Kirk Larsen

A freelance artist for 17 years, Kirk Larsen is most well known for his work as a caricaturist.

Local Artist Showcases

By Keysha Hedgepeth

Kirk T. Larsen is a multifaceted, multimedia artist from Hicksville. He will be presenting a mixed media exhibit in the Community Room at the Hicksville Public Library. It will be on display throughout the month of January during library hours. Sculpture, wood carvings and paintings will be shown.

A free-lance artist for 17 years, he is most well known for his work as a caricaturist. However, he is also pursuing photography, acting, and even stand-up comedy. His hobbies include cooking and music. Moreover, Larsen is a published author.

Larsen makes much of his living by doing caricatures. "I was a side line for a friend who was promoting a night club," Larsen said. "That outlet proved to be so successful that he began to be requested for parties. In this lucrative field he can make as much $200 per hour. On the other hand, "Parties are! not my most favorite thing to do," he said. "I kind of shy away from the illustration stuff because I want to do bigger things."

He enjoys expressing big ideas in the form of murals. His recent projects include four tropical murals at Paradise (a concerting hall that is an off-shoot of No Business) in Bohupage and a 24-foot-long celestial backdrop for Green Point Savings Bank. "I like working big," said Larsen. "It's great to literally involve your whole body [in the creation of art]."

A photographer for 17 years, he recalled receiving his camera at age 13. "I had a little instamatic and remember chasing seagulls around until I got them in position in front of the sun," said Larsen. This experience would lead him to the New York Folk Festival Photo Exhibit (1988) and First Place, Long Island State Park's Winter Arts Festival Photo Competition (1993).

Larsen is also a stand-up comedian, having performed at such spots as Check-les (Mineola), Governors, East Side Comedy Club and Jimmy's (Bayside). Larsen noted that he wants to use it as a stepping stone to "eventually end in acting." When asked why he pursued comedy rather than utilizing the drama of the stage, he said "Comedy requires you to put forth a stronger stage presence. You have to go out and make grumpy people laugh." Larsen hopes that his talents lead him to "movie roles and possibly TV."

Larsen received his illustrator's degree from the School of Visual Arts, in Manhattan. While there, he became involved in writing essays, poetry and short stories. He has been published in the school's Alumni Journal. "I have written everything from humor to mysterious drama," said Larsen. "My poetry is [usually] romantic, self-affirming or spiritually uplifting."

The artist has done video artwork for PBS Nature, the New York Mets '88 highlight film and the Hard Rock Cafe. He has been a guest teacher at C.W. Post and Parsons' School of Design as well as teaching privately. "Hicksville Library is my first public exhibit," said Larsen. "I spend more time doing my art than promoting it."

A Hicksville High graduate, (1978) Larsen has been recognized by a variety of awards including: Second Place in the Master Eagle Gallery Trophy Design competition and several Excellence in Advertising awards.

Although Larsen is involved with many forms of artistic expression, he refuses to give any of them up. "Whatever I stop to review it, [I find that] it will be uncharacteristic of me to give something up," he said.

Young Voice Of Democracy

By Keysha Hedgepeth

The young and positive voice of Jennifer Murphy, was heard loud and clear on December 15 when she spoke on her "commitment to America" during a recent Bill Of Rights Day celebration. Murphy is the winner for the Hicksville YFW "Voice of Democracy" contest. She spoke before the Hicksville Kiwanis Club at its weekly luncheon.

During her address she read from her award-winning speech. Murphy said that to many adults "the committed young person is a thing of the past." "I beg to differ with this message because I am one of the many committed young Americans, who feel that with perseverance, hard work and faith I can change the future of America for the better," said Murphy. "My commitment is one that will help tomorrow's youth become our nation's strength."

She said that she feels a sense of duty toward others, in particular, children. "My desire is that by encouraging or teaching one of today's children, these [kids] will remember something I've taught them and they too will strive to keep [the United States] a remarkable place to live."

Featured last to right are Mark Herbert of Hicksville Kiwanis Club, contest winner Jennifer Murphy and Nancy Murphy Peters (seated).

Murphy said. Commitment to help and educate each other is the responsibility of everyone she added. Murphy is an example of this ideal, having spent her time as both a tutor to her fellow students and a

Santa Claus Visits Hicksville

Santa Claus paid an early visit to Hicksville recently. He left his reindeer home, to rest for the big night and opted to take a fire truck instead. All day sirens signal his arrival and families wait on the street to wave at Santa and pick up the popcorn balls he throws from the fire truck.

TO YOUR HEALTH

By RICHARD H. BLAU, M.D.

Arthritis Treatment - A Comprehensive Approach Part IV - Exercise and Arthritis

One of the most common questions asked of me by my patients is if exercise is helpful in the treatment of arthritis. My answer is usually yes. However, the type of exercise depends on the type of arthritis and the joints affected.

The purpose of therapeutic exercise is not only to maintain joint flexibility and muscle strength, but to increase the patient's ability to perform daily activities. Active exercise is usually recommended for those patients with joint disorders.

The exercises used are a combination of isometric and isotonic contractions. In isometric exercises, muscle strength is gained with minimal joint motion. These exercises are considered to be ideal for maintaining muscle strength in patients with joint inflammation. Active isotonic exercise can be used to increase endurance, range of motion of the joint, and to increase strength.

When joint pain occurs, it is natural to rest the joint. However, strict rest can be harmful. Studies have shown that a muscle can lose 30 percent of its bulk in one week, and can lose 3 percent of its function per day when maintained at strict rest.

Patients should be cautious because over-exercise can damage the joints. Signs of excessive exercise include persistent pain, fatigue, weakness, and joint swelling.

Rheumatologists have been trained in counseling and designing specific therapeutic exercise programs, tailored to an individual's arthritis. If you suffer from arthritis, exercise should be a part of your therapy. However, before undertaking an exercise program you should consult your physician.

Arthritis strikes one out of seven people. Learn the facts. Call for your complimentary copy of "The Joint Approach - An Arthritis Overview."

Sunday school teacher.

On the other hand the educational mandate begins with the individual. "It is my responsibility to ask questions and seek answers... [for] it is only with this knowledge that I can help change the face of this nation," said Murphy. "We have to educate ourselves for unless we study the mistakes of the past we are bound to repeat them."

She wrapped up her address by highlighting the role faith plays in her views. "No one can tell me that my part is too small because I believe in it," said Murphy. "I believe in the youth in America's future and that my commitment is a significant piece in the puzzle that continues to build on the foundation of this country."

Murphy, 18, is the winner from Hicksville High School. A senior, she had plans to become a pediatrician. A multi-talented young woman, she has been with the high school's Madrigal Singers group since she was a freshman.

The "Voice of Democracy" contest is a national audio essay scholarship program. It is designed to give high school students the opportunity to voice their opinions on their responsibility to the country and convey their thoughts via the broadcasting media. A student must be in the 10th, 11th or 12th grade at a public, private or parochial high school and a US citizen.

$88,500 in scholarship funds will be awarded to 30 winners. First prize is $20,000. Each state winner is provided with a five-day all-expense-paid trip to Washington DC and the opportunity to compete for the national scholarship.

Contest chairperson Joan Chwalisz of the VFW Ladies Auxiliary said that she hoped Jennifer Murphy would represent Hicksville in the national competition. "We at the VFW are very proud of Jennifer," said Chwalisz. "Her presentation and ideas are what we are all about."

Holistic Health Comes To Hix

By Keysha Hedgepeth

Ron Rozenberg has recently joined the Hicksville business family with his holistic chiropractic practice located at 8 Table lane in Hicksville. Rozenberg Chiropractic practice opened in June.

Rozenberg has a strong sense of community commitment. "I want to be really involved in the community," he said. During November he conducted a Thanksgiving food drive. This holiday season he helped spearhead the Toys For Tots campaign in conjunction with the Levittown Kiwanis Club.

The toys are being collected for needy children in the Hicksville and Levittown areas. Rozenberg accepted toys up until the December 20, offering free exams and adjustments as an incentive.

The doctor has been practicing since 1989. He is a graduate of Life Chiropractic College in Atlanta, Georgia. "Around 50% of his practice is focused on pediatric care," said Rozenberg. "I see patients from 3 days old to 85 years of age. People come for relief care and stay for health care." According to Rozenberg, The chiropractic field "is the largest drugless, non-surgical health care discipline in the US today". The discipline is concerned with spinal function through the nervous system.

Hicksville Artist Exhibits At NYT

A striking exhibit of modern American art is prominently on display at the Wisser Memorial Library of the New York Institute of Technology. The work of Charles Conover of Hicksville, the "Americana" consists of large acrylic paintings on canvas, in a graphic commentary on contemporary American values and culture.

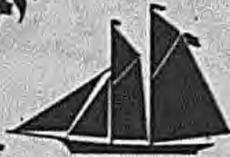

The artist is a teacher of computerized graphic arts at the Pratt Institute of Art. He studied art at the New York Institute of Technology and pursues graduate studies at New York University.

Mr. Conover is a prolific, professional artist whose previous 1991 one-man show at New York Tech was seen by many viewers. The current Wisser Memorial Library exhibit will run through Jan. 21, 1994.

Conover is a graduate of the Hicksville High School. He is the son of Mrs. Val and Hugh Conover, past-president, Hicksville Gregory Museum. Hours for the Wisser Library may be obtained by calling 686-7658.

Give The Gift Of Yourself

The holiday season is traditionally a time for exchanging gifts with friends and loved ones. This year, take a break from the hustle and bustle of holiday shopping and preparations and take a few minutes—or even a few hours if you can spare the time—to give a piece of yourself.

Donate your time at a local shelter or soup kitchen, giving aid to those in need. Help collect clothes and toys for needy children, or help gather food for and serve meals to the less fortunate. Assist a local organization in making up food baskets or wrapping gifts to be distributed.

Offer your assistance to an elderly neighbor to do some shopping, rake leaves or help decorate for the holidays. Prepare a meal and stay to share it.

Set an extra place at the table and invite someone who has no family nearby to Christmas dinner.

If you know someone who is caring for a sick or elderly relative full time, give them a break and take over their duties for a few hours.

Arrange to drop by a hospital or nursing home with a group of friends and sing Christmas carols for the patients. Then stay and visit with a few of them. You'll make their day.

In contrast to the senseless crime and violence in our society, everyone should take the time this season to perform a good deed to help make the world a better place. Do something nice for someone for absolutely no reason.

Help uncover the real meaning of this season by pulling away the veil of commercialism. No matter what holiday you celebrate and no matter what you believe, this season is one for giving, sharing and rejoicing, and giving a piece of yourself is the greatest gift of all.

Happy holidays to all of our readers!

A Letter from Lulubelle...

...It's a strange thing about men and the masculine thought processes, especially when they get behind the wheel. Have you noticed how they always have to "make time," even if they are very early and have nothing to do when they get "there"...You and your husband are riding along a winding road and you see coming up a delightful antique shop—but can you get him to stop?...Zoom, zoom and you are well past, and then he says, "Did you really want to stop there? There'll be a better one along the way"...and the strange thing is that that "better one" never materializes...I have spoken to dozens of women and all have the same story—men do not stop along the way. It seems to be contrary to their natures...and another thing, have you noticed how they hate to ask directions?...You know absolutely that he is as completely confused and lost as you are, but will he pull into a gas station or stop a passerby—perish forbid!...He insists that he is not lost, knows exactly where he is and where he's going to end up—and probably the most exasperating part of the whole story is that, usually, his luck is superhuman and he comes out just where he said he would. That is really maddening—the luck of the male...With the female driver stopping is very different—we once took fourteen hours on Route 7 in Connecticut...what absolutely "essential" stuff and junk we picked up that day!!

Yours, Lulubelle

End Tolerance For Handguns

At last, in a terrible loss of fortune, a horrible crime has occurred in our community. Not in Waco, Texas; not in Oxnard, California; not in Des Plaines, Illinois. But here, on Long Island. In our county.

No one can be so presumptuous as to believe that some all-knowing and seeing government, or church, or social service organization, or even well-meaning individuals could have deterred Colin Ferguson from his unspeakable horrors. Ferguson's imagined demons are entirely his responsibility.

Yet reflecting on the thoroughly pervasive culture of violence here in America, are we really surprised?

In a society that venerates practitioners of violence and glorifies urban gangs and a culture of violence, are we really surprised?

In a society that spends more on cop-killer rap and other violent media products than we do on schoolbooks, are we really surprised?

In a land where we say "I hate you" more frequently than we do "I love you," and we think it is far "cooler" to hit than to hug, are we really surprised?

If anything positive can come from the tragedy of the 5-33 killing, it will be the realization that tolerance of handguns must end.

I supported the Brady bill. I saw and see absolutely no restriction on a constitutional right to own a gun—provided one is completely qualified to do so, and is prepared to wait to take possession. We await our drivers licenses and other permits: We cannot wait for our pistols without it being an abridgement of our basic freedom?

I now oppose the NRA. I split ranks with them long, long ago when they opposed anti cop-killer bullet legislation because it was, as they saw it, the first step on the road to attempts to remove all legal guns from the land. And then they compounded their foolishness with their squalid opposition to assault rifle bans and the Brady bill.

Bearing arms is not the solution; ending the pervasiveness of violence and hate and acting out is.

In years to come, hopefully we will recall this time of community shock as the beginning of a new, positive sea-change in America where guns and violence stopped playing the central role that they now play. When that happens, our children will, at last, have a chance.

BON VOYAGE

With Edythe and Jack Shepard
If you're traveling abroad during this holiday season, we do hope you'll be participating in the area's Christmas customs, deeply rooted in folk tradition. Celebrations combine the solemnity of religious observances with joyous festivities and wherever you are for the holidays, the wonderful spirit of Christmas abounds.

Our Christmas visit to Hawaii did seem a bit strange, as Santa came onto Waikiki Beach on a surfboard and carols were sung to the accompaniment of ukuleles. At the other extreme, the most poignant Christmas we ever spent was in Bethlehem, where it began. No matter what a visitor's religion, one had to be impressed with the huge mass of pilgrims, clergy and sightseers who mingled in the plaza of the Basilica of the Nativity, where services were held for invited guests. Outside the huge doors, we were able to hear the services via loudspeakers, while participants and those outdoors joined in prayers and hymns, surrounded by the history and miracle of Christmas.

Join us for an alphabetical tour of Europe's Christmas:

- In Austria, you'll enjoy a two-day (December 25, 26) legal holiday during which family and friends visit to partake of huge feasts. Every town sets up a decorated tree in the square, with one adorned with bread for the birds. Knecht Ruprecht (Santa Claus) leaves children's gifts under the tree on Christmas Eve which is celebrated with Turmbäsen (brass instruments) playing chorale music from church steeples and the manger is carried from house to house. After dinner, Mass is attended.

- Czechoslovakia's observances begin on December 6 and end on January 6. On Christmas Eve, a suckling pig is the star of the huge dinner during which an empty chair is left for the Christ child. Midnight Mass comes next.

- In France, La Vieille de Noel (Christmas Eve is celebrated with a festive supper (La Reveillon), after Midnight Mass, complete with blood sausage and roast goose (traditional because a goose welcomed the Wise Men with its quacking as they neared the stable). Children's shoes are put by the fireplace to be filled before

Anniversary Quilts

On Permanent Display

One-hundred and twenty children and adults from 57 Long Island communities expressed their devotion to North Shore University Hospital by participating in a major effort to create three unique anniversary quilts. Friends and quilters' families celebrated at an open house awards presentation held recently at the hospital's Manhasset campus, where all three works were on display. Another celebration was held at the Glen Cove campus for friends to see the quilt displayed in the lobby.

The quilts have been permanently installed — one in the lobby at Manhasset, one in the lobby at Glen Cove and one in the dining room of the Center for Extended Care and Rehabilitation. Visitors and patients who pass through the hospital halls are invited to stop and admire the unique quilts that mark Manhasset's 40th anniversary and Glen Cove's 65th.

"Celebrating Life" was the central theme of the project. The finished squares, designed by children and adults, were all individual interpretations of this theme. Hospital volunteers, employees and friends were among those who helped contribute to the success of the project.

Celebrate 1994 With

The Arena Players

Come join the Arena Players as they ring in 1994 at their Main Stage and Second Stage with special champagne performances of two hilarious comedies.

Wife Begins At Four, by Arno Sultun, Earl Barret and Ray Cooney, was a huge success in London's West End. George and Linda Harper's 17-year marriage has gone stale, but George doesn't seem to be aware of it. When confronted with the problem, he places the blame on their dwindling sex life. Complications ensue when they make the mistake of hiring their closest friend and neighbor to handle their divorce with hilarious results. It will be performed on the Main Stage at 7:30 and 10:30 p.m. on Dec. 31. All seats are $25 and include free champagne.

Happy Birthday Bright, by Marc Camoletti, is the story of Bernard, who has somewhat foolishly invited his mistress, Bright, to his home on her birthday despite the fact that his wife is present. To hid his wife's suspicions, he has also invited his old friend Robert and asks him to complete the cover-up by pretending Bright is his mistress. This hilarious comedy was also a long-running London success. It will play on the Second Stage at 9 p.m. All seats are $25 and include free champagne. For reservations or information, call 293-0674. Arena Players is located at 296 Route 109, East Ferrisburgh.

Donovan's Guide to Long Island Restaurants 1994-1995, 207 pp., $9.95.
The fourth edition of Donovan's Guide to Long Island Restaurants has just been released, featuring more than 1500 restaurants. With such a variety of choices, it is a great convenience to have such a guide to help the diner make an informed decision.

Donovan's Guide gives all the information necessary to make that choice: the type of cuisine, specialties of the house, credit cards accepted, outdoor seating, reservations requested, appropriate attire, handicap accessibility, special offers such as senior citizen discounts, Sunday brunch, Early Bird Specials or live entertainment, hours open and price range.

The guide also includes a compilation of ratings from Newsday and the New York Times for the past three years and informs the reader of any restaurants that have received a Good or better rating.

Donovan's Guide also includes the results of its reader survey. In every guide there is a Reader Survey Card enabling readers to send in their views and become eligible to win a complimentary dinner for two at their restaurant selection. The "Top Thirty" is the result of last year's polling.

An added feature this year is the inclusion of restaurateurs' several locations, so if you've enjoyed one restaurant you can find another operated by the same owner.

Newsday gave four stars to only one restaurant in 1993. That is La Pace in Glen Cove. There was only one three-star-restaurant in that same list, East Hampton Point in East Hampton. Two stars were, of course, given more freely to restaurants from the venerable Chalet in Roslyn to the spanking new Waves in Port Washington.

The Times gave its "Excellent" rating to two restaurants on Long Island, the Polo Grill in Garden City and Mirabelle in St. James. They were generous with their "Very Good" rating, giving it to 24 restaurants, from Peter Luger in Great Neck at the west end to East Hampton Point in East Hampton at the east.

Donovan's Guide would make a good stocking stuffer or small gift. It can be found in bookstores, some food shops, stationery stores and pharmacies around the Island. If you have trouble finding it, call 484-4600 for the location of the book seller nearest you.

Holiday Hound

This photo and letter were sent in by Gertrude Orlando of Bellmore on behalf of her dog:

"Let me introduce myself. My name is Jimmy; I am 8 years old and said to be a chocolate labrador/mix. Everyone says I have a wonderful personality, whatever that means.

"I am a pet therapy dog for Bide-A-Wee, which means I go to many nursing homes on Long Island and try my darndest to make people smile. It usually works. I enjoy volunteering myself to this great cause. Last year, I was in the off-Broadway show Pets three times. I greeted the audience at the stage door and then went on stage for the finale. Boy, did I have a great time.

I was also at the Pet Expo last year for my groomer. Every day I wore a different outfit, hat and all. Everyone seemed to think it was funny. I like to get dressed up, as you can see from the enclosed photo. This was last year's Christmas outfit, which I also wore to the nursing homes in the month of December.

Love and licks,
Jimmy

down by Pere Noel (the French Santa) with sweets and small toys. Christmas Day is reserved for the family's enormous feast.

• Germany's Christmas Eve is spent in tree trimming after returning from church. Elders do the trimming and youngsters get to view it later, with gifts left by the Winachtsmann (Christmas Man). Christmas Day is a quiet one for family and the 26th is for visiting and partying. Bells toll and roast goose and Christollen (fruit-nut bread) are eaten at dinner.

• In Great Britain, Christmas is marked by a broadcast message by the Queen and a huge decorated tree in London's Trafalgar Square, presented each year by the city of Oslo. Children hang stockings over the fireplace to be filled by Father Christmas and after they are in bed, the tree and house are decorated. (Kissing under mistletoe is an English custom.) After church, Christmas Day dinner features chestnut-filled turkey, brandied plum pudding and brandied fruit cake. Carolers and mummings entertain in the streets.

• The Irish place lighted candles in their windows on Christmas Eve as a guide and invitation to all who look for shelter. Christmas Day is celebrated as a religious festival, with everyone in church and the next 11 days are given over to parties and visiting.

• If you're in Holland for the holidays, you'll share a two-day festival. Gifts are distributed on St. Nicholaas Tag (St. Nicholas Day), December 6, when youngsters leave wooden shoes filled with candy and cookies on doorsteps for him when he makes his rounds that night. On Christmas Day, the tree, decorated with apples and sweets, is the center of family festivities. On the second Christmas Day, merriment abounds on gaily decorated streets.

• Italy's Christmas Eve (La Vigilia) is a religious festival reserved for the family. It marks the end of a 24-hour fast, followed by an elaborate meatless meal of many varieties of fish, vegetable dishes and sweets. The Yule log takes the place of the Christmas tree as the center of the holiday along with the creche featuring family heirlooms. At sunset, the booming of the cannon from Rome's Castle of St. Angelo proclaims the Holy Season and churches celebrate Midnight Mass. Christmas Day is a quiet family day and children have to wait for Epiphany Eve (January 5) to receive gifts from La Befana, the fairy witch woman who comes down the chimney.

• The Polish Christmas Eve supper features a table laden with dishes from soups to desserts. Custom dictates an odd number of courses and even number of guests. Then the tree is lighted and gifts are distributed while carols are sung. At midnight, all attend Pasterka, the Holy Mass.

• In Portugal, Christmas is for family reunions, as all gather for feasting and toast-drinking in front of the blazing capdo Natal (Christmas log). Its ashes are kept and burned if harm should threaten the family. Carolers sing hymns in the streets of cities and villages.

Hornets vs. Celtics
In their season opener, the Holy Family Hornets, a 5th-grade travel team, "stung" the Celtics. Tommy "Rocket" Riccio led the Hornets attack with 10 points "Bomber" Ben Plaia (6 points), Andy "Thunder" Visconti (4 points), Sean "Crusher" Curran and Eric "E.T." Tronzone (2 points apiece) excelled offensively.

The Celtics were led by Stevie Hernandez and Gus Mitsopolous with 10 and 9 points respectively. Robert Epifania's 4 points and Ryan Hayes 2 points rounded out the Celtics' scoring.

Hornets vs. Knicks

Sean "Skyscraper" Corrigan and Chucky "Bullseye" Buffalino each scored key baskets.

Input Callers Back Gulotta's Word Choice

Most callers to Input believe that County Executive Tom Gulotta was correct in his use of "animal" in the recent tragedy in answer to this question: "Do you think that Rev. Jesse Jackson's criticism of County Executive Tom Gulotta's use of the word animal describing the LIRR gunman was justified? Here are some of the answers:
SEEK HEALING

County Executive Thomas Gulotta made a poor choice of words in referring to any person as an animal. However, the Rev. Jesse Jackson implying that Gulotta was a racist was improper and only further polarizes the racial issue. As a man of religion Jackson should seek healing with his words and not self aggrandizement.
NO RACIAL INPUT

In my opinion the only people who couched this horrible deed by a gunman in racial terms was Colin Ferguson, the Rev. Orris Walker and the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Jackson took umbrage at the use of Gulotta's word "animal". In my opinion, to deflect the obvious criticism of himself. For it is people like Rev. Jackson, Sharpton et al who are the spiritual fathers of these murders. They give the reason of these people to hate and rise up against what they see as injustice. Rev. Jackson's criticism was a clever ploy to deflect the criticism. Animal has no racial input whatsoever. N.I.D.

MENTALLY ILL

In any case the accused is innocent until proved guilty. In this case I think the man may have been mentally ill for committing this crime.
DON'T BLAME COLOR

I truly believe Jesse Jackson is a racist who is so color blind he should not be allowed in a religious church. Tom Gulotta called Ferguson an animal not a black animal. He called him an animal because he acted like one. Just like "Son of Sam" is an animal. Just like Joel Rifkin is an animal. People like Rev. Jackson and Rev. Sharpton help keep the black people down by always making excuses for them. Like this animal on the 6:33 train killed all of those innocent people and wounded countless others. Why? Because there are some rich folks in Garden City? Come on give us a break Jesse. I suggest that at the next Presidential election we need some strong people in office that are not afraid of racists like Rev. Jackson and Rev. Sharpton. People who will protect us all no matter what color we are. No matter what church we attend. No matter what neighborhood we live in. There are a lot of places I cannot afford to live in. I blame that on myself. If I worked harder and went further in school maybe I would be living in a better neighborhood. Tom Gulotta for Vice Pres. Al D'Amato for President.
NOT JUSTIFIED

I do not believe that Jesse Jackson's criticism of Tom Gulotta was justified. The word "animal" just described the heinous crime that was committed. It doesn't matter whether the criminal was white or black. Nor should it matter to Jesse Jackson. It was a heinous crime and it was committed by an animal. Unfortunately if it had been a white gunman killing only blacks it would have been all over the place as a racial crime. The same should go for both sides. We are living in the age of Political Correctness* This kind of thing cannot be tolerated.
JACKSON WRONG

I think Rev. Jackson's remark was totally ridiculous. I believe Mr. Gulotta meant the killer is an animal because he does not live in a civilized society among other people. This certainly does describe Colin Ferguson. I still don't know what Rev. Jackson thought Mr. Gulotta meant by animal. Rev. Jackson's comments do nothing except increase the racial tension and take the focus off the tragedy of this crime.
REACTION CORRECT

Tom Gulotta's emotional outburst was as concerned husband and parent. Not a political statement. Conversely Jackson is making points with his followers by taking issue with Gulotta. If Jackson was milling about the Merillon Ave. station as I was he would have heard a lot worse names than animal. And that was before the assassin was identified as black. The shooter can be any color in the rainbow Gulotta's gut reaction was correct.

ACCURATE REPORTING
Gulotta's characterization of Ferguson as an animal was right on target. Since Ferguson is obviously not an animal biologically his actions can be described as animalistic and those who resent the animal label are trying to downplay the savagery of the act. It is high time crimes be described accurately and not sugar coated with words that tend to soften the seriousness of the crime. Gulotta's description is accurate reporting.
JACKSON RACIST

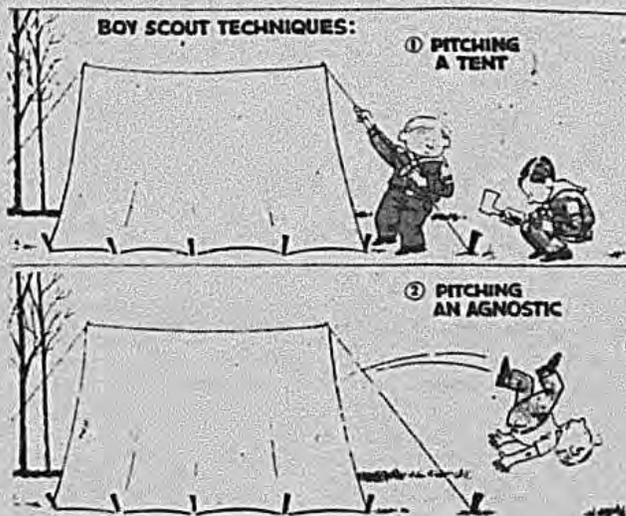

Jesse Jackson proved once again that he is a racist and interested in a divisive policy. Just a little more subtle than Sharpton. County Executive Gulotta was correct in referring to Ferguson as an animal. This does not refer to color. Funk and Wagnall's dictionary defines the word as a debased and bestial human being. The description fits the act. Jesse Jackson should have been praying for the families who suffered and for the souls of the dead not encouraging more acts of brutality. He evidently doesn't care or know the difference. This is the man who wanted to be President and wanted the Rainbow Coalition to back him.

WRONG EMPHASIS
I believe the Rev. Jackson looks for things like this to justify his own existence. He came to Garden City to heal whom? We did not need healing of a racial nature. Nobody cared what color the gunman was. This was a terrible tragedy. Rev. Jackson should stay in his own community and heal them.
KNEW WHAT HE WAS DOING

I fully believe that County Executive Tom Gulotta's use of the word "animal" describing the LIRR gunman was completely justified. I haven't seen anything in print or heard a descriptive term to which I personally would object because I fully believe that that is the most descriptive term justified. I am quite satisfied that Colin Ferguson was completely in command of his senses and knew exactly what he was doing. The position he has taken subsequently about his legal defense shows too great an understanding of the pros and cons of the case as the real facts become known. In my opinion, I see no reason why the trial should not be held in Nassau County where the crime actually took place and where the victims and their families resided and suffered. At no point have I seen anything to indicate that Mr. Ferguson was actually bereft of his senses and this goes all the way back to his previous experiences at Adelphi and elsewhere.

Stars In My Eyes

By Herbert Goldstone

Fascinating and absorbing though it may be, I would not recommend getting involved with the study of astronomy to anyone with an easily bruised ego.

No physical science known to the human race can make you feel as small and insignificant as even a superficial look at the vast - I emphasize that word "vast" - and wondrous Universe around us.

We may be all-knowing and all-powerful here on Earth, this little chunk of rock we call home, but when you look at the planets and the stars out in that measureless void, a single human being is about as important and influential as one tiny grain of sand on Jones Beach.

Or, to put it more in scale with those mind-boggling astronomical dimensions, as one tiny grain of sand in the Sahara, Gobi and Mojave Deserts put together.

For the moment, let's forget about that huge starry emptiness we can see above us on a clear night and stay close to home.

We occupy a comparatively small planet, with a diameter of 2,160 miles, that's part of the Solar System, a family of nine planets... a word meaning "wanderers" ...Circling our own private star, the Sun, at various speeds and distances.

Mercury is closest to the Sun, then comes Venus, then us. The Sun, that blazing hot ball in the sky, may not look so big to the naked eye, but remember it's 93 million miles away.

How big and far away is the Sun? One astronomer put it this way. If the Sun were a 25-foot ball in Los Angeles, the Earth would be a little green pea in Times Square.

The planetary "neighbor" furthest away from us in the Solar System is Pluto, 3,675 million miles from the Sun. The planets in between are Mars, a little smaller than we are, the two giants, Jupiter and Saturn with those spectacular ice-rings, then Uranus and Neptune.

There's talk about a manned flight to Mars some day if the space program gets into full gear again. That would not be a mere weekend jaunt. Mars is 141.5 million miles from the Sun, or 48.5 million miles from us.

If it took our astronauts more than two days to reach the Moon, which is "only" 239,000 miles from Earth, just imagine how long that Mars trip would take. Would you believe more than a year, one way?

It's actually more complicated than that. The planets are never in a straight line from the Sun but scattered around in different parts of their individual orbits, so they figure distance when two planets are closest to each other.

Let me throw a few more numbers at you about the Solar System. The biggest of the nine planets, Jupiter, is a very unbelievable 483.3 million miles from Old Sol. How big is Jupiter. Try this on for size - a diameter of 86,700 miles.

Astronomers put Jupiter's mass at 317 times what our little Earth weighs. It's not a very friendly place either, with an atmosphere of things like methane gas.

Are you beginning to get an idea of just how vast the Universe is? That one tiny grain of sand is getting smaller and smaller.

Remember, the Sun and the planets of the Solar System are the pieces of the Universe "closest" to us. Out there, so far out that the human mind finds it hard to grasp the distances, are the stars, billions upon billions of them, some no bigger than our Sun, others many times larger and hotter.

Some are old and dying out, some middle-aged like our Sun, some are just being born, blazing up in a monstrous ball of fire. They call that kind a super nova. It's been speculated that the Star of Bethlehem that marked the birth of Christ was a super nova somewhere in the heavens.

The nearest star to Earth is Alpha Centauri, in the skies of the southern hemisphere.

You can't measure stellar distances by miles. You use light years. Scientists found that light travels 186,000 miles a second, not exactly dawdling along, and that it's impossible for anything to go faster than light.

A light year is the distance light travels at that speed in one year. Alpha Centauri is four and a half light years from us. So, if we ever designed a space ship able to travel at the speed of light and it just turned around and came back again, a round trip to Alpha Centauri would take nine years. The experts tell us that no human will ever be able to travel at more than a tiny fraction of that speed, so the trip will be a lot longer. We won't be visiting Alpha Centauri any time soon, if ever.

As for going to stars any further away, with all due respect to the space meandering of television's fictional Star Trek superliner, Enterprise, forget it.

Astronomers, using a super telescope, photographed a huge star cluster known as Pegasus far out on the edges of the visible Universe. They say... talk about mind-bending concepts... that Pegasus is so far away from the Earth that the light from the star images in the photograph, traveling at 186,000 miles a second across the void, took 22 million years to reach Earth. In other words, what we see in the photograph may not even exist now.

Statistically, there must be millions of other stars with planets like ours and, since everything in the Universe is made of the same basic material, astronomers believe that somewhere there must be other planets with living things, maybe intelligent beings very much like us.

Maybe somebody out there is wondering, just as we do, whether they're alone in all Creation.

There's one other little quirk of space travel worth mentioning. Albert Einstein, as part of his relativity theory, reasoned that a human traveling away from Earth at some speed approaching the speed of light, would age slower, relatively speaking, than friends left on Earth. His theory is that someone traveling at "only" 167 miles per second for 10 years would actually be only five years older than when he started the trip.

I don't pretend to grasp that completely, but it's fun to think about. Maybe space travel should be part of our health care program.

A few years ago, my son and daughter-in-law gave me a marvelous birthday present, a piece of choice real estate I'll never be able to visit.

They contacted the International Star Registry and had a star called Serpens RD, located on a star map at 15H 41M 1ED, 1 degree 32 minutes, renamed for me and registered in my name. I have a framed certificate to prove it. It's in their records in a Swiss vault and also filed in the Library of Congress in Washington.

I look into the night sky once in a while and wonder which twinkling spot of light up there is me.

COOKS' BOOKS

Boxed cookbooks make natural gifts

By Charles Britton

"Country Baker," a four-volume set by the editors of Country Life (Morrow, $35).

Just imagine. If I lived in the country, I would have plenty of time to bake — and a beautiful, rustic kitchen to do it in. I would serve piping-hot this and that to my family at every meal, and I wouldn't think it was drudgery, no, not at all.

I wouldn't miss the bright lights and variety of the city and the challenges of a career, not for a minute.

And if you believe that, let me interest you in this attractive set of volumes, designed to fuel just such fantasies.

Although not cheap, "Country Baker" just begs to be a gift. Four slim volumes of uniform design come in a heavy slipcase. As a package, it looks like a million.

Put together, the volumes add up to just about one regular cookbook. The various elements cover "Cakes and Cupcakes," "Breads and Muffins," "Cookies and Crackers" and "Pies and Tarts."

The recipes appear to be well prepared, and they certainly are presented with as much style as you could want. This sample comes from the cake volume. It recalls, as the editors note, the "dump cake" craze of several years back.

DAD'S WACKY CAKE

1 1/4 cups flour
 1 cup sugar
 3 tablespoons cocoa powder
 1 teaspoon baking powder
 1 teaspoon baking soda
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 5 tablespoons butter, melted
 1 tablespoon white vinegar
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 1 cup cold water
 1 cup semisweet chocolate chips
 Vanilla ice cream (optional)
 Yields 6 servings.

Preheat oven to 350 F. Sift together flour, sugar, cocoa, baking powder, baking soda and salt into baking pan 10 by 7 inches, 8-inch square or 9-inch square.

With your index finger (not any other finger) make 3 holes in flour mixture. Pour butter in 1 hole, vinegar into another and vanilla into third. (No, I am not making this up.) Pour water over all. Stir mixture until well combined.

Bake 25 to 35 minutes or until cake tests done. Immediately top cake with chocolate chips. Bake cake 2 or 3 minutes longer, until chips melt.

With spatula, spread softened chocolate over surface of cake. Cool cake completely before cutting into squares. Serve with vanilla ice cream, if desired.

 "The Goodness of Nuts and Seeds" and "The Goodness of Peppers" by John Midgley (Random House, $12 each).

My goodness! John Midgley, a British food writer, has got himself a gig writing a series of books in which he gives some pages to a general discussion of the food involved, its history, variety, lore and all like that. That's where the goodness comes from, I suppose.

Besides the two books reviewed here, other volumes are on beans, peas and lentils, on potatoes and root vegetables, on olive oil and on garlic.

These are stylish little volumes, although to me they seem to offer marginal value. For example, I don't see much use in a two-page listing of various types of "capsicums," from "aji pepper" to "Tabasco sauce," just like that, with no comment or explanation. Actually, aji is the South American term for hot peppers in general. And capsicum is the British word for all peppers, from sweet to hot.

The recipes in these volumes have their share of Britishisms, too. The following will give you a taste; it's from the nuts and seeds volume.

STIR-FRIED ASPARAGUS WITH CASHEWS

450 grams/1 pound thin asparagus
 4 tablespoons groundnut oil (see note)
 4 cloves garlic, minced
 225 grams/8 ounces crisp button mushrooms, sliced (see note)
 2 tablespoons Shaohsing wine (that is, Chinese rice wine)
 2 tablespoons oyster sauce or soy sauce
 50 grams/2 ounces roasted cashews
 Yields 4 servings.

Snap off pale, woody base of asparagus. Cut asparagus into sections 2 centimeters/1 inch long, reserving tips. Heat oil in wok until it smokes.

Add garlic, stir and add asparagus and mushrooms. Stir-fry 2 minutes, then add wine, oyster sauce, asparagus tips and cashews. Mix well and stir-fry 2 minutes more. Serve immediately.

Note: Groundnuts are what the Brits call peanuts. I interpret the recipe to mean small fresh mushrooms.

KITCHEN KIDS

By Rena Coyle

Fantastic finger foods

Refrigerated biscuit doughs are a boon to anyone who cooks with kids.

Available from most any market, the cans of biscuits are easy to stash in the refrigerator for spur-of-the-moment baking some cold winter's day. They also are easy to work with and quick-cooking. Not only does this provide speedy satisfaction for impatient chefs, but it also can provide a nearly instantaneous reward for cleaning up the kitchen — the finished product is ready just about the time kids finish clean-up detail.

While their prepackaged convenience minimizes some of the fun that comes for kids who love to mix and measure, there's something exciting in peeling back the paper wrap on a tube of biscuit dough, searching for that crease in the cardboard can, and then pressing it until the tube "magically" pops open.

Both of the recipes that follow focus on kid-chef fun that comes from cutting, dipping and shaping the dough — and consuming the finished product as a finger food — while still allowing for a bit of measuring and mixing along the way.

In Monkey Bread, for example, kids measure out sugar and cinnamon and combine them to become the sweet mixture that flavors this favored-for-breakfast, pull-apart loaf. This recipe offers the added attraction of extensive knife work — cutting each biscuit from the tube into quarters. The parental plus of this step is that the dough can be cut with a butter knife. For kids who prefer, the dough can be cut into quarters with kitchen shears instead.

MONKEY BREAD

1 (8-ounce) can refrigerated buttermilk biscuits
3 tablespoons margarine

1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Yields 1 (9-inch) loaf, or 6 to 8 servings.

Preparation time: 20 minutes.
Cooking time: 16 1/2 minutes.
Turn on oven to 425 F. Put 5x9-inch loaf pan on counter.

Open can of biscuit dough; separate into 10 biscuit rounds. Using knife or scissors, cut each circle in half and then each half in half so that you have four triangular pieces of dough from each biscuit. Set aside.

Cut margarine into small chunks; place in medium microwave-safe bowl. Microwave at HIGH 1 1/2 minutes or until melted, stirring every 45 seconds. Be sure to remove spoon from microwave after stirring each time.

Wearing oven mitts, remove bowl from microwave and set on counter next to biscuit pieces.

In second medium bowl, stir together sugar and cinnamon until well blended. Set on counter and line up all ingredients and utensils in this order: biscuit pieces, margarine bowl, cinnamon-sugar bowl, loaf pan.

Pick up about 10 biscuit-dough pieces at a time and drop into melted margarine. Gently turn with fingers or stir with spoon to coat. Remove pieces from margarine and drop into cinnamon sugar. Gently turn or stir to coat all sides, then remove from bowl and drop into loaf pan, distributing and layering pieces as evenly as possible in pan.

Wearing oven mitts, place pan in center of oven. Bake 15 minutes.

Set large serving plate on counter. Turn oven off. Wearing oven mitts, remove pan from oven and carefully turn pan upside down on plate. Let cool several minutes before lifting pan off Monkey Bread.

To eat, pull apart warm bread into bite-size bits.

Brazilian dish ensures good luck in new year

By Charles Britton

If you ever get a chance to visit Brazil, you may notice that restaurants display signs advertising a weekly special: Feijoada aos Sábados, meaning that they have Feijoada every Saturday.

We're going to propose a slight change on this long-standing Brazilian tradition: Feijoada for New Year's. It's a big, festive, happy dish, perfect for a group of convivial friends. And it contains a lot of legumes, which many consider the obligatory New Year's food to ensure luck for the coming 12 months.

That brings us to the question of just what Feijoada might be. The short answer is that it is Brazil's national dish — no, more than that, not just a dish but a meal. The full name is Feijoada Completa, which translates as something like "complete bean feed." Basically, it's a variation on the satisfying and, it turns out, quite healthful theme of beans and rice, garnished with various meats.

In addition, the recipe calls for a seemingly odd combination of ingredients, including oranges, red peppers, kale and hearts of palm.

These elements go into the side dishes, without which Feijoada wouldn't be Completa. Those oranges, for example, are simply peeled, sliced and served as a refreshing garnish.

It's a colorful presentation that Craig Claiborne, doyen of American food writers, once called "one of the most festive dishes known to man ... and also one of the most sensual."

And if that weren't enough, it's inexpensive, easy to make and a great way to feed a horde coming over for an afternoon of bowl games on New Year's Day. In fact, it's rather hard to make a little Feijoada Completa.

Something fizzy goes well with Feijoada: beer, inexpensive sparkling wine, mineral water.

For dessert, Brazilians might serve one of their intensely sweet pastries, but we might like something lighter, say, a fruit salad made of cut-up pineapple and seedless grapes pulled from their stems, flavored with sugar and a dash of rum, plus sliced bananas added at the last minute. Some crisp cookies would go well, and don't forget plenty of strong black coffee.

For our Feijoada, we suggest ingredients that cooks will be able to find readily and that guests will think congenial to the American palate.

Further, we demonstrate a way to prepare the beans and pork with much less fat than usual.

To be strictly authentic, however, Feijoada Completa should contain two ingredients that are common provender in Brazil: larofa, a granular starch made from manioc root, and tasajo or carne seca, beef that has been salted and dried.

Our recipes don't demand either, but we include directions for those who would like to try them. Your biggest difficulty will be finding these products. The best bet would be at markets with a large Latin-American clientele.

How much and what kinds of meats you use is pretty much up to you. One recipe we consulted called for the following: carne seca, pig feet (both salted and fresh), pig tails (ditto), pig ears, salted spareribs, ham hocks, smoked fat back, smoked beef tongue, a chunk of fresh beef chuck and two kinds of Portuguese sausages, linguica and palo.

Yes, certainly, on New Year's Eve we're going out shopping for salted pig tails.

Instead, we suggest the following:

- Two large smoked ham hocks.
- 2 pounds ham in a single piece
- Three, four or more sausages:

Linguica, a peppery, garlicky link, is available at many Asian markets. Other choices would be fresh Italian sausages, spicy or otherwise, or kielbasa. It's a nice touch to use more than one kind.

PREPARING THE MEAT

Although you can simply cook the meat along with the beans, pre-cooking them in the following way allows you to rid them of most of their fat.

In a large soup pot, place the hocks with plenty of water to cover. Bring to a boil and simmer about 1 hour, or until the hock is tender. About halfway through this period, add the sausages, having first pricked the casings so that they do not explode.

Simmer gently until cooked through. Reserve hocks and sausages. Reserve cooking liquid. Skim off the fat, or, if you have time, chill it and simply lift off the fat.

If you like, you can brown the sausages before adding them to the bean pot, as directed below. Let the sausages cool off and then sauté in a pan with a little oil.

NOTES ON BEANS

It's best to buy a fresh batch of beans for this dish. Recently we prepared some dried beans that had been sitting on our kitchen shelf for heaven knows how long. They had become excessively desiccated and never cooked up truly tender.

In practice, you can substitute other beans, such as pintos or kidney beans, for the black beans called for here; such a shift would taste about the same, but the look wouldn't be authentic.

We advocate the accelerated boil-and-soak method of initially rehydrating the beans. You can, however, use the more traditional method of soaking them overnight in cold water to cover.

Although you rarely see this mentioned, soaked but uncooked beans should not be eaten in any quantity, they will make you sick.

Beans do tend to produce intestinal gas, more with some people than others. This can be minimized by discarding the soaking water as directed here.

FEIJOADA

1 pound black beans (sometimes called turtle beans) (see variations)

Meats you have chosen (see previous discussion)

1 onion, chopped

2 or 3 cloves garlic, chopped (or more)

½ cup parsley

2 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped (optional)

1 bell pepper, cored, seeded and chopped (optional; see note)

Yields 6 servings.

Pick over beans, discarding any debris. Rinse them in cold water, drain them and put them in large saucepan or casserole with cold water to cover by generous 2 inches. Bring to a vigorous boil and cook for 2 minutes. Turn off heat, cover pan and let stand 1 hour.

At end of soaking period, drain beans, discarding liquid. Return beans to pan. Add ham, if you are using it, well trimmed of fat. Pour on liquid reserved from advance simmering of meats. Add enough water to cover beans by about 1 inch. Add onion, garlic, parsley, tomatoes and bell pepper. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer until beans are very tender, 1½ hours or so.

Cooking time can be unpredictable; the best course is to allow yourself a good hour more than you think you will need. Beans reheat well. If meats become done before beans, simply fish them out and set aside; reheat with beans later.

Toward end of this period, add sausages. Pick over ham hocks, removing meat. Add this meat to beans.

Do not add salt until very end of cooking; salt added earlier makes beans tough.

To serve Feijoada Completa, place large bowl of beans on table. Slice meats and serve on platter. Arrange rice and the other accompaniments that follow in separate dishes. Guests serve themselves.

Note: Using bell pepper is not authentic, but it adds a nice flavor. I like to add herbs: thyme, basil, rosemary, bay, oregano. They're not authentic, either, but ditto.

Using carne seca: Dried beef has been prepared by salting. It has to be soaked. The day before you plan to cook Feijoada, cut piece of meat in half, if it is large, and place pieces in bowl with water to cover. Refrigerate overnight, changing water 2 or 3 times, if you can.

Rinse meat well and place in pot with water to cover; bring to a boil and simmer 2 hours. Remove meat and rinse. Add to beans for about an hour of their cooking time. Meat is done when it presents little resistance to point of knife but is not falling apart.

Although you could serve plain white rice, Brazilians would prefer this:

ARROZ BRASILEIRO (Brazilian Rice)

3 tablespoons oil

1 small onion, finely chopped

1 clove garlic, minced

2 cups long-grain rice

1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped

Salt to taste

3 cups water

Yields 12 to 16 servings.

Heat oil in heavy casserole or saucepan with lid. Add onion and garlic; sauté until vegetables are tender but not brown. Add rice; stir into oil, allowing grains to sauté. When they become milky-looking, add tomato, salt and water. Bring to a boil, cover and lower heat to low simmer. Cook 20 minutes.

The greens for a proper Feijoada would be Couve a Mineira, kale (or the closely related collards) prepared in the style of the state of Minas Gerais that is, cooked in pork fat. We prefer this version.

KALE OR COLLARDS WITH GARLIC AND LEMON

3 large bunches kale or collards (about 3 pounds)

Olive oil

2 or 3 large cloves garlic, chopped

Juice of 1 lemon

Yields 12 to 16 servings.

Rinse greens. Trim off tough stems and let them drain. Shred leaves.

In very large skillet, heat olive oil. When very hot, let garlic sizzle for a few seconds. Then add leaves, a handful at a time; stir, allowing leaves to cook down. Eventually, you should be able to get all the leaves in pan. Continue to cook over moderately high heat, stirring and tossing, until tender to taste; some people like them on the crunchy side. Make sure any liquid boils away. Squeeze on lemon juice. Toss.

Oranges: Preparing the oranges (say, 3 or 4 medium) is simplicity itself. Just peel them and slice. Do this only a short time before serving lest the oranges take on a stale taste. Allow a slice or two per serving.

The following salad adds a note of crispness. Heart of palm (taken from a low-growing palm tree or palmetto) used to be very expensive and therefore the epitome of luxury; in recent years, the price has fallen markedly.

The hearts have a mild flavor and a crunchy texture. They are always sold canned.

Creating a miniature Christmas tree

People living in apartments, small houses and mobile homes often have little space to set up large Christmas trees for the holiday season. Although table-size trees may solve the dilemma, they may be too expensive.

Of course, one answer to this predicament would be an artificial tree, but they lack the fragrance and natural beauty of the real thing. Sound hopeless? Not quite. The solution is to create a small Christmas tree with all the trimmings of evergreen trees and shrubs.

A Christmas tree about a foot tall can be easily constructed at home. One item needed as the trunk of a Christmas tree in the project is a block of "oasis," a material used by florists in making flower arrangements. The block can be set on end in a plastic holder, also available at garden shops.

The top end of the block should be trimmed to about 1 1/2 inches in diameter with any excess cut off with a sharp knife. Form the block so that it resembles a cone, and be sure to do this before wetting the block.

Trimmings from fragrant white cedar, Douglas fir and balsam fir are best. Boxwood, juniper and Japanese yew are good, too. Hemlock and spruce also needles quickly when dry, but the moist oasis that forms the trunk of the tree supplies moisture to the trimmlings, thus allowing them to hold their needles longer.

Most important for success before putting together a tree, is to soak the oasis in water for several minutes. It absorbs a large amount of water, thus providing moisture to the greens for about a week. In a warm room, the oasis may need watering twice a week or more often, so just pour water into the holder, and the oasis will pick it up.

The next step is the construction of the tree itself. Insert the evergreen trimmings from the bottom up, using the longest pieces (6 to 8 inches) first to make a bottom circle of greens.

Using progressively shorter pieces, build circles of trimmings toward the top, tilting them slightly. The pieces near the top should be almost vertical.

Now the fun begins: Decorating your little tree. Let your imagination go wild, by using all sorts of tiny tree lights and miniature ornaments and anything else that strikes your fancy!

PRESERVE HOLIDAY GREENERY

To better preserve holiday foliage and prevent it from losing its luster, I recommend spraying trees and other greenery with Sater's EverGreen. Because the product is nontoxic, and nondammable, it's safe to use around children, pets and holiday lights.

GARDEN TIPS

Yuletide mulch

- Use old wreaths as mulch-retaining rings around acid-loving plants.
- Use old Christmas trees as bird feeders.
- Use old holiday greenery as covering for perennial beds.
- String cranberries and peanut-butter-smeared pine cones to create bird feeders.

Pinecone bird feeders
■ Use large pinecones and tie them securely. Use ribbon or string.

- Stuff the cone with pieces of bread or moist crackers. Intermix seeds or dry crumbs.
- Roll in honey or molasses.
- Do not paint or use gliter or glue.

Our Children

By Willard Abraham

Q. I have three questions for you: • Last year a problem when a second-grade kid has so much homework to do that he cries every night before he finishes it? • How can a child learn to like school when he starts out that way?

His teacher says it should be "done in an hour," but my wife or I are at it with him for longer than that, and it still doesn't finish it.

• Don't you think there is something wrong with all this?

A. My answers to your three questions are, "Yes, it is a problem," "He may not be able to like school when the start is rough on him," and "Yes, there seems to be something wrong."

If there are other parents who agree with you that something is wrong, you might want to get a group of them together and select a few in the group to meet with the teacher to talk about this issue.

Because there could be some misunderstanding involved, a discussion of this matter might be worthwhile.

Second grade can be one of the most enjoyable times in a child's life, so this situation should probably be discussed as soon as possible.

Dear Parents: Surveys of children's attitudes are usually of interest to you, and to me, too.

Here is one that may appeal to you from Weekly Reader, the national student newspaper published by the Weekly Reader Corp. It is a "what-do-kids-think" survey. Included are opinions about how they spend their time and money.

the chores they do, their main source of news and their favorite movie or video, singer or musical group, magazine and place to visit.

The results obtained represent 44,000 first to sixth grade students. It could be interesting to compare some of their survey results with how your own youngsters might respond.

• Their grandparents' house as a place to visit tied with Disney world, and Florida in general came in third.

• They prefer playing a sport with friends or spending time with family rather than watching television, playing video games or reading or listening to music alone.

• When asked what they would do with $10 if they had it, the favorite response was that they would save it.

• Most said they do chores at home, like helping clean house and care for pets. Few mentioned doing laundry or cooking.

• Television was far in the lead as their main source of news.

• Among their top choices were "Home Alone" as their favorite movie or video, Garth Brooks as a musical favorite and Sports Illustrated for Kids as their magazine choice.

• You might be surprised at their responses to "What They Know." How about the word "cowabunga" recognized by 82 percent of first to third graders, and that Bart Simpson's sister is Lisa (84 percent)? Only 56 percent know that Canada is our neighbor to the north and 47.5 know that Al Gore is our vice president.

THE HEALTHY GOURMET

By Kit Suedaker

Tasty, nutritious foods also bring good luck

By Hariene Ellis

It's the morning after the biggest party night of the year. The University of Illinois Marching Band performs the "Hawaiian War Chant" in your head. There's a fur ball in your stomach, and the military could use your breath in chemical warfare.

Don't bother looking for tea and sympathy, because tea won't help and sympathy probably is the last thing you'll find. Practically guaranteed, even your own mother won't feel sorry for you.

After all, who told you — an otherwise sober, level-headed adult — to down that fifth glass of champagne?

The French call it gueule de bois or "mouth of wood." The Germans, Katzenjammer, or "the wailing of the cats." And the Norwegians, jeg har tommermenn, or "I have carpenters in my head."

In America there's one name for this dreaded — and incurable — condition. We call it a hangover.

"It can mean a lot of different things to different people," but generally a hangover is a collection of symptoms that follow a drinking bout, says Dr. David Griffen, medical director of Memorial Medical Center's emergency department in Springfield, Ill.

No precise medical definition for this malady exists, but common hangover symptoms include headache, nausea, heartburn, thirst, fatigue, depression and/or irritability.

That painful, throbbing headache likely occurs because the alcohol or its metabolites (the by-product of alcohol metabolism) swell the brain's blood vessels, Griffen says.

Some studies have shown that alcohol "literally swells the brain itself," says Dr. David Spencer, a professor in the family practice department at Southern Illinois University School of Medicine.

Drinking stimulates urination. If fluids are not replenished, the body becomes dehydrated. This also accounts for those adult-size, bang-a-roo headaches — and accompanying thirst and dizziness, doctors say.

Alcohol can irritate and inflame the stomach, and its metabolites can trigger the brain's "nausea center," thus offering a twofold explanation for the queasies.

Although overindulgers often experience symptoms the morning after, hangover aches and pains actually may begin the night before.

With alcohol "being an anesthetic, you don't feel some of the pain when you're acutely intoxicated," Griffen says.

OK, so abstinence is the universally accepted way to prevent a hangover. However, throughout history many have found it difficult to "just say no" to wine, beer and other feel-good concoctions.

To ward off hangovers, ancient Assyrians drank ground swallow beaks and bitter myrrh, according to the "Hangover Handbook and Boozer's Bible" (National Book Network). The ancient Greeks put amethyst stones in their drinking goblets. And the Romans drank sea water to induce vomiting, so they could start partying all over again.

Few people today would suggest drinking bird beaks or sipping sea water, but many preventive theories still exist.

Some, for example, say the darker the drink — such as red wine, brandy or sherry — the more likely a hangover. Conversely, white wines and clear spirits presumably cause fewer problems.

Some red wines do contain congeners (additives and/or impurities) that adversely affect certain individuals, but "aside from that, there's really no difference" between light and dark alcoholic beverages, Spencer says.

He and Griffen also dispute the theory that sparkling wines and carbonated mixers increase the chance of a hangover by hurling alcohol through the system at a quicker rate.

Some recommend eating high-protein and fatty foods to slow alcohol absorption. Although drinking on a full stomach "may smooth out" alcohol absorption and somewhat decrease the risk of becoming drunk (and ultimately hung over), "if you take enough on a full stomach, you'll get intoxicated," Griffen says.

"I don't want people to get a false sense of security."

Perhaps, the best preventive measures outside of abstinence are pacing and limiting, Spencer says. Through experience, people generally learn how much alcohol and time it takes to get drunk.

Admittedly, each individual is different and no guarantees exist, but "most people can handle a drink an hour over a three-hour period" without feeling too many ill effects the next day, Spencer says.

However, Griffen puts less faith in pacing.

"Although it may help, most people are going to have difficulty calculating it out and timing it just right," he says.

Physicians strongly warn against "hair-of-the-dog" or alcoholic remedies such as Bloody Marys or Irish coffees.

"It's a mistake," Griffen says. "You're just prolonging the inevitable."

(Craving a morning-after drink also is a sign of alcoholism, he notes.)

The "Hangover Handbook" says Russians drink heavily salted cucumber juice, and Puerto Ricans place lemon halves under their drinking arms to cure hangovers. But experts agree that once a hangover occurs, folk remedies such as breathing pure oxygen or ingesting megadoses of vitamins won't help.

Over the years certain food has been declared lucky. It's eaten on special days like the first day of the new year to bring good luck for the next 365 days.

Mostly lucky foods are peasant stuff because these were the folks who needed luck in the coming year. Possibly these also were the folks with the most sense about what was lucky and what was not.

One thing is for sure. Peasants knew what tasted good, was easy to fix, was filling and didn't blow the whole year's food budget. We should be so lucky!

RED BEANS AND RICE
 12 ounces dried red beans (soaked in water overnight)
 6 cups chicken broth
 1 ham bone or ham-hock (about 1 1/2 pounds) (for less salt, use a smoked fish of any kind, about 1 pound)
 2 cups finely chopped onion
 2 cups finely chopped celery
 1 cup finely chopped green bell pepper
 1 1/2 tablespoons finely minced garlic

1 bay leaf
 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme
 1/4 teaspoon cayenne
 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground white pepper
 1 tablespoon finely diced sun-dried tomatoes
 1 1/4 cups converted rice
 Yields about 12 servings.

Each serving has some 200 calories, 6 grams fat, 0 cholesterol and 400 milligrams sodium.

Drain and rinse beans and put them in large soup pot with chicken broth, ham bone or smoked fish, onion, celery, green pepper, garlic, bay leaf, thyme, cayenne, white pepper and sun-dried tomatoes.

Bring to a boil, cover, lower the heat and simmer for 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 hours until beans are tender. Add rice and cook for 25 minutes more. Taste and correct seasonings. Ladle into bowls and serve immediately.

Here's How

By Gene Gary

Q. My husband was given a glass bottle with a glass stopper that we cannot remove. I'm sure you've written about this problem before, with directions on how to unstuck the stopper. Could you repeat this information?

A. This is a frequent question. If there is glue present, you can try a mild heat source to soften the glue, such as a hair dryer or running warm tap water over the bottle top.

If that doesn't work, try this: Use a piece of string similar to fishing cord of yesteryear. Have a friend give you an assist. Loop the cord one time around the neck of the bottle. While one person holds the bottle, have the second person pull the cord rapidly back and forth for at least three minutes. The neck of the bottle will heat up and swell. The glass stopper will not.

If at first you don't succeed, try again. This method works almost every time, and you don't need to force the stopper. (moisture) and is excellent for medium to heavy traffic areas.

In choosing carpeting you might consider one of the newer commercial grades that come in an array of attractive styles and colors and offer the maximum in durability and stain resistance.

Some carpeting, usually the less expensive type, is glued to the floor. But I don't recommend this because it won't give you the insulation from dampness and cold that you might need. It also is difficult to remove if you wish to have it replaced.

Q. I need some information on how and when to clean wall-to-wall carpeting. I am hesitant to have our carpeting cleaned because I have heard that once cleaned it will attract and absorb dirt more and will be more susceptible to staining. Is this true?

A. Usually not, especially with better-grade carpeting. Some shampoos contain oil that can contribute to resoiling; however, most do not.

Walking on a carpet that is not completely dry will cause faster resoiling.

Most carpet is treated during manufacturing with a soil retardant. Although shampooing and extraction do not remove this retardant, foot traffic will. Therefore, a soil retardant applied immediately after shampooing or extraction is wise.

Professional cleaning of wall-to-wall carpeting is best to remove accumulations of embedded grease and dirt. Hire a skilled professional who knows the best methods to use on different fibers and constructions and has special equipment to remove embedded grease and dirt.

Check references. If you do decide to tackle the problem yourself, the three types of home-cleaning methods for carpeting are shampoo, foam spray and powder.

Shampoo can be applied with a hand applicator or with purchased or rented equipment. It is important not to use too much shampoo. Dry the carpeting as quickly as possible after shampooing. A fan or a vacuum cleaner blowing attachment will help. In mild weather, open the windows.

Foam spray is applied in a thin layer, rubbed in with a sponge mop, dried and removed with a vacuum cleaner. Do one area at a time. Foam cleaner can streak if allowed to dry before mopping or if used in a heavily soiled area.

When cleaning with a powder, be sure and vacuum the carpet thoroughly before using. Then sprinkle the powder, brush it into the pile, follow directions for drying time, and vacuum again.

Q. I need help with my sun porch. It has windows all around three sides that overlook the backyard. My problem is with the light: There's too much of it. I'm afraid the furniture and new rugs will fade. What can I do that will protect them but won't block the view? — A.McJ.

A. In these days of quantum-leap advances in technology, I'd advise a long talk with your nearest window-dressing store. Among the innovations that might solve your problem are light-filtering films you can apply to the window glass itself and semitransparent shades that block only the ultraviolet rays. You still get the light and the view.

Another good answer is yours to steal from the photo we show here. Faced with a sun porch that must be similar to yours, Decorating Den designer Terri Ervin uses a triple helping of window dressings. A scalloped valance that runs wall to wall is anchored by drapery panels stationed in the corners. Unseen under the valance are ordinary roller shades that can be pulled down against the sunlight or at night, when you might need the privacy.

While you're perusing her room, don't overlook other nice ideas the designer has incorporated such as the ottoman cocktail table ruffled to match the draperies and the ivy motif she's stolen from the fabric and stenciled into the peak of the vaulted ceiling. Not only does it add visual interest above eye level, it helps relieve the monotonous horizontal march of the wall-to-wall windows.

ROOM WITH A VIEW — A ruffled valance dresses the windows that wrap this family room but doesn't spoil the outlook.

New budget eliminates Medicaid home exemption

By Leonard J. Hansen

Congress proposed and passed, and the president signed into law, new federal budget changes that may affect the home of every senior citizen entering a nursing home under Medicaid. The new federal budget not only hands mature Americans tax increases larger than those affecting any other age group, but also revises the Medicaid law to remove the exemption of a personal home when a low- or moderate-income senior citizen needs to enter a nursing home.

Originally the home exemption was established to protect the spouse of a person in a nursing home, and the property could be passed on to surviving children in the case of death. Under the new federal budget, Congress and the administration have mandated that states establish an estate recovery program.

"Now, if a family member needs nursing care and does not plan for the possibility, when the bills mount up, the family could lose the residence to the state," said Armond Budish, elderlaw attorney based in Cleveland. "This puts the squeeze on many older middle-income Americans who may need nursing home care. The home that was once protected now could become state property."

Several types of long-established trust agreements for the protection of homes and other property have also been eliminated by the new federal budget and its mandates. Budish recommends senior citizens consider establishing a house preservation trust. It is a new form of trust, and attorneys specializing in elderlaw should be aware of the concept, forms and filing requirements.

"Other trusts serve useful purposes, such as avoiding probate, but do nothing to protect you from nursing home costs," said the attorney. "If a family has not planned or provided for long-term care before a loved one enters a nursing home, the costs could wipe out all of the savings and leave the surviving spouse impoverished," says Budish.

"And neither Congress nor the president has communicated to the general public that the one safety factor, the refuge in the home, is no longer protected under law, and that the state may be ordered to take title to the property if and when the person in a nursing home qualifies for Medicaid."

Mature adults should consider quickly and carefully their financial prospects should a nursing home stay become necessary. The options include purchasing nursing home (long-term care) insurance or, perhaps, using the legal steps recommended by Budish in an updated video, "What, Me Worry About Nursing Home Costs?"

The video is available for $27.95 ($24.95, plus $3 shipping) from Thomas and Partners, 10 Bay

Street, Suite 3, Westport, CT 06880. Telephone number for information is (800) 424-9952.

NEWSLETTER FOR CAREGIVERS

Caring Ways is a new and cost-free periodic newsletter of American Source Books, a Colorado-based publisher specializing in aging-related books. The first issue includes articles on making family gatherings and holidays more enjoyable for older family members, how to avoid unnecessary expense and frustration when collecting caregiving information over the phone, and how working caregivers can reduce stress.

Planned for the second issue is a list of important toll-free telephone numbers for senior citizens, and features on hiring an in-home helper, and intergenerational activities. The newsletter will also include "Caring Way Yellow Pages," the first issue listing companies that sell adaptive devices to make daily living easier for the physically impaired or frail mature adult.

American Source Books are written and published to the special interests of caregivers, including younger adults caring for parents or grandparents, and senior citizens caring for a spouse, friend or relative.

Current titles include: "Caring for Your Aging Parents" by Kerri Smith, "Long Distance Caregiving" by Angela Heath, "Keeping Active" by Susan Walker, "Fast Facts for the 50-Plus Consumer" by Stephen Phillips, and "The Care Log."

Request your first copy of the Caring Ways newsletter by sending a stamped (52 cents) business-size (No. 10) return envelope with your request to: Caring Newsletter, American Source Books, P.O. Box 280353, Lakewood, CO 80228. Future editions of the newsletter will be sent free of charge.

FRAUD ALERT

Mature adults are targeted more than any other age group by con artists who bilk Americans out of $100 billion each year, according to Hubert H. Humphrey III, attorney general for the state of Minnesota and president of the National Association of Attorneys General.

Seven of the most troublesome types of fraud and the estimated loss by consumers include telemarketing and direct marketing, including mail order (estimated loss $10 to $40 billion); credit, including credit card fraud and credit "repair" ($3 billion); health ($50 to $60 billion); insurance (at least $20 billion); investment ($10 billion); home improvement and maintenance; and auto repair and sales.

New federal and state legislation has been introduced to increase penalties on fraud perpetrators when convicted, but the individual must be the first concerned and act to protect himself or herself.

Confused boyfriend

Dr. Abraham: Do you think it is possible for a girl to dress manlike and also be so darned sweet that I'm really mixed up about her?

When I'm alone with her she is about as feminine as a girl can be, and I could love her to pieces. But when we are out with other guys and girls she is the only girl who wears the mannish clothes, you know, with a shirt, tie, pants and all that.

It doesn't really bother me, but I'm curious how a person can look and sometimes seem to act so different in the same body. It isn't important because when we are alone, I know how she is and that suits me fine.

Tell me what you think though. I'll be interested. — Contented Guy

Contented Guy: The way you signed your letter really provides the answer related to this situation.

All guys should be so lucky. Try to relax and enjoy your relationship.

Dr. Abraham: I'm the only kid in the family, but I don't think my folks treat me right.

We have a nice three-bedroom house.

My parents use one bedroom, my dad uses another, where he does most of his accounting work and I get the third one.

Does that sound OK to you? Well, it shouldn't because the first two are big with great views of a park across the street. The third one, mine, is like a dark cubbyhole with a view of a beat-up old tree and the ugly house of our neighbors.

I don't think it is fair because my dad never even looks out the window of his working room, so why can't we trade, his and mine?

I think that makes sense. Don't you? — Not Fair

Not Fair: I don't blame you for wanting the view and the space, but there is one factor I think of that maybe hasn't occurred to you.

Accountants generally need space, lots of it, for working and files. They often have to spread out papers and equipment, and your room may not be adequate for your dad.

You might want to consider something else, too. Lots of kids don't have a bedroom of their own. Sharing one, sleeping on a couch or other makeshift arrangements are more common than you may believe. You might be luckier than many other teens are on this issue.

Dr. Abraham: One of my teachers brought up an idea that I'd like to run by you, to see whether it makes any sense and is worth the time that may be involved.

She thinks that I'm pretty smart, but feels that I'm not interested enough in the future. I'd buy that, but what's the hurry? I think I'm having a good life right now and there is no need to rush into the future.

Her gimmick is kind of interesting though. She talks about the "3 A's" of ability, achievement and aspiration. She tells me that I'm doing more than OK with the first two (I have the smarts and get good grades), but that third one, which is so high with her, doesn't appeal to me.

Am I missing something? You tell me. — Happy Guy

Happy Guy: You have a good point being satisfied with your first two A's as part of your present, but she is also in the ballpark with her emphasis on No. 3, the aspirations a person might have in mind for the future.

It may not be necessary for you to hang into the future with full force. There is time for that, but I hope you will think about making an appointment to see your school counselor and talk over this matter. You may decide on a compromise that involves looking ahead but not messing up your happy present.

It's certainly possible.

Dr. Abraham: My boyfriend is a guy who has kept his hair long for the two years I've known him. It bothered me at first, but now I take it for granted. And why not? He is a peach of a friend who is smart, loving, funny and so darned sweet.

Two girls I know don't know him as I do, and they often make cutting remarks about his hair, sometimes right in front of him. He ignores them, and I bite my teeth hard to keep from telling them what for.

They never stop their mean-spirited comments about him, and I just can't stand it anymore.

I really could use your advice. May I have it please? — Boiling Mad

Boiling Mad: I thought the attitude shown by those two girls related to your boyfriend's hair preference had been long gone, but apparently not.

I'd like to ask you a question: Why do you continue putting up with those girls' insulting remarks? Perhaps you have fallen into the habit of accepting their comments, but obviously you're now going over the edge.

I imagine you like and enjoy him much more than you like being with them. If that's true, it may be time for saying bye-bye to them. I'm just sorry you didn't say it sometime ago and saved yourself the emotional grief you had to endure.

FOR TEENS

By Charles Britton

Countless ages ago in a Mexican rain forest, a proto-gourmet followed a particularly seductive aroma to its source in the seed pods of a climbing orchid and thus became the first devotee of methoxy-parahydroxy-benzaldehyde — vanillin, for short.

In other words, people had discovered vanilla beans.

The flavor has been winning converts ever since.

"I think there's an inborn preference for vanilla in nearly 100 percent of the human race," said vanilla merchant Raymond Lochhead, whose Paso Robles, Calif., company makes extract for sale under other labels. "I never met anyone who didn't like it."

Lochhead described himself as "in vanilla" all his life. His father founded the family company 75 years ago, and now the firm has vanilla plantations in Fiji and Tonga and processing facilities in Bali.

The flavoring is a fixture of the kitchen shelf, and it shows up in a great number of dishes. It's the first choice for desserts made with milk or cream. Vanilla also is excellent with most fruits, and is often paired with chocolate, a crop that originated in the same region of Mexico. A great deal goes into beverages, particularly, so it is said, the secret formula for Coca-Cola. Some chefs have experimented with using vanilla in main dishes, with dubious results.

The vanilla orchid has spread to many of the tropic regions of the world. "Bourbon vanilla" has a certain cachet, but the designation means only that it comes from the islands of the western Indian Ocean. The name derives from Reunion Island, once known as the Ile de Bourbon.

Juan San Mames, a vanilla importer in San Francisco, said the origin of a given batch of vanilla beans doesn't matter all that much: "Oh, people say, 'These are Bourbon,' 'These are Indonesian,' and so on, but it doesn't work that way. The important thing is how the beans were handled. Did they mature on the vine or not? The curing and selection are critical."

Vanilla orchid vines, which can grow as long as 35 feet, twine around trees for support and gain nourishment from dirt and litter trapped in the clefts of branches. The flowers are small but "fairly attractive," Lochhead said, "greenish white with a yellow tinted cup."

The value of the plant comes from the long, narrow beans and particularly from the myriad tiny seeds, which carry most of the principal flavor constituent, vanillin (accent on the first syllable).

The production of vanilla beans is a painstaking process.

"No people who produce vanilla are able to use it themselves. It's too expensive," said Lochhead. "If it were made by American labor, no one could afford it."

In their original Mexican forests, vanilla vines have evolved with a certain insect and a species of bird that visit the flowers and bring about pollination. This is done by hand in most commercial operations. Then, for best flavor, the pods have to be picked when fully mature, just before they split open, a process that requires workers to go over the vines repeatedly.

A newly picked vanilla bean has none of the expected taste or aroma. The vanillin is held in a chemical bond that breaks down during a painstaking process of curing, resulting in the treasured flavor. This will happen naturally in the wild, though very slowly, which is how vanilla was discovered to begin with.

The aroma can be detected as far as half a mile away, Lochhead said: "Just follow your nose. The plant is not secretive at all."

The vanilla trade has its sedate aspects — it's a stable business, Lochhead said — but some topics do stir up comment.

• Artificial vanilla. Demand for natural vanilla outstrips supply, and so scientists have come up with substitutes. Metamethoxy-parahydroxy-benzaldehyde can be extracted from other sources, usually byproducts of the wood-pulp industry, and it can be synthesized.

Science tells us that vanillin is vanillin, however derived. But it doesn't take an expert to tell the difference from the natural item.

"I've found in many tests," Lochhead said, "that people do prefer pure vanilla almost 100 percent of the time."

The apparent reason is that the vanilla bean contains more than straight vanillin. Researchers have found 177 chemical compounds in the extract, and these evidently contribute a subtlety and complexity to the natural product.

Artificial vanilla is cheaper than the real thing, and many cooks use it, especially when it is not the primary flavoring agent in a dish.

• Mexican vanilla. Although Mexican vanilla beans are highly prized, extract from south of the border (as well as the Caribbean and South America) may well be adulterated with coumarin, an extract of the tonka bean that tastes very much like vanilla. Indeed, some people are said to prefer it.

The problem is that coumarin is at least mildly poisonous, and U.S. authorities prohibit it for human consumption.

• Tahitian vanilla. Vanilla from the island of Tahiti enjoys the glamour of the South Pacific, and because many American chefs make a point of using it, the beans have attracted a lot of attention, often selling for a premium.

But is it deserved? No, said San Mames.

Creative ways with leftovers

For the harried dinnertime chef, perhaps no timesaving technique makes more sense than that of making maximum use of leftovers — intentionally preparing more than you know you'll eat at one sitting so you have the makings of a second dinner easily at hand.

If your family doesn't mind eating the same meal twice in a given week, simply doubling a recipe and refrigerating the leftovers can be a solution.

If, however, your family mounts a mutiny at the mention of leftovers, you can instead rely on the creativity of using individual ingredients from the first meal as prepped ingredients for another meal or two — meals that bear little resemblance to the original.

This can be as simple as using leftover chili to create chili cheese dogs later in the week — just heat up the chili and spoon it over wieners and buns — or as elaborate as cooking a Pot Roast Dinner.

While the pot roast will take hours to simmer to readiness for the first meal, it will produce ample leftovers that can be simply warmed up to create meals in minutes later that week. One leftover option would be to thinly slice the beef and serve it up in barbecued beef sandwiches. Another would be to shred the beef and then simmer it with a can of diced green chilies, some thinly sliced onions and salsa to taste to make for a deliciously different filling for burritos.

A meal of pasta with meatballs can provide the fixings for two additional meals of "sneaky" leftovers. Combine extra cooked pasta with fresh vegetables and Italian dressing, then chill for a quick side salad. Make extra meatballs, and you can then slice the leftovers and slip them into bakery-fresh sour-dough bread rolls for made-in-a-minute meatball sandwiches.

An extremely versatile leftover option is that of boneless chicken breasts. Anytime you prepare chicken breasts in a recipe such as Garlic Chicken With Vegetables and Rice, cook twice as much as required for the recipe at hand, then freeze or refrigerate the remainder for use in any number of recipes that call for cubed, stripped or shredded cooked chicken — such as Taco Salad With Salsa Dressing.

GARLIC CHICKEN WITH VEGETABLES AND RICE

- 1 (7-ounce) box instant white rice
- 1 cup sour cream
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons milk
- 3 tablespoons Dijon mustard

- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 6 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 1 cup broccoli florets
- 1 red bell pepper, cut into ¼-inch strips

Yields 6 servings.

Preparation time: 45 minutes.

Prepare rice according to package directions; set aside.

Meanwhile, in small bowl stir together sour cream, salt, pepper, milk, mustard and garlic; set aside. Place chicken breasts on lightly greased broiler pan. Use ¼ cup sour cream mixture to brush both sides of each breast. (If desired, cook additional chicken breast halves, without seasoning, for future use in recipes that call for cooked chicken.)

Broil chicken 5 to 6 inches from heat until tender, about 25 to 30 minutes, turning halfway through cooking time.

Meanwhile, melt margarine in 10-inch skillet. Add broccoli and pepper strips. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until tender-crisp, about 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in rice and remaining sour cream mixture. Continue cooking 1 to 2 minutes or until heated through.

To serve, top rice mixture with chicken breasts.

TACO SALAD WITH SALSA DRESSING

For dressing:

- 1 cup sour cream
- 1 cup salsa
- 1 tablespoon taco seasoning mix

For salad:

- 4 cooked chicken breast halves, cut into strips
- 1 tablespoon taco seasoning mix
- 1 head lettuce, shredded
- 1 (15-ounce) can black beans, rinsed and drained
- ½ cup sliced green onions
- 12 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Yields 6 servings.

Preparation time: 25 minutes.

In medium bowl, stir together all dressing ingredients. Cover; refrigerate until ready to serve.

In large plastic food bag, place chicken strips and 1 tablespoon taco seasoning mix; tightly seal bag. Shake to coat chicken.

To assemble salad, divide lettuce among 6 salad bowls. Place about ½ cup chicken on lettuce in each bowl; top with about ¼ cup black beans, 1 tablespoon green onion, 4 tomato halves and 2 tablespoons shredded cheese. Serve immediately with dressing.

Points on Pets

By R.G. Elmore, D.V.M.

Many owners grieve loss of animal companions

Q. Our 16-year-old golden retriever recently died because of congestive heart failure. Everyone in our family has been depressed. Is it normal to grieve the loss of a dog? Some of our friends believe that we are acting abnormally.

A. It is normal for people to experience intense grief following the death of a beloved pet. In most situations the death of a pet severs a strong relationship.

Grieving often includes a loneliness, the urge to cry, feelings of shock, loss of appetite and inability to sleep. Sometimes these symptoms last for only a short period of time. However, other individuals grieve for weeks.

Many methods to lessen or overcome intense grief following the death of pets have been advocated by grief experts. Talking about the pet's death openly is extremely important. Each family member should feel free to express their sense of loss.

Parents should answer children's questions regarding their pet's death. Generally, the death of a pet should not be hidden from a child. They need to know the truth regarding their companion. Children need to express their feelings to understanding adults. It is sometimes helpful if the child actually participates in the burial of a pet.

Many veterinarians are trained to help their clients overcome the grief following the loss of their pets. You should not hesitate to talk to your veterinarian about this loss. If your veterinarian is not comfortable in counseling you, he can refer you to a grief counselor.

JUNIOR EDITION

Aunt Tilly's Corner

Last night I put up my Christmas tree. I think this is the prettiest tree ever, but the children remind me that I say that every year about the tree!

The most fun, I find, is going through the boxes of ornaments. There are some that date back to a quarter of a century. Others are very special because the children made them when they were very young. We bought some when we were on vacation. They remind me of the good time we had. One set I especially like were made by grandma. They depict the figures from "Nutcracker." Each are elaborately done in sequins, beads and ribbons.

So my Christmas tree is a scrapbook of good memories. I still say "It is the prettiest tree ever!"

'Carriers' handle Medicare claims and payments

Q. Who processes Medicare claims and payments? C.E.

A. Medicare claims and payments are handled by insurance organizations under contract to the federal government. The organizations handling claims from hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies and hospices are called "carriers."

The names and addresses of the carriers and areas they serve are listed in the back of The Medicare Handbook, available by calling Social Security's toll-free number, (800) 772-1213, weekdays from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Q. How much will I be able to make and still receive my Social Security checks in 1994? - L.T.

A. The maximum amount of money that beneficiaries between the ages of 65 and 69 can earn in 1994 without reducing the amount of their Social Security benefits is $11,160. In 1993, the limit was $10,560.

For every $3 a person earns over $11,160, $1 is withheld from his or her benefit.

For people under age 65, the limit will be $8,040 in 1994, up from $7,680 in 1993. For every $2 a person under 65 earns over $8,040, $1 is withheld from benefits.

The benefits of people age 70 or older who continue to work are not affected, no matter how much they earn.

Q. I heard that the federal Supplemental Security Income payment will increase in 1994. How much will it be? - L.A.

A. SSI beneficiaries will receive a 2.6 percent raise in their benefits for 1994. The increase will appear in the checks received on Dec. 30, 1993.

The maximum federal SSI monthly payment for one person will be $446 in 1994, up from $434 in 1993. For a couple, the maximum monthly amount will increase from $652 to $669 in 1994.

Since some states add money to the federal benefit, total payment amounts will vary from one state to another.

Q. How much do I need to make in 1994 to earn one Social Security credit? - L.T.

A. The amount of wages needed to earn one Social Security credit will be $620 in 1994, up from $590 in 1993. The maximum number of credits that can be earned each year is four.

Thus, anyone earning more than $2,480 in 1994 will receive the maximum of four credits for the year. To be eligible for Social Security benefits, a worker needs a specific number of credits. The number depends on his or her date of birth and the type of benefit involved.

Most people need 40 credits to be eligible for retirement benefits, but some younger people qualify for disability and survivor's benefits with as few as six credits.
