leo's year. Mr. Leo had the pleasure of turning over his gavel to a successor Grand Knight, Anthony Previte, a widely admired Hicksville civic leader. Previte, in his inimitable fashion, saluted his predecessor for "an outstanding and successful year of leadership."

Our dunes had a rough winter . . .

The fierce coastal storms that battered Long Island's shoreline last winter seriously eroded the dunes at Tobay Beach.

In the months since then, the Town, with the help of dedicated citizen volunteers, has undertaken projects aimed at stabilizing and revegetating our fragile dune system.

Walking on the dunes, however, will reverse these efforts and cause further damage.

Enjoy the sun, sand and surf at Tobay Beach this summer. But, please keep off the dunes.

Remember, they've had a rough winter!

School Board

allow parents of students entering 5th grade in 1993-94 (those children in Lee Ave. and Old Country Road Schools redistricted as a result of the closing) to be given the option to have their children remain with their current classmates and graduate with their friends. He called for the Superintendent to issue a request form specifying a cutoff date. It is also to be made clear to parents that the district will not supply transportation for those students choosing the option and that siblings are not eligible for the option. Those incoming 5th graders redistricted from East to Woodland School would also be given the option to remain with their classmates at Lee Ave. School.

There was some question as to whether this would jeopardize the elimination of singleton classes, one of the major objectives in the decision to close a school. But the board split 4 to 3 to pass Mr. Pfander's motion.

Trustee Jim Black motioned to reestablish the boundaries for those students in the number streets between Jerusalem Ave. and Broadway above 4th St. in order to allow them to continue to go to Lee Ave. School. This motion passed by a vote of 6 to 1.

In line with the trustees hesitance to tamper with the remainder of the redistricting lines before a ruling is given by the Commissioner of Education in response to a challenge, the board voted 6 to 1 to leave all other sections as mapped by the redistricting lines.

The Superintendent's monthly report to the board covered a wide variety of topics. At a previous meeting Mr. Mugavero had been asked to look into increasing the number of daily work hours for bus monitors to four, in order to attract applicants for this position. The Superintendent reported that this could add some additional $35,000 which had not been budgeted for the 1993-94 school year.

Recognizing the need to maintain bus monitors, Mr. Mugavero said that he would recommend in July a guaranteed two hour minimum for monitors. "we can only do what is economically feasible," said the Superintendent.

In the personnel area, Mr. Mugavero announced that Mrs. Geraldine Silver, Principal of Old Country Road School, will be transferred to Lee Ave. School, Mr. Don Guadagnoli, Principal, would be transferred to Old Country Road School. Mr. Mugavero added that the district would like to place Mrs. Kathy Catania, former Principal of Lee Ave. School, in a district position if at all possible. A representative of the Lee Ave. parents praised Mrs. Catania for her work at Lee Ave., emphasizing the love and genuine caring she showed to students and parents alike.

Mr. Mugavero also announced the appointment of Evelyn Acosta as Chairperson of Secondary Guidance. He remarked that Ms. Acosta comes to the district from the New York City Schools and had a multi-lingual background.

Mr. Mugavero stated that 900 students have registered for the district's summer recreation program. "We owe our students nothing less than the best that we can afford," said the Supt. He added that the district will be employing some 60 high school and college youngsters this summer to work in the schools making repairs and renovations.

In other matters:

* The board approved an employee contract with the Council of Principals, Assist. Principals, Supervisors and Dept. Chairs (July 2, 1991 through June 30, 1994). The contract calls for a zero percent increase in the first year, a 2-percent increase in the second and a 4-percent increase in the final year. Effective July 1, 1993 all other members except the Middle School and High School Principals shall work an additional four days per year. Members are eligible for the flexible benefit plan.

* The board approved a contract with the Secretarial Assoc. (July 1, 1992 through June 30, 1994). The contract grants a 3.5% increase plus increments for each of the two years. Longevity stipend will be increased to $200 for steps 12, 16 and 20. All future negotiation will take place after the work day. Members are eligible for the flexible benefit plan.

* The board's counsel explained that through the flexible benefit plan an employee can set aside certain sums of money paid by them for specified benefits at pre-tax dollars, rather than net tax dollars. It is necessary to set up a trust for these funds. The trust would be administered by Pomco, who will administer the Flex Plan. Mr. Mugavero added that the accounting firm of Peat Marwick is drafting an agreement for the trust and it will appear on the July agenda.

* The board rejected a waiving of the three-reading requirement for policy voting in regard to Regulations for Student Eligibility (sports). Assist. Supt. Dursio agreed to place the policy on the Sept. Committee agenda.

* Also in the policy area, Mr. Mugavero suggested the revision of "Smoking on School Premises by Staff Members" to reflect a desired smoke-free environment. The board agreed to a rewriting after discussion with employees.

* Mr. Mugavero objected to the wording in the policy 9251 (Tenure of Teachers). He suggested that the wording should reflect "excellence" in performance. The board agreed to table the policy and regulations in order to reassess the wording.

In accordance with law, the board will hold its reorganization meeting on Tues., July 6, at 8 p.m. in the Board Room of the Administration Building.

Lamb K Of C "Awards Night"

The Joseph F. Lamb Council No. 5723 Knights of Columbus, Plainview/Hicksville, held their annual "Council Awards Night," on Thursday evening, June 17, in the school basement of Our Lady of Mercy in Hicksville. A large crowd of brother Knights, their wives, families and friends, were on hand to witness the presentation of the various awards given to the members of the Joe Lamb Council for special achievements for the Council, during the Columbian year of July 1992 through June 1993.

First on the program was the awarding of "Certificates of Merit" to 12 members of the Council, who had been selected throughout the year as "Knight of the Month." Later a number of special "Quintennial Certificates" of Appreciation were also given out to various members of the Council. These certificates from the Supreme Knights of Columbus, were given "in recognition of the spirit of discovery and outstanding achievements honoring Christopher Columbus and the 500th Anniversary of his voyage to the new world."

A special plaque was then presented to brother Knight Elie Saydah and his wife Frances who were selected as the Joe Lamb "Catholic Family of the Year." Elie and his family have lived in Plainview for 35 years. Elie has been very active in the Council for many years. He is the Director of Council Activities and is co-chairman of the blood bank.

The Joe Lamb "Knight of the Year" was awarded to brother Knight Alfred J. Eusini. Alfred, one of our newer members, has been very active in the various activities of the Council. He is also very active in Our Lady of Mercy Parish. He is a resident of Hicksville.

A special plaque from the Nassau/Suffolk Chapter was presented to brother Knight Michael Abbriano, for his outstanding efforts as Editor of the Joe Lamb monthly publication "The Knight."

PFN, FDD Grand Knight Peter Volpe and Deputy Grand Knight Hank Schettini, presented all of the awards. Each member honored was given a very brief talk by the Grand Knight, praising his efforts. We of the Joe Lamb Council, are very happy to have so many dedicated members in the Council.

Food and beverages were served to all in attendance. The food was prepared by PGK John Lombardi and his assistants. It was certainly an outstanding night for all who attended.

Jottings From Yesteryear

By Bill Clark

As the sole came loose, from my shoe, due to getting it wet, reminded me of Eleanor, my wife, who during WW-II due to rationing of leather and a luggage delay cut cardboard inner soles for her shoes until her ration book &/or suitcase caught up with her in California. It was the same week Pres. Roosevelt died. Now-a-days my soles don't wear out, the uppers fall off.

This Fourth of July reminds me of when a five inch fire cracker under a can didn't go off until 20 minutes later. Had I not listened to my father I would have removed the can to relite the fuse and possibly had a serious injury. Take care and enjoy your weekend, and also keep your speed down and enjoy your trip. Watching a neighbor change and repair his flat tire last night, I recalled years ago if not repaired the tire might end up from a tree as a tire swing and the inner tube with patches would be headed for the beach and a swim.

Same corner now The Bank Of New York, originally L.I. National.

Hero's Citation

Oyster Bay Town officials took time before a recent Town Board meeting to commend Syosset resident Christian Pieper (sixth from right), who, while working for the Long Island Railroad, risked his life to thwart two crimes in progress at the Hickville Railroad Station. Pieper, a volunteer firefighter with the Syosset Fire Dept., prevented an auto theft and mugging on Feb. 19. On hand for the occasion, L-R were Councilman Leonard B. Symons, Town Clerk Carl L. Marcellino, Pieper's future Mother-in-Law, Mary Jane Swienocki, Mother, Mary, Fiances, Mary Van Reynolds, Father, August, Councilman Douglas J. Hynes, Supervisor Lewis J. Yevöli, Councilman Tom Hogan, Councilman Thomas L. Clark and Town Councilwoman Ann R. Ocker.

FIREMAN GIVES POOL WARNINGS

As the warm weather arrives, many area residents will be using pools on their own property or in the yards of friends and relatives. Kevin Mulrooney, a volunteer firefighter from East Williston, has provided the following information:

According to the National Swimming Pool Safety Committee (NSPSC), there were 300 deaths in the US last year in swimming pools for people under five years old. Children should be supervised at all times when near pools. Fences should secure pool areas with self latching highly placed locks. All water should be drained from the pool cover corners regularly. And remember, most inflatable devices WILL NOT, repeat NOT, keep children afloat. And most of all, no one is drown proof.

Those who maintain their pools should keep in mind that there are many different brand names of pool stabilizers, but the important thing to remember is that they are incompatible with each other. Most are not flammable, but will react violently with foreign matter such as grease, oil, or dirt, which will lead to the production of heat, and eventually, fire.

Store all pool chemicals in cool, dry areas spaced far enough away from each other so a spill will not mix chemicals together. When adding chemicals to the pool use a clean dry plastic scoop - but do not dip the scoop into the water. Pour the chemical into the pool. A wet scoop placed into the water will react with the chemical. Keep the scoop dry and clean. Chemicals must always be handled by an adult.

Should a fire erupt clear the area and avoid the toxic fumes. Call the Fire Department at once and tell the dispatcher in a clear manner exactly where and what is on fire. This is very important. We must know the extent of the hazardous material which we will encounter. This will also allow us to contact a Fire Department with a special Hazardous Material Team or the Nassau County Fire Marshal's Office.

If your skin comes in contact with the chemical, flush skin with water. Be careful not to infect other skin areas with the polluted run off. Also, flush the eyes if they come into contact with a chemical; remembering to protect the uninfected eye. The run off must flow away from the "good" eye. Remove all victims to fresh air.

Have fun, but be informed and cautious!
Mary J. Morgan

Most Input Callers Want Stricter Immigration

Most callers to Input believe that there should be sharp controls over immigration in response to this question: "Should we close immigration to countries that allow terrorists to publicly state intentions to harm the U.S.?" Here are some of the answers:

DON'T LIMIT IMMIGRATION

This is the most inhumane suggestion contrary to our Statue of Liberty and our own Constitution. This attitude was expressed by FDR when he turned back a shipload of refugees to die in death camps. We would have refused the Irish refugees. We would have refused Germans now because of the new Nazi terrorists. The innocent would pay the price for the criminals. It will lead to less international travel and more ignorance. Keep out the terrorists but not the innocent. This suggestion would benefit the terrorists by keeping the innocent trapped.

A.G.

CLOSE IMMIGRATION

We should close immigration from countries that harbor terrorists. This applies most particularly to the Moslem countries where the terrorist threat is greatest. Moslems represent a distinct danger to American democracy. We should learn from the Lebanese experience where democracy collapsed once the Moslems became a majority. The U.S. must place restrictions on Moslem immigration and have strict surveillance on the fundamentalists. Attempts to distinguish between fundamentalists and other Moslems is futile. The Moslem religion in its pure form is incompatible with democracy. It rejects any distinction between government and religion. State and church are one, this is the slogan. "No law, no constitution only the laws of God and the Koran."

A.B.

PROTECT OURSELVES

Countries that openly proclaim and embrace terrorists should not be allowed to send people to the U.S. This should not apply to those genuinely seeking refuge in this country and can prove it. We must tighten all immigration and those who are part of groups that seek to use terrorist methods whether here or in other countries should not be allowed here. We have to protect our own country first.

L.G.

TERRORISTS OUT

By all means we should stop allowing people into the country who believe in terror. The lesson came home to us first hand in the bombing of the World Trade Center. When we hear of these things in other countries it does not make a full impression on us. We sometimes think of the cause as being important as is the case with North Irish terrorism, but we forget about the innocent who are blown up just because they are in the wrong place at the wrong time. No matter if the cause is Irish, Moslem or anything else, we must do everything possible to control terrorism. In addition this country should not be engaging in terrorism by bombing civilians in countries where we do not like the leaders.

K.B.

TIGHTEN ENTRY

Our methods of allowing people into this country has to be tightened severely. The fact is that our loose system is easier on the fakes who find their way here for some ulterior motive than for those who are seeking entrance to find a better life. And by being so easily fooled we are narrowing the number of legitimate people who can get in by filling the country with people who are going to harm us.

F.D.

BELIEVE IN DEMOCRACY

Yes. We should keep the Arab Moslem fundamentalists out of here. Their idea of justice is to wreak havoc on our cities. We want people here who believe in democracy.

N.D.

MUCH TOO LIBERAL

Needless to say, in my opinion the question really answers itself. Anyone publicly stating his or her intention is to harm the U.S. should have his or her head examined, expressing at the same time the intention to enter our country with this clearly in mind. Needless to say, this applies equally to any terrorists already residing in our country. I will never understand how those involved in the Twin Tower affair were not apprehended earlier. They were apparently well known as dangerous immigrants but with no evident or timely effort on our part to apprehend them prior to any damage on their part. Perhaps one might say that we would be going too far in punishing the entire country by teaching such a lesson to a few miscreants but it has already been very clear as to the amount of irrevocable damage which can be done by such individuals. In my opinion, we are much too liberal in not establishing adequate controls to offset the possibility of such threats to our proud nation.

P.G.S.

The Fifth Of July

By Domenick J. Freda

The Fourth of July always leaves me somewhat drained; after six or seven hours of watching things blow up, everything else seems anti-climatic. One can imagine what it's like to wake up the day after, feeling emaciated, hoarse and burnt, like the charred remains of a once brilliant firework. Rainy fifths of July have more appeal to me than the hot, muggy, sunny ones, not for any symbolic cleansing of the sky, rather because they cool temperatures and make me feel as if somebody else feels let down as well.

I remember the excitement, when I hadn't seen many years or many things incinerated, of the simple stuff that private combustible celebrations consisted of: bottle rockets, whistlers, sparklers, poppers and snappers. I'm sure the Grucci family didn't fret of losing any business to a bunch of kids riding around the school yards with a handful of rockets and dad's lighter, but I would not be surprised if their dynasty did not have a similar beginning. The big kid on the block, always out to impress somebody, would bring a few of the bigger, more colorful rockets, the kind that explode in three colors, and would expertly set them in the ground under the amazed glances of a bunch of eleven-year-olds. We'd bunch in as tight as possible to watch him light the fuse and get a better feel of the excitement and the danger, trying to feel older and braver, as if our proximity meant we were allowed to play with the more dangerous fireworks. A little crackle and sparkle and the big kid spun on his heels and ran, prompting us to scatter, nervously giggling and shouting. The jet airplane "woosh" of the rocket signaled the fleeing to turn around, just in time to notice the rocket's final ascending moments before it burst into an amazing floral design in the early morning sky.

The big kid would then start acting "grown-up" and analytically state that it was not dark enough to see anything and that he had to save the rest of his projectiles for the forthcoming evening. I would rush to get a glimpse of the dull-colored paper-mache wrapper of the remaining rockets before the older kid left, scanning the foreign letters and symbols for the words "Big Bomb" or "Red Rocket" so that I could remember them to impress my friends with my pyrotechnic expertise that night. The big kid rode off on his ten-speed bicycle and we kids would launch a few more bottle rockets, imagining that the tiny bursts were actually grandiose multi-colored spectacles even better than what we had just seen. When we ran out of rockets or just got too hot and tired of standing in the summer sun, we'd walk back to our bikes, past even smaller kids with sparklers in hand, who had watched us with awe and now stood dumbfounded. Kicking the burnt out firecracker tanks and helicopters from last night's early celebration, we'd run through the school yard and sprint race back to our milk-crate-tied-on-for-newspaper-route bikes to see who could get home first.

The Fourth of July and the backyard barbecue have become synonymous in American culture; for me, the Fourth of July meant a barbecue with my relatives - especially older cousins and uncles who loved to set off the fireworks. Of course this also meant over-protective parents who never let me watch my cousins light the most dangerous, loud and exciting firecrackers across the street from my aunt's house. (Counting five fingers on each hand, I don't mind not remembering how an M-80 firecracker looks while exploding at close range.) Beyond all the glitter of small bombs bursting in air, my cousins and their friends had all the "Big Bombs" and rockets of all shapes and sizes, the togetherness of family and the celebration of the nation that allowed my family to be happy and prosperous shone brighter than any rocket I ever remembered. We celebrate as a nation with a special day, we celebrate as a municipality with a parade, but only when we were able to celebrate as a family did I realize the significance of this day to contemporary patriots: the freedom from poverty, from oppression, from fear, all make the birth of this country worth lighting all these firecrackers. The ability to share such an occasion ensures that there will always be families having cookouts commemorating their American citizenship.

To most people, the fifth of July usually means using up fireworks that no one remembered to light or cleaning up the backyard or the street where happy faces lit with the brilliance of the sky left paper plates smeared with barbecue sauce. Years ago, when there was no barbecue and I was too young to have friends with bottle rockets, I would walk the streets and the school yards trying to find some unlit shell amongst the debris. I never found anything except the connection between the streaks in the heavens and what took off from the ground, almost the same feeling as being backstage after a Broadway show.

Now I'm the big kid, although I still don't have any rockets, but I can light my friends rockets without fear of blowing up (the knowledge, yes; the fear, no). The adults like to fire off mortar shells, the big, flowering fireworks, and I still try to get a glimpse of the wrapping. Fortunately, no one has to tell me to take cover when these things go off, I have seen what happens when something goes wrong.

The only problem with growing older with the Fourth is that the family barbecues stop eventually because the cousins grow up, the uncles grow tired, and some grow so old that they have passed on. Most of my bottle rocket friends have moved away or gone to work, although I do sometimes hear them firing bottle rockets from their cars as they race down my block.

I guess I do not appreciate the fifth because I think about what might have been, not the memories that made the day special in my past. Perhaps one day I will light my young son's sparkler and hopefully he will understand what the whole tradition means to Americans and families.

Celebrating corn and its byproducts

By Carol Cutler

With spring asparagus and peas on the wane and snap beans in the stores, thoughts begin turning to local tomatoes and corn. The seasonal calendar still holds true for most fruits and vegetables, but now there is one big exception, and a most pleasurable one: corn.

No longer does the whole country have to wait until July and August to sink eager teeth into the milky kernels. There has been a revolution in the breeding of corn, and now "supersweet" corn is yours to enjoy for many extra months of the year.

This good news comes from a great expert, Betty Fussell, author of "The Story of Corn" (Knopf). The subtitle of the book is "The Myths and History, the Culture and Agriculture, the Art and Science of America's Quintessential Crop."

The years of research that went into the broad sweep conveyed by that subtitle were warmly rewarded when "The Story of Corn" received the Jane Grigson Award for Scholarship at the recent honor ceremony of the International Association of Culinary Professionals in New Orleans. This was the first time such an award was made as a tribute to the late Grigson, the influential and astute English food writer.

Fussell cautions that supersweet corn should not be treated as ordinary corn. These stalks have been bred for sweetness; some contain as much as 25 percent sugar. The expert believes that supersweet is best eaten raw, like an apple.

If you must cook it, no more than 30 seconds in the boiling water, please. She wants you to warm it up just enough to melt the butter. The old three-minute cooking rule was devised 20 years ago when corn was an ear of a whole different breed. It would be like comparing a word processor to a manual typewriter.

In addition to being extra sweet, the geneticists have also bred the corn to convert its sugar into starch at a much slower rate. This explains why Florida corn can travel north and taste as sweet in Michigan as it does in Miami. You also have your choice of color — yellow, white or a colorful combination of the two.

So come July and August, what will the local product give you that Florida can't? The answer is a creamier texture, but the flavor will be about the same. Fussell states that there is no single best corn. As with anything produced by nature, it's a matter of a combination of factors: soil, care, water and, of course, genetics.

What is fascinating about "The Story of Corn" is that it makes you stop and think about aspects of our daily lives that we have long taken for granted.

READER RATINGS

Q. We are not wine drinkers. If we're giving a party, what kind of wines should we stock in order to take care of our wine-drinking friends' pleasure - from cocktail hour through dinner?

W.L. A. For the cocktail hour you might have on hand dry or sweet sherry, or dry or sweet vermouth, or any of the popular "aperitifs." Many choose a glass of dry white wine at the cocktail hour (either chilled or "on the rocks"). For the first course, or to drink with any fish, salad, chicken, veal or fruit, a chilled white wine is nice (such as Chablis, Soave, Riesling, Chenin Blanc, Pinot Chardonnay).

For the meat or game course (for the salad with cheese), serve a Burgundy, Bordeaux, Chianti, Cabernet Sauvignon or Zinfandel at a cool room temperature (from 60 to 70 degrees).

Rose wines should be chilled like white wines. A rose is best served with a light dish and is more popular in hot weather than in cold.

Beautiful blueberries.

Enjoy blueberries any time of the year.

1. Purchase fresh blueberries in July and August. Canned and frozen blueberries are available year-round.
2. Store fresh blueberries in the refrigerator for up to two weeks; wash just before serving.
3. To freeze fresh berries, dry them thoroughly, repack in cardboard container and wrap tightly with plastic wrap covering any air holes. Frozen berries will keep at least a year, do not defrost before use in baked goods.

KITCHEN KIDS

Grilling on the barbecue is one of the simple pleasures of summer. The cooking method is one where children can be involved, even though they aren't the ones actually doing the grilling. It does require an adult assistant, but the preparation can be completely done by your child.

Your children's age and dexterity determines how much help they need in preparing these dinners. Starting about the age of 9, they can handle many of the steps in the recipes alone. It is the preparation and marination that gives the recipes distinctive tastes, thus allowing your children to set the tone of dinner.

The Chicken Sticks are a delicious combination of chicken, mild sausage and vegetables. The ingredients are cut, then skewered by your kids and left to marinate and absorb the flavors. Served with corn, rice or a simple salad, this is a refreshing change from a standard barbecued chicken.

CHICKEN STICKS

- 4 whole chicken breasts, boneless and skinless
- 1 pound medium Italian sausage
- 2 medium zucchini
- 1 large red bell pepper
- 12 large mushrooms
- Marinade:
 - ¼ cup white grape juice
 - ½ cup lemon juice
 - ¼ cup olive oil
 - 10 sprigs of mint
 - 2 green onions
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- Yields 4 servings.
- Preparation time: 30 minutes.
- Marinating time: 2 hours.
- Grilling time: 15 minutes.
- Utensils: pie pan, 8 bamboo skewers, mixing bowl, cutting board, knife, measuring cups and spoons, mixing spoon, glass baking pan.

Fill pie pan with 1 inch of water and soak skewers while preparing chicken, sausage and vegetables.

Cut each chicken breast into 2-inch pieces and set them aside. Wash and dry cutting board. Cut sausage into 1-inch pieces, set aside. Secure zucchini on board and trim off stem. Cut zucchini into ¼-inch slices and set aside. Cut second zucchini in same manner.

Secure pepper on board and cut in half through stem. Scrape out seeds and pull off stem. Lay pepper halves, shiny side down, on cutting board and cut into strips at least 1¼ inches wide. Cut 1¼ inches down each strip, making a square. Set pepper squares aside.

Pull stems off mushrooms and set them aside.

Skewer chicken, sausage and vegetables alternately onto bamboo sticks. Set aside while preparing marinade.

Combine grape juice, lemon juice and olive oil in mixing bowl. Pull mint leaves off stems and put them on cutting board. Chop into small pieces and add to bowl. Trim root end off green onions. Cut them into thin slices and add to bowl. Whisk in salt and pepper, then pour marinade into the glass baking pan. Add skewers to marinade, turning them several times to coat. Refrigerate for 2 hours.

Thirty minutes before dinner, have an adult prepare coals. When ready, place skewers on grill and cook for 7 minutes before turning. Continue cooking for another 7 minutes. Remove and serve hot.

WINE TALK

By Richard Nalley

Crisp summer whites and some gorgeous ones priced between $10 and $15. The following are some wines to look for.

The top Sauvignon/Fume Blancs previously reviewed:

($7 and under) Estancia 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Geyser Peak 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Columbia Crest 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Robert Mondavi Woodbridge 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Mirassou 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Montevina 1991 Fume Blanc; Calterra 1992 Sauvignon Blanc (Chile).

($8-$11) Barnard-Griffin 1991 Fume Blanc (Washington); Byron 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; Buena Vista 1991 Sauvignon Blanc, Lake County; Ferrari-Carano 1991 Fume Blanc; De Loach 1991 Sauvignon Blanc; De Loach 1991 Fume Blanc; Chateau Ste. Michelle 1991 Sauvignon Blanc (Washington); Fetzer 1991 Sauvignon Blanc "Barrel Select"; Preston 1991 "Cuvee de Fume"; Barton & Guestier (B&G) 1991 "1725" (white) (France); Fortant de France 1991 Sauvignon Blanc (France); Errazuriz 1991 Sauvignon Blanc Reserva (Chile).

(Over $12) Long Vineyards 1990 Sauvignon Blanc; Robert Mondavi 1991 Fume Blanc Reserve; Dry Creek Vineyard's 1990 Fume Blanc Reserve; Merryvale 1990 Meritage; Murphy-Goode 1991 Reserve Fume Blanc.

Sauvignon/Fume Blancs reviewed this week (all wines $10 or under unless specified):

At the top of the vintage class of 1991 are the Caymus 1991 Sauvignon Blanc, Napa Valley, at about $11.50, and the Dry Creek Vineyards 1991 Fume Blanc, Sonoma County, at about $9. Both are subtle, harmonious wines in which the winemaker has achieved a not-so-simple goal: flavorful, nuanced Sauvignon Blanc in which no one flavor or quality sticks out. The Caymus is a medium-bodied, aromatic blending of fruit and wood. The Dry Creek Vineyards is more fleshed out and juicy, but also subtle, with fine menthol and herb notes and a touch of creaminess.

It's the season when vegetables and herbs go into everything, from soups (like gazpacho) to pastas (like pesto) to salads (like tuna fish and chicken) to meatloaf sandwiches. Honest. Try meatloaf, mustard and fresh cucumber on a seeded roll. You can thank me later. And for a wine selection?

The wine I most often reach for with these lighter, herb-y summer dishes is Sauvignon Blanc or Fume Blanc (essentially two names for the same thing), wine that tastes a bit like summer itself. Sauvignon Blanc leaves the refrigerator cold, crisp and with an herbal element of its own that at times can come across as menthollike. Along with drier-style European Rieslings, a well-made Sauvignon Blanc just may be the most versatile white wine for food you can find.

Often blended with Semillon or another fruity grape, Sauvignon Blanc can develop a round, fairly full feel in the mouth without sacrificing that clean, palate-refreshing finish. When treated like a Chardonnay, with oak-barrel fermentations and aging, Sauvignon Blanc can take on various attributes of creaminess and woodiness as well. This is anathema to Sauvignon Blanc purists but delicious to drinkers who cut their teeth on Chardonnay.

Perhaps best of all, you don't have to pay Chardonnay money for a quality Sauvignon Blanc or Fume Blanc, especially an American one. There are many lovely wines in the $10 and under bracket,

"Let food be thy medicine" — Hippocrates, 431 B.C.

If you believe a glut of books flooding the market, then you'll come to think that: Pasta reduces stress; cool sherbet helps a sore throat; cabbage helps treat ulcers; cranberries speed up wound healing; legumes can reduce the risk of cancer; peanuts can provide a great pick-me-up; and a sweet fruit can satisfy a sugar craving.

So say books like "Superfoods," "Cold Spaghetti at Midnight," and "Foods That Heal," just to name a few.

But before you rush to find out what can cure your aches and pains, be skeptical of "magic" foods, says Sandra Eardley, registered dietitian and assistant professor at Southern Illinois University School of Medicine.

"You've got to take all this with a grain of salt," says Eardley. "No food is a magic bullet. Even milk, as wonderful as it is, isn't something you can live alone on because it's low in iron."

"When you're judging nutrition information, you want to look for information supported by research studies."

A second concern, says Eardley, is that "you can't tell a food where to go — that you're eating carrots to help your eyes."

These books work for people because they associate life experiences with food, says Eardley.

"When you have a cold, you end up eating what Mom used to feed you — no matter what the doctor says," she says.

There is research behind the premise that vitamin A helps fight cancer, but it doesn't mean it's a cure, she adds.

"Variety is still the key."

Most Americans want to believe in natural remedies and "superfoods," says a recent Natural Remedies survey of 200 adults by author and researcher of medicinal plants Stephen Fulder.

The telephone survey, conducted by Fulder, author of "Garlic: The Life Blood of Good Health" and "Garlic: Nature's Original Remedy," found 70 percent of respondents believe lemon and honey are an effective remedy for a sore throat. Meanwhile, 32 percent believe garlic may affect cholesterol, and 29 percent believe chamomile tea is an effective remedy for an upset stomach.

Delores Riccio, author of "Superfoods," says her book isn't intended to substitute for good medical care.

"This is simply to keep you healthy, give you lots of energy and help from aging too fast. I come as a writer, not a nutritionist or as a trained chef."

Therein lies the problem, says Eardley: "She's a journalist, not a nutritionist."

The premise of books like Riccio's is that you really are what you eat — that good food builds, repairs and fuels bodies and minds.

When food consumption is controlled, health, energy and moods are controlled.

"There are so many really super foods that prevent or heal illness, lift fatigue, alter mood and enhance alertness and memory, that once you fit them all into your menus, there won't be much room left on your plate for foods that are better left off it anyway," says Riccio.

The latter include a broccoli dish loaded with a heavy cream sauce or a cake in which sugar outweighs flour.

Riccio suggests keeping on hand old-fashioned oatmeal, brown and white rice, garlic, onions, shallots, olive oil, a variety of nuts and root vegetables, Parmesan cheese, tins of imported Italian whole plum tomatoes and fresh, frozen, canned and dried fruits.

She acknowledges that other foods, like zucchini, which didn't make her list of 35 "superfoods," have value.

"But 'superfoods' have multiple advantages," says Riccio.

Among her top 35: apples, bananas, barley, berries, broccoli, cabbage, cantaloupe, carrots, cauliflower, figs, fish, garlic, grapes, greens, legumes, mushrooms, nuts, olive oil, pasta, pineapple, potatoes, rice, tomatoes, turnips, wheat and yogurt.

"These are great foods to be eaten daily as much as possible," says Riccio, who researched the subject for years before she wrote the cookbook, her eighth.

"My mother was into this long before it was fashionable," says Riccio. "She came from a Mediterranean tradition that food, especially good food, is very important."

One of Riccio's favorite foods is pasta. When eaten without protein, Riccio says, it can be a drugless tranquilizer that relieves tension almost as fast as a couple of aspirin relieve a headache. Under stressful conditions, the brain uses up chemicals that stabilize the state of mind.

"With any carbohydrate, such as pasta, the brain begins manufacturing more serotonin, which promotes a calm, cheerful mood that puts one's problems into perspective. If proteins are consumed at the same time, amino acids slow down the process."

When you're feeling at wit's end, try a comforting bowl of vegetable soup thickened with lots of macaroni, and then relax, she recommends.

Maggie Waldron, author of "Cold Spaghetti at Midnight," says for a fever, drink plenty of liquids and take frequent baths and showers to wash toxins from the skin. For motion sickness, chew slices of ginger.

For indigestion, indulge in the friendly bacteria in cultured yogurt and kefir. For a cold sore, eat alkaline foods — lots of salads and steamed vegetables.

For acne, Waldron is convinced that cutting out sugar, which surfaces on the skin and invites bacteria to "come and feast," is the answer.

Waldron is best known for her promotion of potatoes, kiwi, beef and California raisins.

"It all started when I had a congenital bone problem as a kid. I broke a lot of bones. And the only thing my mom could do was fix the right food."

"It started my beliefs that food is the best medicine."

Her book takes a light-hearted, folk-medicine approach, offering cold spaghetti at midnight as a way to comfort, revive and even heal.

She'd feed a cold a Mexican pot pie in a cornmeal crust, use Jim Beard's Black Bananas to treat an upset stomach, or those same bananas covered with rum for a cold.

"The most important thing, really, is variety," says Waldron. "Some people eat the same 15 foods every week. That doesn't provide optimum nutrition. That doesn't work."

So what does?

Each claim must be analyzed, says Bob Reber, University of Illinois nutrition specialist. "It's very difficult for consumers."

"There's a little truth in all of it," says Reber. "Certain groups of vegetables, such as the broccoli family, do show reduced cancer risks. Years ago, the craze was vitamin C and colds."

"Consumers shouldn't place all their faith in something like that. Some people started taking vitamin C, yet still smoked. You have to look at all this in terms of your total lifestyle."

"It all goes back to variety and moderation. If people are out looking for easy answers, there are none."

"There's no quick and easy way to reduce your cancer risk by 50 percent."

Following are a few recipes that might comfort what ails you.

GREEK-STYLE SHRIMP WITH SHELLS

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1 large clove garlic, minced
- 4 large fresh ripe tomatoes, peeled and chopped (not seeded) OR 1 (1-pound) can imported Italian tomatoes, chunked, with juice

- 1/4 teaspoon (or more) dried red-pepper flakes
- Salt and black pepper to taste
- 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 2 tablespoons minced fresh flat-leaved parsley
- 1/4 pound cooked, shelled large shrimp OR cooked, cubed swordfish
- 1/4 pound medium shell macaroni, cooked according to package directions
- 1/4 cup loosely packed crumbled feta cheese

Yields 4 servings.

Heat oil in large skillet. Sauté garlic but don't brown it.

Add tomatoes, olives and seasoning. Simmer uncovered for 10 minutes. Add wine and simmer 10 minutes more.

Add parsley and shrimp, bring back to a simmer and remove from heat.

Spoon hot, cooked macaroni into serving dish.

Stir in feta cheese; ladle sauce over top.

From "Superfoods" by Delores Riccio.

BROCCOLI AND ZITA CASSEROLE

- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 1/2 pounds fresh broccoli, cooked
- 2 cups Italian tomato sauce
- 1/2 pound ziti, cooked according to package directions
- 1/4 cup Parmesan cheese
- 1 pound low-fat ricotta cheese
- 1/4 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons toasted wheat germ

Yields 6 servings.

Preheat oven to 350 F.

Heat olive oil in skillet; sauté garlic until softened but not brown. Stir broccoli into garlic oil and set it aside.

In large oblong casserole, layer half the tomato sauce, half the ziti, half the Parmesan cheese, all broccoli, all ricotta, remaining ziti, remaining sauce, bread crumbs, wheat germ and remaining Parmesan.

Cover and bake for 35 minutes in preheated 350 F oven (10 minutes longer if dish has been refrigerated before cooking). Uncover during last 15 minutes of cooking. Sauce should be bubbly and top lightly browned.

From "Superfoods" by Delores Riccio.

SWEET POTATO MUFFINS

- 2 cups sifted unbleached all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs OR 1/4 cup prepared egg substitute
- 1 medium sweet potato, baked and peeled (about 1 cup mashed)
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons toasted wheat germ
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 cup raisins

Yields 12 muffins.

Preheat oven to 400 F. Line 12-cup muffin pan with paper liners. Sift flour, baking powder and salt into large bowl.

In food processor, blend eggs, potato and sugar. (Or by hand, beat eggs and mash potato before blending with sugar.) Add milk, oil, wheat germ and spices; process or beat until smooth.

Four liquid mixture into dry ingredients. Mix just enough to blend. Stir in raisins. Divide batter among muffin cups; fill about 3/4 full. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes.

Summertime means fresh produce

It's summer, and that means fresh produce in abundance: time to revel in fruits like peaches, nectarines, apricots, melons, strawberries, grapes and cherries. Many vegetables are at the peak of their yearly supply now, too, like summer squash, snap beans, bell peppers, okra, corn, lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers.

Locally grown produce — sold in smaller markets or at roadside stands — is often more flavorful than that grown by large-scale commercial farms. Also, locally grown fruits and vegetables are less subject to chemical treatment. Produce grown for a local market won't be shipped to faraway places, so there's less need for anti-spoilage chemicals. Nevertheless, wash all vegetables and fruits thoroughly in clean water before using.

Frozen veggies are generally about as high in nutrients as many fresh ones, because they're flash-frozen just after harvesting, thus preserving their freshness and quality.

But sometimes freezing can result in loss of texture — so nothing beats fresh for good eating.

Be careful to use fresh produce quickly after purchase for best nutrition. Some vegetables lose flavor, quality and nutrients just days (or even hours) after picking, so shop frequently and use produce as soon as possible.

Microwaving, too, keeps vitamins and nutrients intact. Long boiling leaches out nutrients from vegetables, particularly water-soluble ones like vitamin C. So it's best to cook vegetables quickly, with little or no added water. Many vegetables can be steamed to perfection in a microwave oven, using only the water that clings to them from washing — so you don't drain away vitamins and minerals.

It's easy to microwave whole corn on the cob and whole artichokes. For corn, remove husk and silk, rinse, and wrap in plastic. For artichokes, trim off stem flush with bottom, and use scissors to snip off sharp tips from leaves. Rinse, then wrap in plastic. Microwave three to four minutes per ear of corn, four to seven minutes per artichoke.

Couldn't be easier.

Pattypan and zucchini are my favorite varieties of summer squash. Microwave whole or chop into bite-size pieces (be sure to cut uniformly to ensure even cooking). Like tomatoes, zucchini is so easy to grow that you may find yourself with a surplus. If so, try today's Summer Zucchini Medley.

Use summer tomatoes fresh in salads or sliced on burgers or sandwiches. Or microwave peeled, chopped tomatoes into a pasta sauce or a savory salsa to serve with chips or tacos.

Fresh tomatoes combine with other summer vegetables (cucumbers and bell peppers) to make the delightful Spanish garden soup, Gazpacho. Chill thoroughly, garnish as desired, and serve with cheese, a loaf of crusty bread and a dry white wine.

Make the most of summer this year by taking advantage of fresh produce. Nutritionists keep reminding us that Americans need to eat more vegetables and fruits, and when these are fresh and delicious, that's no chore. (They're naturally low in calories, too.)

GARDEN FRESH GAZPACHO

- 1/4 cup chopped red sweet onion
- 1/2 cup chopped green bell pepper
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 cup fresh cucumber, peeled and chopped
- 6 cups peeled, chopped fresh tomatoes OR 1 (48-ounce) can chopped tomatoes
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- 2 cups tomato juice
- Juice of one lime
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- Dash EACH ground cumin, chili powder and oregano (to taste)
- Ice cubes, chopped tomato, cucumber, red onion, fresh parsley or cilantro, sliced black olives, grated Parmesan cheese or crumbled feta cheese and toasted croutons for garnish.

Yields 6 to 8 servings.
Preparation time: 20 to 25 minutes (plus chilling time).
Cooking time: 3 to 4 minutes.
Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Combine onion, green pepper and garlic in 2-cup microwave-safe measure. Cover with plastic wrap and microwave 3 to 4 minutes, or until vegetables are soft. Turn vegetables into blender container. Add cucumber, tomatoes, olive oil and vinegar. Cover and blend until smooth (process in batches, as necessary).

Pour into large bowl. Stir in tomato juice, lime juice, and seasonings. Cover and chill until ready to serve (2 to 3 hours). To serve, ladle into individual serving bowls and float an ice cube or two in each. Pass garnishes at table.

MICRO-TIP OF WEEK

To peel tomatoes, microwave a deep microwave-safe bowl of water at HIGH (100 percent power) setting until boiling. Drop in tomatoes, one at a time, for a few seconds. Then peel off skin in strips, using a small, sharp paring knife.

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

Dr. Abraham: I guess I'm one of those people who sometimes carry a grudge against others when their feelings are hurt. It doesn't happen often to me because I usually let their words roll right off.

My mom helped me when she told me something that went like this: "Sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never hurt me."

The main hurts I get come from other kids who say things related to the color of my skin. I won't repeat them here because they are so mean and nasty.

What do you think I should do about my feelings? I'd appreciate whatever you tell me. — Waiting

Waiting: To be able to forgive someone for insensitive comments is a goal you might want to have in mind. "To err is human, to forgive divine" is a frequently quoted line from the famous 18th century writer, Alexander Pope.

However, when prejudice enters a relationship it may become too difficult to cope with or to ignore. A quiet response suggesting how inappropriate the remark is may be useful, depending on the closeness of your relationship.

If the depth of your feelings and inadequate responses of others lead to unpleasant confrontations, or show a tendency in that direction, it may be time to seek more compatible comrades.

If any of you teen readers have had unfortunate experiences related to prejudice, please tell me how you handled them so I can share them with other teens.

Incidentally, I've tried to trace your mother's "sticks and stones" quotation to its source, using a book that is often useful ("Roget's International Thesaurus"), but couldn't find out where it came from. Are any of you willing to do a little detective work through a library and a skilled librarian or a school English teacher? It could be an enjoyable challenge for you.

Dr. Abraham: I always thought that girls were a lot cleaner about themselves than boys, but it's not true in my family. I'm 18 years old, and my sister is 16.

She is clean in a lot of ways, but not about her mouth. It's the cleanliness (or lack of it) that relates to her teeth.

She has used the same toothbrush morning and night for at least a few years and refuses to get a new one. I gave her one as a birthday present and she threw it at me. And her breath is bad, too. A guy would never kiss her more than once, that's for sure.

Are the toothbrush and bad breath related? I sure wish she'd listen to me. — Big Brother

Big Brother: Have your parents said anything about this matter to her? If not, they probably ought to be brought into the picture. Have you mentioned the kissing issue to your sister? Perhaps you should.

In the September, 1992 issue of DentalNotes published by the Academy of General Dentistry it is suggested that toothbrushes be changed every two months. If you write to them at 211 E. Chicago Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611-2670 (and enclose a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope) you can ask them for a copy of that issue. It also includes suggestions on toothbrush selection and usage.

Bad breath, by the way, may be due to other problems. You might — very carefully — suggest that she visit a dentist or physician about this matter.

Dr. Abraham: My girlfriend is so smart and fast at everything, but she does one thing that drives me nuts. I guess it's because she thinks faster than her fingers can write. The result is that I can't read her writing. It is just a scribble, maybe like a child would make. When I tell her that it is such a mess she cries and says she can't help it.

"That's the way I write. That's the way I always did," she says.

When I ask her whether others can read her writing, she says, No. Others write for her on her school assignments when she tells them what to write.

Isn't that a pistol? A grown girl who can't write. Gimme a break, willya?

And yet I really like her. She's a doll, and good to me in every way except when she writes. — Impatient Impatient: If you really like her enough, you might consider these three possibilities: Encourage her to get a tutor who will concentrate on this problem (perhaps a teacher, a bright student who can write legibly or if there is a psychological or coordination problem, a competent professional in those areas); suggest she learn how to type; try to become more patient with her and back off from what may have become nagging on your part.

If your relationship isn't strong enough to handle this situation, you may have to seek other female companionship. I hope not, though.

Dr. Abraham: My boyfriend is real cautious about how he drives, locks door and dresses (balancing colors and stuff like that). That doesn't bother me usually because I'm the kind of person who can misplace or lose keys and dress sort of better-skillet and not give a darn. In fact, I sometimes like how sensible he is because it makes things easier for me.

But if we stay together or even get married some day, will his careful, serious personality become a pain in the neck to me? What do you think? — Tell Me

Tell Me: It may depend on how much you really like each other, how patient you are with each other's characteristics, and how mature you become in your relationship.

It sounds like he is a stable individual whose personality may fit in with yours in a comfortable way.

Sauces add polish to any dish

By Laura Daily

"Sauces are the most important part of the meal and the most difficult to produce if you aren't careful," believes Chef Scott Philip of the Snowmass Lodge & Club in Snowmass Village, Colo.

"Anyone can prepare great vegetables or meat, but the sauce is what really distinguishes a dish," he adds.

Philip advocates setting aside one or two days each month to prepare basic stocks. The finished product can be frozen in any volume, from ice-cube size (just pop one out of the tray instead of using bouillon cubes) to larger quantities for stews or as the basis of a more complex sauce.

His only caveat for stock preparation: "Watch that your meats (chicken, veal or beef) attain a rich, caramelized color but don't burn. A black crust will cause the sauce to taste bitter. Celery leaves, carrot skins and onion skins will also cause bitterness."

Philip likes stocks as the basis for sauces, "because if a stock is reduced enough, you get lots of flavor without having to add seasonings, especially salt."

For pasta, chicken or salmon dishes, Philip recommends cream sauces.

"The basics are very simple and you can create a variety of flavors just by adding different ingredients before the final reduction," he says. "Mushrooms, herbs, Parmesan cheeses all work well. You're only limited by your imagination."

To keep creams from burning, Philip says, don't reduce the sauce too far; instead, rely on adding small amounts of a cornstarch-and-water mixture to obtain the correct consistency.

"Bring the sauce to a boil each time after adding the cornstarch so you can judge the sauce's thickness," cautions Philip. "If you just keep adding cornstarch and then bring the sauce to a boil, you'll end up with glue."

Beurre blancs are considered one of the most difficult sauces to make, requiring both concentration and luck. But the results are worth the effort and can make any fish dish really special.

Cream sauces and beurre blancs are best prepared just before serving. If you must refrigerate, Philip reminds cooks that cream-style sauces will only take one reheating, and that should be done with great care to avoid breaking the sauce.

ROSEMARY CREAM

- 2 teaspoons chopped shallots
- 2 teaspoons chopped garlic
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 cup white wine
- 3 cups heavy cream
- 2 tablespoons chopped rosemary
- 3 tablespoons chopped reconstituted sun-dried tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with a little water

Salt and pepper to taste

Saute shallots and garlic with olive oil in saucepan. Do not brown. Deglaze with white wine and reduce to half. Add cream and bring to a boil. Reduce to simmer for about 5 minutes.

Add rosemary and sun-dried tomatoes. Continue to reduce. Whip in cornstarch and water mixture. Simmer for 3 to 4 minutes longer. Season to taste if needed.

TOMATO BEURRE BLANC

- 2 tablespoons chopped shallots
- 1 teaspoon chopped garlic
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- ½ cup white wine
- ½ cup orange juice
- 2 lemons, blanched zest and juice

- ¼ cup chopped reconstituted sun-dried tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon chopped basil
- ½ pound whole unsalted butter, cut into small pieces

Salt and pepper to taste

Saute shallots and garlic with olive oil in saucepan. Do not brown. Deglaze with white wine and orange juice. Reduce two-thirds. Add lemon juice and blanched zest. Add sun-dried tomatoes and basil. Then, slowly whip in whole butter, being careful not to break sauce. You also can place reduction into blender and slowly add butter. Strain sauce and season to taste if needed.

HUNTER SAUCE

- 1 tablespoon chopped shallots

- 2 tablespoons chopped garlic
- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 2 ounces shiitake mushrooms, sliced
- 2 cups veal demi-glace
- 2 roasted shallots, rough chopped
- 2 Roma tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
- ¼ teaspoon chopped rosemary
- ¼ teaspoon chopped thyme
- ¼ teaspoon chopped oregano
- Salt and pepper to taste

Saute shallots and garlic with olive oil in saucepan. Add mushrooms and continue to saute. Add veal demi-glace. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer. Add roasted shallots, tomatoes and herbs. Cook for 5 minutes. Season to taste if needed. This sauce works especially well on game or beef.

BROWN CHICKEN STOCK SAUCE

- 2 pounds chicken (meat and bones)
- 3 shallots, peeled
- 4 garlic cloves, peeled
- 1 gallon chicken stock
- 2-3 thyme stems
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 tablespoon black peppercorns

Heat roasting pan. Add small amount of oil and chicken. Place in oven at 400 F and brown bones, stirring about every 10 minutes. Add shallots and garlic when bones begin to brown. Continue cooking until bones and shallots and garlic are browned but not burned. Strain off fat from pan and deglaze with some of the chicken stock.

Add ingredients from roasting pan to stock pot. Add rest of stock, thyme stems, bay leaf and peppercorns. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer. Continue to cook stock until it is reduced by a third. Strain stock. Leftover stock may be frozen.

Hearty in flavor but low in fat, this stock sauce really adds pizzazz to simple grilled chicken.

DISCOVERY

Aspirin, an oldie and a goodie

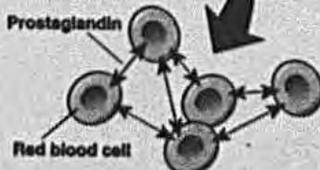

Though introduced in 1899, aspirin remains a useful and surprising drug. A white crystalline compound of acetylsalicylic acid, it is commonly used in tablet form to reduce pain or fever.

Aspirin reduces the production of certain prostaglandins. They are sometimes responsible for inflammation, pain, fever and the stickiness of red blood cells.

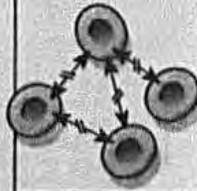

Aspirin molecule (Acetylsalicylate)

1 If there is a tear in a blood vessel, the prostaglandins direct the blood cells to clot together to stop the leak.

2 Since some heart attacks are caused by blood clots, aspirin helps relieve the clot. If taken regularly, aspirin may help prevent heart attacks.

Remember...

- Never give aspirin to children under 12. Reye's syndrome may develop. Give acetaminophen or ibuprofen instead.
- Aspirin, taken for long periods, may cause gastric disruptions.

Garden Talk

By C.Z. Guest

Weeds are every gardener's nemesis. No matter what you do, there always seems to be one lurking beneath the ground, ready to rear its ugly head between your carefully cultivated plants and flowers.

Weeds thrive where there is ample sunlight and room to grow. Among dense vegetation, like a healthy, well-maintained lawn, for example, weeds have a hard time establishing roots.

However, in flower beds and other more open planting places, weeds set up housekeeping, making them difficult to eliminate.

In the dark ages of lawn and garden care, people simply waited for weeds to appear, then got down on their hands and knees and pulled them out. Then they discovered that weeds couldn't grow beneath light-blocking plastic garbage bags.

However, plastic blocked everything — weeds, air, water — and led to soured soil that damaged plant roots. Now, thanks to a little scientific engineering, gardeners can beat weeds with the use of a landscape cover such as WeedBlock by Easy Gardener.

A strong synthetic fabric with thousands of "microfunnels" molded into it, WeedBlock permits the necessary air and water to penetrate the fabric while simultaneously blocking the sunlight that encourages weeds.

Besides deterring weeds, landscape fabrics also significantly reduce the amount of water lost to evaporation. With drought becoming an increasing problem in many parts of the country, these fabrics are being used for more than purely-aesthetic purposes — they also conserve water.

APPLYING LANDSCAPE FABRIC

Flexible and able to contour to any surfaces, landscape fabrics are easy to use and give your property a professionally landscaped look.

To prepare your beds, then, simply lay down overlapping strips of the fabric over the bed and secure with fabric pegs. Cut out holes or Xs with scissors or a knife where you wish your plants to grow. Then place plants directly through, into the soil.

Landscape fabric also can be used around existing trees, shrubs or perennial flower beds. To begin, clear away all surrounding weeds or grass, then place strips of fabric over the entire area, making sure it is as close to the plant as possible.

Trim away any excess. Then cover the fabric with an attractive layer of gravel, pebbles or wood nuggets.

For vegetable gardens, where cool soil is an asset, there also is White WeedBlock. Black on the soil side and white on top, these products have two functions: The white side reflects sunlight, warding off harmful insects that prey on the dark undersides of vegetation plants, while the dark side filters sunlight and blocks weed growth.

GARDEN TIPS

Be a weed whacker

- Use a synthetic landscape cover.
- Lay down overlapping strips of cover and secure with pegs.
- Cut holes where plants will grow.
- Cover fabric with a layer of gravel, pebbles or wood chips.

Our Children

By Willard Abraham

Parents fight chore war with kids

Q. Do you think it is unreasonable to ask a 12-year-old girl and her 14-year-old brother to help with household chores? Both of them are delightful children in other ways, but when it comes to helping around the house they cheerfully agree to do it but promptly forget all about it.

A. Any suggestions you can provide will be appreciated very much.

A. This is a bad news/good news story and a pretty common one. The bad news (about which you really can't do anything) is that this issue should have been started a long time ago. A friend of mine once said that "should have" is the most useless thought in the English language, and you might agree with him.

The good news is that it is never too late to start with our kids. A family meeting where all chores are listed and then divided up and scheduled may be a way to begin. There can be trade-offs among the younger and adult family members if mutually agreed upon.

You might want to soft pedal possible penalty factors if the children don't stick to their commitments, but they could be mentioned without stressing them very much. Limits on TV watching, time on the phone or other activities they enjoy might be considered.

Q. As a parent, I want my children to enjoy reading because I do, but mainly because it can provide so many happy hours for them. My problem is that when I go into a bookstore and look through the many shelves filled with children's books, I'm puzzled, overwhelmed and even sort of turned off.

A. Where do I start? What do I look for? How do I know what to select from the huge, overflowing shelves of colorful books? They all look so good, but I just don't know what to choose. Our funds are limited, so I can't select a whole pile of them.

Q. Can you help me out? Our children are 5 and 7 years old.

A. I can easily understand the frustration you feel because many times I've felt the way you do when our own children were younger. However, my task was easier than yours because there weren't as many books to choose from as there now are.

One fortunate element for you is that there are experts to help you out. The best source (and there may be others) are school librarians and children's librarians in public libraries. They generally know children's interests and needs and can use maturity and other information that parents can provide.

Let me tell you about a new book that was beautifully written and illustrated for those in the 2- to 8-year-old range. It is titled "Socrates" (Chronicle Books) written by a clever author named Rascal and with bold, textured oil paintings from Gert Bogaerts. Both live in Belgium, but don't worry, the text is in simple, descriptive, sensitive English. It was created to be read to or with young children.

The story is a sheer delight, introduced by a picture on the cover of a large dog with long ears and soulful eyes circled by huge red-rimmed glasses.

The first page presents the same dog (without glasses) and only four words, "Socrates was an orphan." Then the story speeds up, with page two providing a pace and pattern that will please most young children.

"His parents had been snatched up by the dog-catcher and taken to the pound, leaving Socrates to live alone on the streets. He dreamed of a home other than his cardboard box. And, more than anything else, Socrates dreamed of having a friend."

Sadness, friendship and magic are all rolled together from that point on.

As you know, this is far from the only enjoyable book on those crowded shelves. The search for others might be frustrating but could be pleasant, too, especially if you involve your children in it.

Many recent books will attract your children and you, too, but try not to avoid those that have been appealing for youngsters for generations. A combination of carefully chosen past and present publications may be a wise way to go.

But start with one, and it will lead you to others. Those who work in bookstores generally have a good time sharing books, often whether you buy or not.

Could pollution cause breast cancer?

CHICAGO — Environmental contaminants, and specifically chlorine-based chemical pollutants, may account for rapidly rising breast cancer rates around the world, a recent study by the Greenpeace organization claims.

The study is among the first to link pollution to the growing problem of breast cancer, a disease that kills more than 500,000 women a year worldwide.

In the United States alone, breast cancer rates climbed 32 percent between 1980 and 1987, with the greatest increases occurring among women over 50.

Some environmental advocates charge that the possible tie between chemical pollution and breast cancer is often ignored.

"Breast cancer is one of the primary causes of premature death among women in the developed world, but there is very little mention of the connection between this disease and polluters," said Joan D'Argo, a campaigner for Greenpeace, an international environmental group.

"The weight of evidence suggests that pollution, particularly from processes that use or produce chlorine, is a major factor in breast cancer," she added.

According to the study, chemicals known as organochlorines may be a major factor in causing breast cancer.

Organochlorines include such highly toxic chemicals as DDT, PCBs, dioxin and thousands of lesser-known chemicals, which accumulate over time in the body and have been proven to cause cancer.

Over time, these chemicals may interfere with or alter the body's ability to regulate estrogen, a hormone widely believed to play a role in breast cancer.

Some doctors claim that cancer researchers have long ignored the role of chemical pollutants in causing breast cancer despite decades of costly research.

"The cancer establishment remains fixated on obsolete 'blame-the-victim' theories of breast cancer causation, to the virtual exclusion of avoidable and unknowing exposures to industrial carcinogens," said Dr. Samuel Epstein of the School of Public Health at the University of Illinois Medical Center in Chicago.

Researchers have "trivialized" the threat of chemical pollution and breast cancer, instead choosing to focus on cancer prevention programs that "reflect myopia and questionable science," he said.

However, an official with the National Cancer Institute discounted Epstein's claim and said the findings of the Greenpeace study were at best "suspect."

"There are a lot of problems with the data and the way the figures were obtained. I think he (Epstein) has some other agenda here. At this point, they're making some statements and allegations that are far beyond the data that exists now," the NCI official said.

The Greenpeace study also claims that:

- Women living in U.S. counties with waste sites were 8.5 times more likely to have elevated breast cancer rates than women in counties without a waste site.

- Levels of PCBs and DDT were 50 percent to 60 percent higher in the tissues of U.S. women with breast cancer than in women without breast cancer.

- Women working in petroleum, chemical, pharmaceutical and electrical equipment industries had significantly higher rates of breast cancer than other women.

- A study of 347 female chemists found breast cancer rates 63 percent higher than expected.

While breast cancer can be traced to other risk factors, such as heredity, reproductive factors and diet, those elements account for less than half of all cancer cases, said Joe Thornton, director of toxic research with Greenpeace and the author of the study.

"The majority of breast cancer this remains unexplained, (but) environmental pollution is likely to be a significant contribution," Thornton added.

"Ample evidence points to chlorine-based chemicals as significant contributors to this epidemic," he said.

As a result of study, Greenpeace is proposing that the government order the gradual phasing out of chlorine and chlorine-based chemicals.

However, industry officials say such a move would be extremely costly since chlorine is used in a variety of products including paper, plastics and solvents.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q. Our house, which was once in a quiet neighborhood, is located on a street that has become a main thoroughfare for traffic. The noises caused by passing traffic is awful.

Short of moving, do you know of anything we can do to combat this problem? — S.H.

A. Constructing a barrier between the street and your home is the best method of noise control. Most effective would be a concrete block or brick wall that is at least 6 feet high.

If your home is a two-story building, the barrier would have to be that much higher to help protect the second-floor level. Such a wall can deflect nearly 60 percent of the street sounds.

A wooden fence can reduce noise only by about 5 percent. Landscaping is also very helpful for sound absorption. This requires some long-term patience, however, as the greenery will need time to fill in. Check with your local nursery for recommendations on evergreen trees or shrubs that would be suitable for high hedges.

You also can block noise by sealing up holes with weatherstripping and caulking to assure that windows and doors are sealed tightly so that noise does not leak in through cracks and crevices. Sealing up holes around electrical service entrances, vents and any gaps where sound can sneak in is very helpful.

Install storm windows with heavy glass and good weatherstripping for added protection. Make sure your exterior doors are solid, tight-fitting at the threshold and weatherstripped. A solid door blocks out four times as much noise as a hollow-core door.

For dampers or flaps on bath, kitchen and laundry vents, install an extra elbow or section of bent flexible duct to create an indirect sound path. Add air conditioning, either window-mounted or a central system. This will allow you to keep windows and doors closed during warm weather and shut out the noise.

Another method of mixing noise is to fight sound with sound. You can purchase a little electronic gadget that is designed to generate an agreeable whir to mask persistent noise. However, masking the annoying noise can be a short-term solution if the masking sound becomes just as irritating as the ones you are trying to cover up.

Q. We are in the process of redecorating and have discovered that the existing wallpaper does not strip off the drywall with ease. We have tested several areas and the drywall panel is damaged when we try to remove the paper assisted by steam and a commercial stripping solution.

Do you know of any way we can remove this paper without damaging the wall board underneath? We want to get rid of wallpaper and paint the interior walls. — A.A.

A. Stripping off old wallpaper can tear the protective paper off the drywall panel at the same time, resulting in a surface that cannot be repainted. Excessive moisture from steaming to loosen wallpaper also can damage the drywall.

Another problem occurs if the drywall was not sealed before the wallpaper was hung. In this case, the drywall panel will have absorbed the wallpaper glue, and stripping the wallpaper will not only damage the drywall skin, but in many cases leave a glue residue that will prevent paint adhesion.

If the drywall paper hasn't been damaged during the stripping process, the glue can be scraped off. But you have to be very careful. Any damage to the drywall at this stage will mean that your previous tedious efforts to remove the paper will all be for naught.

Your best bet would probably be to have a drywall contractor cover the old wall with new sheets of ½-inch drywall. You will get a smooth wall in perfect condition for painting. The ½-inch panels can be glued in place using joint compound.

Since nails aren't necessary, you won't have to worry about covering indentations or nails popping in the future.

the blinds offer light and privacy control with just a twist of Hunter Douglas' "magic wands."

Sight unseen, my advice for awkward room anatomy like yours: Think shades. Your options in types, sizes, colors and materials can help take the, ahem, pane out of window decorating.

Window trouble

Q. I just don't know what to do with the windows in my living room.

They butt right up against the fireplace on one side (there's a bookcase on the other side).

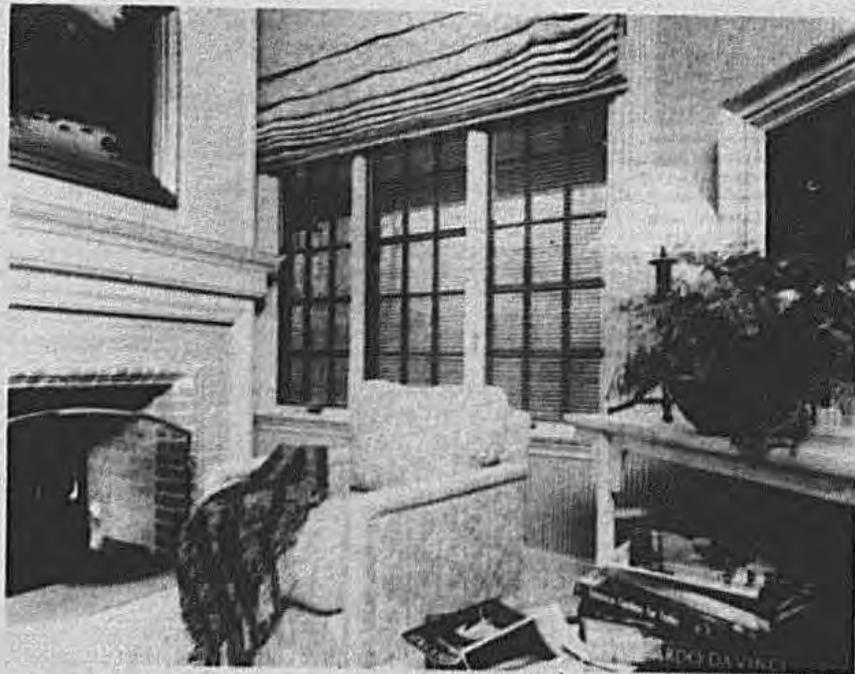

I can't hang draperies or even put up a swag because there's just no space. I know it's hard to give advice without seeing the problem, but would you please try? — T.H.

A. I wouldn't say that "if you've seen one problem window, you've seen them all," but almost every architectural oddity has its parallel under some American rooftop.

I found yours — and a good solution for it — in the photo we show here from the window experts at Hunter Douglas. No surprise, then, that their answer to an awkward corner window includes narrow wood blinds, a trio of them, used under a tailored Roman shade.

Both layers cling close to the windows, so there's no bulk to protrude into the room. And both have a strong architectural feeling that's more appropriate in this tight space than billows of fabric would be.

However, the shade is made to match the room's upholstered pieces, adding a soft touch, while CORNER CACHE — A window tucked awkwardly into a fireplace corner takes on architectural importance when it's dressed in miniblinds under a tailored Roman shade.

ANTIQU OR JUNQUE

By Anne McCollam

Q. My Prosit stein in the enclosed picture belonged to a relative of Italian descent, now deceased. No further details are known about it, except that it has been in my family for many years.

The following markings are on the bottom: "Germany — Geselzlich — Geschutzt." The lid appears to be pewter.

Any information will be appreciated.

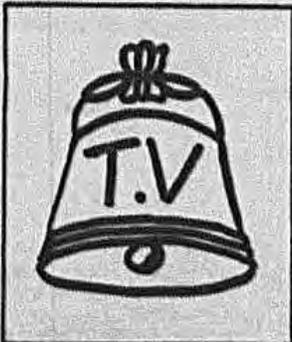

A. Your stein was made in Germany in the early 1900s. Geselzlich and Geschutzt mean the design is protected from being copied by other manufacturers.

The word Prosit means "Here's to you," or "To your health."

This stein would be worth about $165 to $185.

Q. The enclosed mark is on the bottom of my porcelain cake plate. It is 11 inches in diameter, has a gold scalloped rim and a gold medallion against a white background.

Could you tell me where it was made, by whom, and its value?

A. Fine porcelain has been made in Limoges, France, for over a century by numerous factories. One of the most frequently found marks is 'Prosit!'

"T&V," which is Tressemanes & Vogt, a New York importer.

Your cake plate was made for Tressemanes & Vogt between 1891 and 1907. It might sell for about $65 to $75.

Q. Anything you could tell me about figurines made in occupied Japan would be greatly appreciated. I have collected quite a few over the years, bought mostly at yard sales.

Are they of any value, or worthless? Why are they stamped "Occupied Japan" instead of just "Japan" as most are?

A. From the end of World War II until April 28, 1952, Japan was occupied by U.S. armed forces.

The Japanese pottery industry marked many of their pieces "Occupied Japan" or "Made in Occupied Japan."

In general, prices of figurines range from $15 to $65.

Q. I have a powder box and hair receiver. I thought they were celluloid, but on the bottom of both are the words "Ivory — Py Ra Lin."

The powder box is very light weight. The hair receiver is quite heavy, and even though it is ivory in color, it is a much more yellow ivory than the powder box.

Can you give me approximate dates and an evaluation?

A. Sometimes manufacturers will go to great lengths to fool the public. Your powder box and hair receiver were not made of ivory.

They were labeled "Ivory" because of the color. Pyralin is a plastic. These items are plastic and were manufactured in the early 20th century.

Each piece is worth about $35 to $45.

Q. I have a small plate 8 inches in diameter.

It is trimmed around the edge in gold, and decorated with small blue and white flowers.

On the back is marked "Sevres" and "Bavaria" and a shield with the word "Thomas" in it.

I am really interested in the history and value.

A. Sevres is the name of the pattern of your plate. It does not refer to the much-sought-after porcelain made in the town of Sevres, France.

Your plate was made by the F. Thomas Porcelain Factory in Marktredwitz, Bavaria, Germany, in the early 20th century.

The value would probably be about $10 to $15.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Q. Our veterinarian recommended that we brush our dog's teeth! I have owned dogs for years and have never brushed any dog's teeth. Is this really necessary? Do dogs have more teeth and gum problems today than several years ago? It seems like veterinarians are pushing dental care more now than ever before.

A. The greater interest in dental care is probably due to a greater awareness of dental problems and to the greater number of older pets today. Because of other advancements in veterinary medicine, pets are living long enough now to develop dental problems.

The diets of our pets have changed considerably over the years. The wild ancestors of dogs and cats avoided plaque buildup by chewing on rough food and bones. Most dogs and cats today do not eat the same rough materials.

Prevention is the best method to be sure your dogs will always have healthy teeth. Each of your dogs' mouths should be examined by a veterinarian at least once per year. Dogs with serious plaque problems should have their teeth cleaned. This usually requires that the dog be anesthetized.

The teeth of most dogs can be brushed routinely with a toothbrush without much hassle. Your veterinarian can supply you with an appropriate dog toothpaste and brush. Flossing is usually not necessary because most dogs have widely spaced teeth. Your veterinarian can give you specific advice regarding the care of your animals' teeth.

Aunt Tilly's Corner

We have had no let up from the hot weather and humidity in over a week. What are you doing to keep cool? Some people have air conditioners in their homes and cars, but many do not.

The best thing to do is plan quiet activities for the midday when the heat is worst. Stay out of the sun. If you want to go outside, don't forget to put on plenty of sunscreen.

Best of all jump into a pool, drink cool drinks and eat lots of ice cream!

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Am I fully insured for retirement benefits?

By William M. Acosta

Q. A co-worker asked me if I was "fully insured" for Social Security retirement benefits, but I wasn't sure how to answer him. How can I find out if I am fully insured?

A. I am currently 35 years old. — S.T.

A. You are fully insured for Social Security retirement benefits when you have earned credits for a certain amount of work under Social Security.

To attain fully insured status for retirement benefits, 1 credit is required for each year since 1950, up to a maximum of 40 credits.

For individuals retiring in 1991, and later, they will need 40 credits, or 10 years, of work to have fully insured status.

Q. My husband decided to work past the normal retirement age of 65. He has a health insurance plan where he works, and is also enrolled in Medicare.

I recently turned 65 and have enrolled in Medicare as his spouse. It now appears that I will need surgery within the next few months.

Will Medicare help pay for some of my medical expenses while I'm hospitalized, or will I have to rely totally on what his company medical benefits pay? — R.W.

A. If you are covered under the group health plan of your husband's employer, the regulations state that Medicare cannot pay for services covered under the group plan.

The group health plan must pay its benefits first and Medicare may then help pay for services that the group plan does not cover, or which it does not pay in full.

Q. They have just told me that I will be able to get Supplemental Security Income (SSI) checks. What other assistance can I get to help me with my living expenses? — H.R.

A. To help you with your living expenses, you may want to apply for food stamps if you have not already done so.

In addition, if you are not eligible for participation in the Medicare health insurance program, you may want to consider Medicaid.

In many states, if you are eligible for SSI, you also are eligible for Medicaid. The local medical assistance office can tell you about eligibility for that program.

You also may be eligible to receive social services from your state or county. Contact your local social services department, or public welfare office, for details about that.

Special procedures for interfaith marriages

Rockville Centre — When a Catholic plans to marry a non-Catholic, certain special procedures must be followed.

When the couple first contacts the Catholic's parish priest, diocesan guidelines suggest the priest must first, as with any planned marriage, determine that both parties are free to marry, and inform the couple about requirements for marriage preparation. In the case of a "mixed" marriage, the couple should also be informed that the Catholic party will have to make certain promises in order for the Catholic marriage to take place.

These promises involve the Catholic's own determination to continue to practice the Catholic faith and to do all in his power to have all the children of the marriage baptized and raised in the Catholic Church. The non-Catholic party does not have to make any such promises but does have to be informed that the Catholic has made them. If the Catholic party is not practicing the Catholic faith, the parish priest must make a pastoral judgment and may want to have more extended conversations with the couple before the marriage preparations go forward.

Once the priest has informed the couple of what's involved and has obtained the promises of the Catholic party, a petition for a dispensation is sent to the diocesan chancellor's office. The petition must be signed by the priest recommending the dispensation and by the Catholic person requesting it. Other dispensations may also be required, depending on the type of wedding the couple desires; they must be requested well in advance — at least several months before the wedding.

The normal form for a Catholic marriage is that it be celebrated in a Catholic church in the presence of a priest or deacon and two official witnesses. This is required for the marriage of two Catholics.

The wedding of a Catholic and a non-Catholic Christian may take place in the parish church of either party. Only a Catholic priest can officiate at a wedding in a Catholic church, but a non-Catholic minister may be invited to be present and to offer additional prayers or blessings or read from Scripture. With special permission, a Catholic priest may officiate at a marriage celebrated in a non-Catholic church, although from an ecumenical point of view it may be better for the minister of the church to be the officiant. A Catholic priest may be present as an assisting minister and a representative of the Catholic Church at such a wedding.

It is not possible to have two marriage ceremonies, for example, one in a Catholic church and one in a Protestant church. Nor is it allowed to have one ceremony which incorporates two rituals or at which two clergy jointly officiate.

At the marriage of a Catholic and a Jew, the Catholic's parish church is the usual place for the wedding ceremony, according to diocesan statistics. If problems arise because Jewish family members are reluctant to enter a Catholic church or a rabbi won't permit an interfaith wedding in a synagogue, compromises have been worked out such as the use of a non-denominational chapel. Having the marriage ceremony at a catering facility is discouraged and is allowed only as a very last resort.

Marriage preparation a chance to evangelize

By Pete Sheehan

Rockville Centre — The Sacrament of Matrimony joins two people together, but also offers an opportunity to bring people closer to the Church.

"Many who come to be married in the Church are not active in the Church," Msgr. Daniel Hurley, a member of the Diocesan Senate of Priests and its sacramental practice committee, told The Long Island Catholic.

Marriage preparation presents "a key opportunity for evangelization, for letting people know the Church is there for them," Msgr. Hurley, pastor of St. Raphael's Church, East Meadow, said.

As a result, the Senate of Priests has recommended to Msgr. James Lisante, director of the Diocesan Office of Family Ministry, a refocusing of diocesan marriage preparation toward more small group, parish-based programs.

"We're trying to capitalize on opportunities to reach people," Msgr. Hurley said. "A positive experience of marriage preparation will also be a positive experience of Church."

The recommended shift in focus would occur over five years, according to Father Francis Schneider, diocesan vice-chancellor and a member of the sacramental practice committee.

Msgr. Lisante told TLIC that "we're all in agreement that there is a need to make marriage preparation even better," but expressed caution about the feasibility of the proposed change in focus.

Criteria
The recommendation followed a study of the different types of marriage preparation done in the diocese, which include large group sessions over three nights, one all-day session, small group in-home sessions, Engaged Encounter weekends and interfaith marriage programs. (See pages 4, 5, 6, 8)

In their study, the committee gathered information by meeting with Deacon Ray Micucci, coordinator of marriage preparation for the family ministry office.

"We also identified four criteria for marriage preparation," Father Schneider said.

One criterion is that "like to like or peer ministry" works best. Father Schneider said, so that programs where married couples meet with individual engaged couples would be preferred to lectures by experts.

Another criterion is that the program be parish-based, to better involve couples in parish life. "even though we found that Engaged Encounter," a non-parish program based on Marriage Encounter, "is a worthwhile experience as well."

Third, "because marriage is a lifelong process," Father Schneider said, marriage preparation should take place over a period of time so it can work as a process.

Also, Church moral teaching "must be clearly and positively presented," Father Schneider said.

"Some of these programs have the ingredients more explicitly than others," Msgr. Hurley said.

For example, Deacon Micucci said, the large gathering, either for three evenings or one day, does not allow for the easy development of a process or for much evangelization. "It's very difficult

Engaged Encounter Weekend: A weekend retreat held in a retreat house on Long Island. Friday evening at 8 PM

What different programs are like

What is an engaged encounter?

This is a weekend where an atmosphere is created in which each couple can concentrate exclusively on one another free of tensions, pressures and interruptions of the world. It is a quiet weekend specifically designed to give the couples an opportunity to dialogue honestly and intensively about their prospective lives together... their strengths, weaknesses, goals, desires, ambitions, their attitudes about sex, money, children, family; their role in the Church and society in a face-to-face way.

Through a series of ideas presented by a team of married couples and a priest, the couples are stimulated to dialogue privately with each other on all aspects of married life — always from the viewpoint of their own relationship. Personal reflection and couple dialogue are the main thrust of the weekend, with communal meals and liturgy providing group participation.

The weekend begins at 7:45 p.m., Friday, and ends with Mass on Sunday afternoon about 3:00 p.m.

What is diocesan Pre-Cana?

During this three-session program, teams of married couples and a priest will encourage the engaged couples to explore their mutual strengths and weaknesses, goals, aspirations and attitudes concerning the vocation of marriage including communication, family life, children, sexuality, finances, the Church and society. The couples are invited to become involved in a period of discovery and to communicate privately and as a group their ideas, thoughts and feelings in planning their lives.

How to sew that perfect wedding dress

(AP) — You want your own one-of-a-kind gown. Or perhaps the prices of ready-made dresses are daunting. Either way, if you sew you can achieve the bridal dress you want without compromises.

About 40 percent of all wedding fashions are sewn at home or by a dressmaker, the Sewing Fashion Council estimates.

The home sewer can bring her own design fantasies to reality, and she can control costs by selecting her own fabrics and findings. Pattern companies are helping with basic designs meant to be individually varied or embellished for finished gowns that are unique to the wearer.

Simplicity's "Design Your Own Bridal Gown" pattern (7429) is a floor-length dress that can be made with or without a train, has a fitted bodice with three neckline options, three sleeve styles and four waist treatments.

Instructions on how to apply trims such as lace, iridescent sequin braid, motifs and appliques are included, along with tips about fitting.

Three dresses by bridal designer Alicyn Wright are offered as patterns by McCall's.

One is a slender sheath (5758) with a triangular or heart-shaped back cut-out which can be draped with strands of pearls or other decorations. It has a back bow over a detachable train. Another gown (5746) has a funnel collar combined with a sweetheart neckline over a dropped-waist bodice with princess seaming. The pattern comes with a choice of long, short, or leg-o-mutton sleeves. There is an optional keyhole opening at the back of the bodice and a choice of two skirt lengths. A third design (5804) evokes an antebellum period with a princess-seamed bodice with a dropped waist with ruffles or lace lavished on the sleeves, full skirt, back peplum and bustle.

The patterns include tips about working with bridal lace, trims, appliques and beadwork.

Tips and a timetable for ordering materials and making dresses are included in "Wedding Belles," a booklet from the Sewing Fashion Council. For a copy, send $1 to Dorf & Stanton Communications, 111 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10003.

Households headed by married couples decline

Washington (AP) — The married couple, living together, remains typical of American households, but that traditional way of organizing lives continues to decline in the '90s.

New government information shows 55 percent of America's households were headed by married couples last year, down from 56 percent two years earlier.

The traditional American family has been on the skids for more than half a century. In 1940, nine American households in 10 were married-couple families. Last year, slightly more than half fit that description.

"I don't think the words, 'Till death do us part,' mean the same in 1993 as they did in 1943 or in 1913. Then they meant, 'I'll stand this relationship even if it kills me,'" said Dan Byrne, deputy director of the House of Ruth, a non-profit social service organization that assists women and children.

The Census Bureau, in a report issued Wednesday, said there are 95.7 million households in the United States, 2.3 million more than in 1990.

Single-parent families accounted for nearly a third of that growth. About one household in 10 was headed by a single parent.

One household in four was someone living alone. Altogether, 24 million Americans live by themselves.

Among America's racial and ethnic groups, black households were least likely to be headed by married couples. Fifty-three percent were households headed by single men and women.

Married couples accounted for 82 percent of white households and 79 percent of Asian-Pacific Islander households.

Among Hispanics, 68 percent of households were married couples. Hispanics are an ethnic group and can be of any race.

Some other facts about American households in 1992:

— Average size: 2.62 people, unchanged since 1990, down from 2.76 in 1980 and 3.14 in 1970.

— Most common size: Two people — 30.7 million households.

— Number of seven-person households: 1.3 million, about one in 100.

— Average age of the head of the household: 45 years, eight months.

— Households headed by senior citizens: 20.9 million, 765,000 more than in 1990.

— Households headed by persons under 30: 13.7 million, 875,000 fewer than in 1990.

Chance to evangelize

to evangelize in the space of time you have," he said.

The committee has called for an emphasis on more parish-based, small group, peer ministry, such as in-home programs, where married couples meet with a group of engaged couples over several weeks to discuss their experiences of married life.

Concerns about small groups

While agreeing that small group, in-home programs seem attractive, Msgr. Lisante said, he offered caution about the feasibility of such an emphasis.

"Everybody has great ideas about how to improve marriage preparation," Msgr. Lisante said, but the difficulty is "how to bring forth the people to make these ideas work."

Many programs are already "finding it impossible to get new people," Msgr. Lisante said, resulting in burnout for long-time volunteers.

An additional concern with parish-based in-home small groups, Msgr. Lisante said, "is what is going on in these homes."

"I have gotten complaints over the years that some group leaders do not support Church teaching," such as "Humanae Vitae," Pope Paul VI's 1968 encyclical which re-affirmed Church teaching against artificial contraception, Msgr. Lisante said.

Msgr. Lisante said he is able to ensure that speakers in the larger gatherings express support for Church teaching.

When his office trains volunteers for the in-home programs, Msgr. Lisante said, participants are told that they are expected to reflect Church teaching against contraception.

"Each time, there has always been someone who has come forth to say that they could not in conscience support 'Humanae Vitae,'" and they drop out. "I respect their honesty."

Msgr. Lisante's concern includes not only "Humanae Vitae," but also other Church teachings such as those on abortion and divorce.

Father Schneider said that Msgr. Lisante's concerns could be addressed as the consultation continues.

For example, Father Schneider said, some priests have suggested that videos explaining Church teaching could be shown to in-home groups for discussion to ensure orthodox presentation.

In addition, "support systems could be set up" for volunteers, Father Schneider suggested, so they would be less vulnerable to burnout.

Magnificent Waterfront Weddings in the Fall, Winter, Spring & Summer

Traditional and distinctive . . . the way you want your wedding to be.

Behind the impressive red brick and white clapboard facade of the Coral House (70 Milburn Avenue in Baldwin, Long Island: 516-223-6500, 1-800-99CORAL or 1-800-9CORAL or 1-800-CEREMONY) lies another world . . . a world as distinct from everyday as the Garden of the Finzi Continis or the wonderland that Alice found through the looking glass.

It could be Colonial Williamsburg or the solitude and warm seaside charm of Nantucket. And, in fact, it's a little of both.

Coral House is set on the shores of beautiful Milburn Lake, whose sparkling and lapping waters create as romantic a setting as you can hope for. The grounds and the views over the lake are spell-binding in any season of the year. In spring, the pink and white cherry blossoms and other flowering ornamentals are in bloom. The lacy branches and leaves of dogwood and white birch are special at any time. And even in winter, there's a Hans Christian Andersen fairyland lake to overlook.

There are several distinctive indoor and outdoor settings for wedding ceremonies and their celebrations. Photo opportunities abound at any time of year.

Spacious reception rooms with panoramic views and traditional decorations . . .

"Traditional and distinctive . . . the way you want your wedding to be."

outdoor and indoor pre-reception rooms . . . and, in your own private, generous-sized and luxurious bridal suite with charming furnishings, large wood-burning fireplaces and discreet private baths.

The Americana Room, the spectacular Grand Ball-room of the Coral House, offers floor-to-ceiling Palladian, mullioned windows the entire length of one wall. The Presidential Room hosts eighteenth-century prints from the Williamsburg collection of seasonal flowers and fruit arrangements.

Take the elevator to the Rooftop Terrace and you will think that you have sailed out into Nantucket Island for its seashore atmosphere. On the open-air terraces there are white clapboard gazebos and latticework, wall sconces and nautical decor, planters filled with seasonal flowers.

The Enclosed Deck retains its open air feeling and soul-satisfying view over Milburn Lake and its tree-shaded shoreline.

The Colonial Skylight Room spotlights a traditional Williamsburg-style setting: patterned wild rose-beach plum wallpaper, matching carpeting and chairs, interior clapboard siding, shutters and brick-work.

The Milburn Room is enhanced by its wood panelling, colorful stained glass windows, fireplace and intimate ambiance. Just leave your horse and carriage outside (and there actually is one!).

Coral House is large enough to accommodate hundreds of guests in a choice of settings. Yet it is small enough to allow each wedding party to experience the intimacy and warm hospitality of a private house.

Experienced couples call communication key

Oxford, Ohio (AP) — Newlyweds, listen to the voice of experience. Fifty couples who have been married 50 years or longer say the single most important ingredient for a lasting marriage is communication.

"Some of them said they never go to bed mad at each other, but work it out," says Dr. Tim Brubaker, director of Miami University's family and child studies center, who conducted the survey of couples married from 50 to 72 years to find out what made their marriages last.

He points out that only one in five marriages survives death or divorce to reach the 50-year mark.

All couples surveyed rate their marriages as satisfying. They view marriage as a lifelong commitment and think divorce is the last possible solution to problems.

"But they didn't present a picture of a carefree half-century together," says

Dr. Brubaker. "They said you have to work at marriage, and you can't expect everything to go well. Each of them talked about times when they had problems."

Most couples said their child-rearing years were the most difficult and the retirement years most rewarding. Most said they thought couples should date for at least a year before marrying.

Dr. Brubaker says sharing by the couples included not only consulting with each other on major decisions but doing household chores.

"The people in this study provide good role models for anyone who wants a relationship to last," says Dr. Brubaker. "They're committed. They've established communication patterns that allow each partner to feel his or her viewpoint will be accepted and respected."

Wedding gift customs may differ

(AP) — In many cultures, the wedding is the occasion to garner the couple's first nest egg or to exchange symbolic gifts.

An old Italian custom is to cut up the groom's tie and auction the pieces to the guests.

A Swiss custom along the same lines has the bridesmaids "sell" colored handkerchiefs to the guests, the proceeds going to the bride and groom.

A German tradition is for the guests to break special plates provided for the purpose. While the groom sweeps up the shards, guests buy dances with the bride.

A Japanese groom gives his bride a kimono to wear on a ceremonial visit to his parents' home on the third day of marriage.

The Jewish groom is expected to give his bride something of value. Usually it's an unadorned gold wedding band.

In the Philippines, the groom's family gives the couple old coins for prosperity.

Scottish grooms give the bride a silver teaspoon engraved with their initials and the wedding date.

The Amish give the couple a wedding quilt in the bridal or double wedding ring pattern.

French couples are given a two-handled cup known as the "coupe de mariage" in which to drink toasts.

Lithuanian parents serve the bride and groom a symbolic meal of wine for joy, bread for work and salt for tears.

Special care taken in planning marriages involving teen-agers

Rockville Centre — The Diocese of Rockville Centre has a special policy for marriages in which one or both parties is under 19 at the time of the proposed marriage.

In such cases, only a tentative date can be set for the wedding until a special procedure is completed.

Each party is to be interviewed separately by the priest who is helping them arrange the marriage; the parents or guardians of each underage party are also interviewed.

The priest then forwards his summary of the interviews to the diocesan chancellor's office, along with his recommendation as to whether or not the marriage should be delayed, along with his reasons for making the recommendation.

Based on that information, the chancellor's office then makes a decision as to whether or not the marriage should be permitted, the couple referred for further counseling, or the marriage delayed for a time.

The same procedure is to be followed any time a priest feels there is an objective reason to delay a marriage.

Guidelines issued with this policy note that its purpose is not "to delay marriage or thwart the marriage plans of young people," but rather to help the priest help the couple "weigh with the proper maturity the responsibilities of the Sacrament of Marriage" and to assure that the couple is prepared to celebrate their marriage in an atmosphere of faith.
